THE PEOPLE'S THEATRE

Seldom, if ever, has a more interesting and exciting picture been shown on the screen of the People's Theatre than the second episode of the "Perils of Pauline," which was shown last night for the first time. Hundreds went away proclaiming its merits, as it sure is full of mystery, the question to be answered in last night's installment being, What did Owen write? and ends with, What is going to happen Pauline? In this number is found Owen, the late secretary, trying to find a means of ridding himself of Pauline, in order that he might secure the money that has been left in his care for Pauline, provided she fulfilled a condition of the will.

He sees by one of the newspapers that a big aviation meet will be held, and the idea strikes him it would be a splendid opportunity to get Pauline to go as a passenger in the machine, provided he can reach the machine beforehand and make it unsafe. This he does in the early morning, but Harry has already decided that Pauline shall not fly, and succeeds in putting the autos out of business, and while his plan in holding back Pauline does not succeed, Harry gains his point in as much as the aviator makes the ascent without her and shortly afterwards the spectators are terror-stricken by the machine falling to earth and its pilot killed.

This stunt is daring in the extreme, and those who appreciate these taking your life in your hands stunts should surely see this wonderful serial at the People's every Friday and Saturday.

The other pictures on the program were decidedly interesting and added variety to splendid program.

SECOND MATINEE HORSE RACES

The second matinee horse races, under the management of the Charlottetown Driving Club, promise to be the most interesting held on the local track for some time. The Class A has for its starters four of the fastest horses ever brought together on the island, and now that they are all up to a hard race we may look to see one from start to finish. The B trot has as promising bunch of trotters as could be found on any Maritime track, nearly all of which are staked for our big Fall racing. Probably the most talked of race is the B pace, as the horses are very evenly matched and have trialed so far this season at about the same "clip." The biggest entry is in the C trot and pace, and this race alone will be well worth the price of admission. The pony race,

PERSONALS

The first of its kind seen here, will be a half-mile trot or pace, and apart from it interesting to the children so much, is looked for by the horsemen as a very close race, the speed of the ponies being about equal. The prizes are very liberal for these races, a valuable stop watch for first prize, seven bushels of oats for second, and a third prize of different articles. Special prizes have been arranged for the pony class. The races begin at two o'clock sharp and the starter will not wait for any horse if he is not ready at that hour. The officials will be as follows:—Starter, Mr P. S. Brown; Judges, Messrs F. W. Hughes, R. J. Steele and H. Kelly; Timers,

Messrs P. H. McMahan and C. E. Thorne, Secretary.
