St. GEORGE'S DAY.—Sunday next, April 23rd, is St. George's Day. Englishmen should remember this and observe it in royal style. At the present time there is a tendency for St. George's Day to pass without observation. The Irish and Scotch are ever ready to keep their patron saint's day with fitting ceremony and why should the English be one bit behind? It must be said that as a people they are singularly lacking in reverence for the great names connected with their history. "Hero worship does not thrive, apparently on English soil." At present only a tepid patriotic fervour exists and with all due respect to England's patron saint a little more sentiment ought to be aroused. The bells of St. Paul's, London, ring out on this day, why cannot the loyal sons of England try for some such slight observance here? Com.

At the Seed Fair yesterday forenoon classes in grain judging were conducted by Mr. Broderick who followed with an address on the productive capacity of seed. In the afternoon the special prize competitions were conducted and resulted as follows:
