DENTAL WHITENESS

Don't you admire the way a dentist cleans your teeth so white? That's real dental whiteness; and he relies on powder. For unless dull, dingy film is removed, it hardens—darkens—turns into harmful, ugly tartar. But Pepsodent Tooth Powder is especially made with Irium to safely remove that trouble-causing film... right in your own home. Change today to Pepsodent Tooth Powder for dental whiteness!

The difference is IRIUM—and
PEPSODENT IS THE ONLY TOOTH POWDER THAT CONTAINS IRIUM

On Serenading Cats

(By "Uncle Joe")
"Why are you so down in the lip this morning? I asked my old friend Silas Skinner.
"Well, Joe, I had a mortal bad night I had, and it's all on account of those infernal cats. Yes, squire, Uncle Joe, cats can give a feller the jitters and pile his nerves on top of each other till ye don't know which way to turn for relief."

"But I thought you liked the creatures, Silas, eh?" "I likes 'em well enough Uncle Joe, when it's day but at night when they get to serenading under a fella's window, it's a loss of another color. They may be good insurance 'gainst rats and mice, make ideal daytime pets, purring about one's legs till you wouldn't think butter would melt in their mouths, but at night they can change as sudden as the wind and become a band of devils of the worst type. That's the way cats are, Uncle Joe. Make no mistake about that. The critters are A.W.L. more than half the time and when they're A.W.L. there's the devil to pay in somebody's back alley and the neighbors are sure to be in for a sleepless night.

Trying to reform 'em is about as easy as keeping an itchy footed husband at home. When you think you've got 'em eating out of yer hand and behaving natural like they suddenly break out again like a festering finger and you have to go through the whole process of reforming all over. It's the nature of the beasts. Like a lotta folks that you and I knows, cats can be plian full of wickedness.

But to get back to my story. What a night it was! First, there was a series of low cat calls which grew fiercer and louder as the minutes passed. More and more of the critters joined in the din and soon the whole neighborhood echoed and reechoed to their hisses, snarls and spitting in each other's faces.

I looked at my watch. It was exactly 12 o'clock. I had just slept one hour, and a big day lay ahead of me at the office.

"Scat, you devils!" I roared at the top of my lungs. The little woman stirred beside me. How I wished for her gift of sleeping. Some folks I am sure will never hear the crack of doom.

But they didn't scat, hadn't any notion of scattering. Cats don't scat easy, Uncle Joe, do they?"

"I reckon you're right, Silas," I said, "but what did you do next?"
"Well, Uncle Joe, I up and tossed the alarm clock out the window and then let drive with both shoes and the wife's glass eye, hoping I'd be lucky enough to bluff at least one or two of 'em in the chin. But no luck. There was a moment's silence and the shindy started up worse than ever. "Do you hear 'em?"

I shouted in the wife's sleeping ear. "Why they're actually mocking me. That's what the infernal critters are doing—mocking me!"
"Serves you right," countered the half awake missus. "You're always catering to every cat about the place, feeding them tid-bits and making them feel at home."

The next thing I know I was down stairs holding the 12 gauge shotgun in my hand and pointing it in the general direction of the serenaders.

"Bang! The gun spoke cut so loud the whole place seemed to shiver from the shock. Then I turned on the spot light expecting to see at least a dozen of the enemy laid out cold and still. But do you believe me, Uncle Joe, there wasn't a single animal in sight dead or alive. No squire, not a single critter could I slay an eye on. By some strange slight of power, they had vanished. "Reckon you got them all," said the wife as I climbed back into bed.

"You bet!" I answered. "We'll get some sleep now". About two hours later the missus pulled my ear and laughed into it. "Your dead cats are coming to life, Silas."

When the wife called me to breakfast I had just finished leveling off a sizeable patch of garden. "Poor dear," said she when she saw my soiled hands. "Just fancy my thinking you were joking last night!" "That's okay, honey, the neighbors might talk, so I put 'em under." — Uncle Joe.

Not many feminine figures are to be seen on the streets in the Village by the Sea these days unless on a hurried excursion to one or other of the neighboring houses where hooking bees and parties are quite the order of the day and believe it or not some of the real energetic ones have already turned out as many as two rugs and have more in the making.

The Busy Bees Mission Band met for their regular monthly meeting in the school room. In the absence of the Band leader Mrs. Allison Lea, the meeting was taken over by Mrs. Fred Inman and Miss Freda Howatt. Meeting opened with the Members' Purpose in unison, followed by the singing of Hymn No. 613, "Jesus Bids Us Shine." Miss Joyce MacDonald read the Scripture lesson, taken from Luke, Chapter 18, verses 15-17, then all repeated the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll was then called and minutes of last meeting read and approved. Hymn, "I Am So Glad That Our Father In Heaven," was sung and then a very interesting chapter from the Study Book was given by Miss Freda Howatt. The closing hymn was "God Sees The Little Sparrow Fall," after which the repeating of the Mizpah Benediction brought the meeting to a close. A delicious treat of homemade candy was then passed around which was kindly donated by Miss Alba Boulter.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion, Victoria, have received the following letter from Mrs. R. Corrigan, Kinning Park, Glasgow, Scotland, showing her appreciation for a box of food-stuffs, containing canned goods, tea, sugar and lard, which the members had sent her. Following is her letter:

My dear Friends,—I would like to express my sincere thanks to all members of your Legion for the very welcome and surprise gift of food which you have so kindly sent to me and my family, and also for the kind thoughts of all concerned in the way they have extended a welcome hand to my daughter since she came to live among you. Believe me, it is very gratifying to me to know that my daughter is among real folk. I only hope that some day I may be able to repay you all in some way for your kindness to me and mine.

So with all hopes of success to you in all enterprises that you engage in in the future and with heartfelt thanks once again, I am, yours sincerely, Mrs. R. Corrigan. The daughter referred to in this letter is Mrs. Keith Boulter, Victoria, who came over here to join her husband after the war and who is very happily situated in our village, and who is much taken up with her Island home, its people and their mode of living.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mr. L. D. MacLeod, Victoria, and also to the other members of the family of the late Mrs. John J. MacLeod on the death of their beloved mother, Mrs. MacLeod was an esteemed Christian lady, noted for her kindness and hospitality in her home, and devotion to her family. She belonged to a sturdy race of Scottish pioneers and so herself possessed an unusually strong and vigorous body, enjoying all her long life the blessings of good health. She was a native of Hartsville but for the greater part of her happily married life she resided in Bonshaw, where with her genial partner, they reared a large family of sons and daughters who will rise up and call her blessed. Her neighbors and friends will also mourn the loss of one whose thoughts were at all times inspired with goodness and many there are in whose memory she will live on. For the past few years she had resided in Charlottetown with one of her daughters, Mrs. W. R.
