Has The World Changed Dorothy Dix

The Sun May Still Rise in the East and Set in the West, But No One Can Deny That the World Itself Has Changed, What With Science and the Modern Woman and Parents Who Obey Their Children

A man writes: "You say the world has changed. What has changed? I see nothing has changed. The sun still rises in the east and sets in the west. Water runs down hill and smoke goes up just as it always has done. Men attract women and women attract men, just as Adam and Eve were attracted to each other in the Garden of Eden. Boys and girls fall in love now just as they did hundreds of years ago. Children are born in the same old way. So I ask you: What has changed?"

Of course when I said that the world has changed I meant it only in a manner of speaking and writing now in a calm frame of mind I'll take of a few million alterations. Still, even the physical world has changed. Even in recent times nature has blown of a few volcanoes and changed the courses of rivers and earthquakes have shaken down mountains, and man has cut continents in twain and made lakes where none were before, and constructed new islands and made lakes where bloom like the rose. Also climates have changed, and if some of our prehistoric ancestors who used to disport themselves in the tropical jungles in Alaska and thereabouts should return they would find that the winters were a deal colder than they used to be.

Why, it is almost as hard for us to realize what the world was like even in our grandfather's time as it is for us to picture what it was before the flood. Why, only the other day a little flapper asked me what girls did when I was young, and when I told her that our "dates" only we called them beaux then, came and took us to church on Sunday night and that when they called we spent the evening in talk and singing songs and making fudge or popping corn and that it was a great event when we were invited to a ball, and that we felt very adventurous when we went buggy riding with a boy and that girls stayed at home and helped mother instead of going into business, she almost wept with sympathy.

"What!" she cried, "no night clubs, no going out anywhere to dinner and to dance, no automobiles, no moving pictures, just having to sit and talk to a boy all evening, what a terrible time you must have had. How thankful I am that everything has changed."

Of course, men are men and women are women, just as they were in the beginning, but while the modern woman may take after her great-grandmother Eve in looks and figure and have on just a few fig leaves, that's about all. The inner woman is totally different, and it is folly to deny that the emancipated woman of today, with her vote in one hand and her pocketbook in the other and her ability to stand on her own feet and hold down a good job, hasn't changed from the meek, downtrodden, helpless, clinging-vine female of the past.

Certainly, men and women are attracted to each other just as they have always been. There is nothing new in sex appeal. And they still

REMODELING THE NOSE

Are you satisfied with the shape of your nose? If you are, you have great cause for thankfulness. Judging from the dozens of letters from readers who want something done about the size or shape of their noses it seems that few are pleased with this feature. "My complexion is lovely," writes one young lady, "and several times I have overheard acquaintances remark that I am good-looking, but some one who hears it will be sure to say, 'She would be if it wasn't for her nose.'"

As we have all been guilty of thinking this thing either about some one else's nose or perhaps about our own, we know how to sympathize when this young lady continues, "Oh Miss Leeds is there anything I can do to change a flat, stubby nose into a good-looking one?" And now let's see what can be done about these noses which cause their owners so much distress. If the nose is actually so badly shaped that it amounts to a deformity, there is obviously no home treatment which will help a great deal. But I believe that few of my readers need to have their noses remodeled completely. Not all of us can afford to have an operation to alter the shape of the nose, so let's see what there is to be done about it. In the first place there are many diseases which affect the shape of the nose. Many a mother has seen her child's nose change from a slender, classic one to a nose with wide, coarse nostrils. Such damages are caused by an obstruction in the nasal passages, the throat or the sinuses. Any difficulty in breathing should be treated by a physician at once, as such defects will not only ruin the shape of the nose, but will undermine the most vigorous constitution.

But if the trouble seems to be only a badly shaped nose, without predisposing to disease, something can be done at home to improve it. Since the end of this feature is composed of cartilage and muscles it can be molded by massage. There are also nose supports which may be worn at night and which are sometimes helpful in molding the tip of the nose along shapely lines. To massage the nose, place the first and second fingers on the bridge and gently knead the flesh with the thumb of the same hand. There are many whose noses are fleshy, a defect which will give a coarse appearance to a face which might otherwise be quite attractive. To reduce a fleshy nose give it a rotary pinching massage between thumb and forefinger. This movement will also help those whose noses have a tendency to spread at the tip.

WHO ARE YOU?

The Romance of Your Name

By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

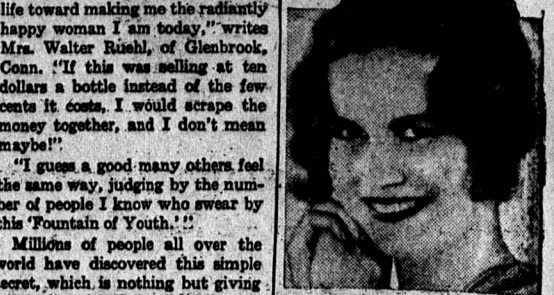

Gall

The Galls are commonly supposed to have had their origin in Denmark, as the earliest records of the family indicate. Members of the family went from Denmark to Scotland and Ireland, and it is from them that the American Galls are descended. One of the oldest and most powerful of Denmark's families is that of Gall. The armorial bearings are to be found in the oldest cathedrals of that country, and there are twenty-six estates there that have been owned and occupied by branches of this family. The first of the name was Herr Morgens Lageson Gall, who was knighted in 1397. He was buried in the Cathedral of Roskilde. His grandson, Herr Morgens Ebbeson Gall, of Threstrup, was also knighted and was made Governor of two powerful castles, Aalholm and Kolding. He died in the later part of the fifteenth century.

The younger branch of the family became extinct in 1898 with the death of Knud Henrik Gall, of Viumgaard, the last man of the family, and the descendants of the oldest branch have perpetuated the name and used the arms of the family to this day. Among prominent persons today of the Gall clan is Herbert Randolph Gall, editor of St. Paul, Minn. Electric hammers for tamping stone are being tested on London pavements. Iceland supplied the world with $8,690,000 worth of prepared fish last year.

Finds Youth's Fountain

"JUST one thing has contributed more than anything else in my life toward making me the radiantly happy woman I am today," writes Mrs. Walter Rishel, of Glenbrook, Conn. "If this was selling at ten dollars a bottle instead of the few cents it costs, I would scrape the money together, and I don't mean maybe!"

Millions of people all over the world have discovered this simple secret, which is nothing but giving our bodies the internal lubrication that they need, as much as any machine. After you have taken Nujol for a few days, and have proved to yourself how it brightens your whole life, you will wonder how so simple a treatment can make such a great change in your health and your happiness. The reason is this: Regularly as clock work, Nujol clears out of our bodies those poisons (we all have them) which slow us up, make us headachy, low in our minds. Colorless and tasteless as pure water, Nujol cannot hurt you, no matter how long you take it. It is not a medicine. It contains no drugs. It forms no habit. It is non-fattening. Try Nujol yourself and see how much better you feel. Get a bottle in its sealed package at any drug store and be sure it's trademarked "Nujol." It costs but a few cents—and it makes you feel like a million dollars! Start taking Nujol this very night!

Cooking Peas Instead of shelling the peas, wash the pods and place them in the boiling water to cook. The pods will open and the peas settle to the bottom of the vessel. Merely skim off the pods. Sore Lips For sore lips, mix and apply this solution: 1 ounce of glycerine, 1 dram of borax, and 1 pint of water. The Refrigerator If the refrigerator lining leaks, pour hot paraffin over the holes.
