You've overloaded that tire— There's the trouble

UNDER-INFLATION plays havoc with tire mileage; overloading is just one degree worse.

Every size of tire is built to carry a certain load at a certain pressure. If overloaded or under-inflated its side-walls break down and its mileage is cut far below what was built into it.

For the sake of economy weigh your trucks when loaded, weigh the rear end separately, and have a tire expert specify the correct size of tire for that load.

Then keep your load within the rating of the tire and be careful that loads which project over the rear wheels do not place too much weight on the rear tires.

A weekly trip to a tire service station for a thorough tire inspection will pay good dividends in reduced tire costs.

"Usconite" the most important development in years in heavy service pneumatic tire construction

For years tire engineers have tried to find a way to offset the effects of heat accumulation in pneumatic truck tires.

Now the Dominion Rubber Company have developed a rubber compound — "Usconite" — which minimizes this destructive element.

It maintains its tenacious characteristics under high temperatures. It has a strong affinity for cotton, making the plies hold firmly together. Yet, it permits great freedom of movement in the carcass. Only Dominion use "Usconite".

Note the ribbed wall construction which protects the side walls against wear and side-scuffing from curb or deep rut. "Usconite" offsets the effects of heat accumulation. Read about it in the paragraph at the left.
