THE HOUSEWIFE AND HER ACTIVITIES

HER BONNET.

She wanted a hat but she hadn't the money. So she made it herself, and it sure was a honey; Two colanders set with the bottoms together.

With the flares top and bottom, and capped by a feather, A ribbon as yellow as newly-made butter.

She tied round the middle with streamers to flutter, And proud of her work, she proceeded to don it, And every one envied her stylish new bonnet.

LEDGE FOR FLOWER POTS

If you have a window ledge which is always used to hold flower pots you would be wise to cement attractive linoleum over it and place the pots on this washable, strong surface.

CANDLE TO THE RESCUE

If the drawers of the bureau or dresser are difficult to open due to sticking, rub a tallow candle along the inside edge. This will be found much better than the usual soap, as soap eventually hardens and proves more difficult than ever, while the tallow will stay soft and continue to do its work.

EYE WRINKLES

Gentle massage and a good night cream are the answer to eye wrinkle problems. When you have cleansed face and throat at night, smooth on a layer of one of the rich so-called nourishing creams.

A PAPER PLATE

Put a cardboard plate underneath the can of paint before starting in on the job. The plate will catch all drippings and give you a place to put your brush when moving from one place to another.

GUEST ROOM HANGERS

Even if you do not have time to cover all the hangers in your closet, see that the guest room closet is equipped with a half-dozen velvet-covered hangers, corresponding in tone to the decorations of the room.

FOR THE NURSERY

The walls in the play room or nursery should be painted to be thoroughly practical. Then little fingerprints can be washed off easily and the room will always look clean.

OUTDOOR BRASS

Brass that is exposed to the elements is always hard to keep shining and bright. It will stay bright longer if rubbed with paraffin after cleaning and then polished with a clean cloth.

POUCH TRIPLET

An extremely novel handbag idea, originated by Maggie Rouff of Paris, has should be added after the tea has been poured.

WHICH COMES FIRST — THE MILK OR THE TEA?

Until a recent controversy started in English newspapers many tea habits were without explanation. Like so many other things English a thing was "done" or "not done"—and that was that.

Now, a correspondent who favors following the tea with the milk offers what seems to be a sound reason. She reasons that when the milk is put in first it is slightly cooled by the hot tea and thus may impair the fine flavor of the beverage.

Poor Boy Rich Girl; What Happens? Dorothy Dix Love Doesn't Run Smoothly

Rare, indeed, is a Marriage Successful When the Girl Has Money and the Boy Only His Career as an Asset. So, Young Man, Don't be a Male Gold-Digger

Heaven knows marriage is full enough of complications for all who have the hardihood to enter into the holy estate, but it never presents so many insoluble problems to

Such being the case, we are not concerned in this discussion with the parasitic men who sell themselves for a living or the silly women who buy them, but with the honest-hearted girls and boys who meet and fall in love with each other and marry without a thought of the wife being rich and the husband poor making any difference, and then find that the wife's romance is her money.

Take the case—and there are thousands of them—of a fine, intelligent, upstanding youth who has just got a start in his business or profession. He is talented and ambitious and knows it is in him to go far. He is proud that he has made his way for himself and that he can stand on his own feet.

Then on some unlucky day he encounters a glamorous young creature who is all that he has ever imagined his Dream Girl would be. She is equally swept off her feet by him, and the only obstacle in the path of their romance is her money.

And so they are married and for a while little Mrs. Poorman (nee Millionbucks) has a grand time playing living on her husband's shoe-string salary. Then she tires of the game and wants to go back to the luxuries to which she has been accustomed.

Why should they live in a stuffy little house when they can afford a palace? Why shouldn't John relinquish the measly business he has built up for himself and let Papa give him a place in the bank?

Yet the rich wife has some justification on her part. For why should she be denied the things she wants and that she has the money to pay for just to save her husband's pride? It doesn't make sense to ride in a flyover when you have a limousine standing idle in the garage.

So there the poor husband of the rich wife is confronted with the choice of being either a dog in the manger or a lap dog and knowing there will be happiness for him in neither decision.

THE DIONNE QUINS GIVE YOU THEIR "BEAUTY SECRET"

WE MUST USE THE MOST SOOTHING SOAP DR. DAFEO SAID ONLY PALMOLIVE

"When we were tiny babies, Dr. Dafoe bathed us only with Olive Oil. Later, when we were ready for soap and water baths, he chose the soap made from the most soothing ingredients."

"Doesn't it just stand to reason, that if Palmolive is so safe for your tender skin, it is safe for your face, too? Well, anyway, our advice is, use only Palmolive, the soap made with Olive Oil."

"Beauty experts say, 'Use Palmolive Soap regularly.' For Palmolive is made from a blend of real beauty ingredients of real Olive and Palm oils, soothing Olive and Palm oils. That's why Palmolive is gentle, rather keeps your complexion soft, smooth, young!"

Why DR. DAFEO CHOSE PALMOLIVE Because the Quins were born prematurely their skin has always required very special care.

TRUE BY THE SUN

By LIDA LARRIMORE

Possibly, Jim said, amused at her ingenuity, a little appalled by the task she was setting for him the task she was setting for him. But why do you ask me to make the suggestion?

Who else could I ask? Parker, I suppose, or Aunt Alicia or Morah? Besides, she continued rapidly, if you're working with Father to break up my friendship with Jerry, you can do it easily. Father will think it's a clever device. He'll probably raise your salary.

I know, she laughed. I've known it for some time. It was only just at first that I thought Father had hired you to spy on me I was too upset and unhappy, then, that I could have imagined anything. But you can do this for me. You have a way with you. Jim Will you do it, Jim?

Perhaps, he replied. If it's possible. If there is an opportunity. He sat erect behind the wheel. Have you any idea how long we've been talking?

Hours! Cecily's laugh was gay and friendly. You've been very patient and polite. Is that really daylight? Is it morning?

It is. The roosters and about to crow. Cecily was out of the roadster before he could open the door. Thank you. She stood beside him for a moment. In the pale gray light her face was weary but peaceful. I can't tell you how grateful I am.

Good-night. Jim's voice was brusque. Good-night. For a moment her hand lay on his arm in a friendly intimate gesture. For a moment he breathed the spring-like fragrance of the perfume she used. For a moment there was between them mutual understanding and respect, friendliness and something more disturbing. Jim was aware of it. Did she feel it, too? He wasn't sure. When she spoke again, her voice was gentle, a little drowsy, soft as a caress.

I am grateful, Jim, she said. It's nice to have found a friend. Good-night—good-morning. Jim stood beside the sedan waiting for Mr. Vaughn, who was strolling about the lawn with MacPherson discussing the planting to be done in the fall. It was a murky August morning, likely to be hot when the sun burned through the mist. Jim hoped that the expedition with Mr. Vaughn would not be a long one. Already he felt uncomfortable in the riding breeches and camel hair coat that he wore when he chauffeured the family. If he had accepted Lenore's invitation, he would be on Long Island today.

The station wagon careened around the turn in the drive that led from the garage. Tommy, at the wheel, was bound for his morning session with Mr. Jordan in the village. He saw Jim and came to a lurching stop, got out, walked over to the sedan.

Hey, Jim! he said in a cautious whisper. Have you got them yet? Them? Oh, yes. The letters Tommy had written. Dolly. Jim assumed a grave expression. Not yet, he said. Tommy's face clouded. Do you think she will make a fuss?

I don't know, Jim took the liberty of quoting Tommy. You know how women are. Tommy considered that for a moment in gloomy silence. Presently he said, If she should, what would you advise? I mean you've been to college and all. What would you do, Jim?

I've never been sued for breach of promise. Look here, old man. You've got me all wrong. But if you had, Tommy persisted. If you were me, what would you do?

Jim glanced away across the lawn. His lips were beginning to twitch into a smile.

Why DR. DAFEO CHOSE PALMOLIVE Because the Quins were born prematurely their skin has always required very special care.

"For some time after their birth, the Dionne Quintuplets were bathed with Olive Oil. When the time arrived for soap and water baths, we chose Palmolive Soap exclusively for bathing these famous babies."

board of the car, will you take me to Mary Lillian Patton's house or your way to wherever you're going? Hop in, her father invited. Susan looked at Jim. In form? she asked.

Why not? Mr. Vaughn opened the door. There's plenty of room. Susan settled herself between her father and Jim. The sedan rolled down the drive.

Somebody looks very nice this morning, Mr. Vaughn remarked. Don't you think so, Jim? "The carnation pink in Susan's face in the mirror attached to the windshield. It was as pink as a carnation under the brim of a leghorn hat."

Cecily had better watch out, Mr. Vaughn continued. Looks as though we may have another beauty in the family.

"The carnation pink in the small mirrored face deepened to rose. Susan folded her hands primly over a rubber bag in her lap. I've got my bathing suit, she said both shy and pleased. And a towel and some talcum powder."

It's a swimming party, is it? Mr. Vaughn asked in a conversational tone. Mary Lillian is having a birthday. Susan expanded in the agreeable and unaccustomed atmosphere of adult approbation. I've got a present for her. It's a book, she added.

I thought you didn't like Mary Lillian, her father continued. Didn't you hide in the barn the last time, she came to see you? I don't like her, Susan replied serenely. She's an awful baby and fraidy-cat. There's going to be a wedding at her house, though, next month in September. I thought I'd better be nice to Mary Lillian so that maybe I'd be invited.

Mr. Vaughn laughed. You're growing up, Susie. I'd rather be called Susie, she said, with dignity. Or Susan, either. My name is Sue. Here's the gate, Jim. I could have walked only I might have ruined my slippers.

Well, well, well! marvelled Mr. Vaughn. To Be Continued
