Unemployment Is Discussed By Liberal Leader

(Canadian Press)

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—Following is text in part of the address of Mackenzie King over a national network of the Canadian Radio Commission and independent stations.

The third and last of Mr. King's radio addresses dealt with unemployment and his party's policies to relieve what he believed to be Canada's most urgent national problem. He quoted Premier R.B. Bennett as promising in the 1930 election campaign to "end unemployment," to "provide work for Canadians, work, I said, not doles," and blaming governments for the unemployment of that time.

Since the Bennett Government came into office, Mr. King continued, unemployment had increased. He quoted figures to prove his statements and so "these figures may help you to appreciate why I may be a little more guarded in my promises, and not quite so ready to guarantee any strict action can be accomplished by Mr. Bennett, or Mr. Woodsworth, or Mr. Stevens."

Since 1930, no efforts had been made to determine the exact number of unemployed people in Canada, Mr. King continued, nothing in the way of a national register. "There are two explanations. One is that the Government has never appreciated the importance and magnitude of the problem. The other is that it has not known how to go about its solution. In order to conceal the growing magnitude of the problem, and at the same time, its growing impact, it has sought to obtain information which, at all times, should have been available to the people's representatives in Parliament, or it deliberately withheld such information as it had from them."

"Star of Midnight" is based on the serial story of the same name by the late Arthur Somers Roche, famous author of mystery fiction. Howard J. Green, Anthony Veiller and Edward Kaufman wrote the screen play.

By all means, put this picture down on the "must see" list. Unquestionably, it is one of the best of the year.

Dr. Watson appoints herself as his "Dr. Watson" and is drawn into the exciting events which follow. Complications mount swiftly, and the action moves to a suspense-charged climax.

"Anne" Shirley In "Chasing Yesterday" At Capitol

Anne Shirley, the brilliant girl who was so triumphant in "Anne of Green Gables," demonstrates her histrionic ability before the premier audience at the Capitol Theatre in "Chasing Yesterday." Anne Shirley is definitely entitled to the star billing, which Hollywood has given her in this picture.

And there's a great deal to be said about Miss Shirley's current vehicle. "Chasing Yesterday" takes its place at the top of the current crop of pictureizations of famous literary classics. This transmutation of a story by Anatole France retains its wholesome romance, friendship, drama and comedy. It becomes a rare balance of superlative acting and theme. Woven with laughter and pathos it results as a glorious entertainment.

In a tellingly convincing manner, "Chasing Yesterday" enacts its drama around the lives of a book collector and the orphan daughter of his first and only sweetheart. His search for "The Golden Legend," the first book printed in England, brings them together; and thereafter their careers are closely knitted together to battle all obstacles and win happiness. The collector finds his reward in furthering the romance that has sprung up between the girl and a young student.

The merits of "Chasing Yesterday" are almost legion. While Anne Shirley makes the heroine a forceful, fully vital figure, thrilling in all her dramatic moods and equally deft in fashioning smiles in the comedy scenes, O. P. Heggie and Helen Westley render faultless performances. Both veteran players, who were seen recently in "Anne of Green Gables," are sympathetic, convincing and brilliant in their respective roles as the book collector and his grumpy housekeeper.

Nor is the supporting cast without its recommendations. Elizabeth Girardot, Doris Lloyd, Trent Durkin and Hilda Vaughn all share in the plaudits.

FOOD FUN

CHILDREN like Kellogg's Rice Krispies for three reasons. First, they're so delicious and crisp. Second, they snap, crackle and pop in milk or cream. And third, there's a Mother Goose story on the back of every package.

Rice Krispies are full of nourishment, yet small stomachs can digest them easily. Ideal for the nursery supper.

World Appoint Commission

"To cope with this nationwide situation, the Liberal Party proposes, if returned to power, to adopt the policies, which it has consistently advocated, and which are set forth in the paragraph that appears as the first item in the statement of the party's position, which I read to you on Friday evening last. Let me read that paragraph to you again. You will recall that the statement was first given publicly after it was made in the House of Commons on Feb. 27, 1935. The paragraph is as follows: "Unemployment of first concern."

"The Liberal Party believes unemployment is Canada's most urgent national problem. It would deal with the present emergency conditions through a representative national commission, which would co-operate with the provinces and municipalities in the administration of unemployment relief and in an endeavor to provide work for the unemployed.

"As permanent measures, the Liberal Party is pledged to introduce policies which will serve to provide employment by reviving industry and trade; and to introduce a national system of unemployment insurance."

Persuasive Effort

"It must be clear that expenditure for the purpose of relief, or for providing employment at the instance of the state, cannot be continued indefinitely. Only by removing the restrictions which have throttled and strangled the movement of goods into and out of the country, and through persistent and persuasive endeavor to regain new markets, can there come a revival of trade and business, and the return of work for the men and women of our land.

"Confidence in the institutions of Government, certainty and stability of administration of public business, are essential to recovery. Release from, rather than increase in the burden of the cost of government, reductions rather than increases, in taxation co-operation and goodwill between the Federal and Provincial administrations, and between all parts and classes of the country, must also be achieved, if commerce and industry are to revive."

Demonstrations

"We have seen these young men become inflammable material in the hands of unscrupulous agitators; and the camps themselves become, as was inevitable, breeding grounds for Communism and defeatism. The country has witnessed strikes in relief camps in all parts of Canada, has seen relief strikers and unemployed trekking into cities already overcrowded with men out of work, and hunger marchers converging from the provinces upon the Capital, as a means of indicating the source of responsibility and redress."

"But, more than all this, the ruthless manner in which, in some particulars, the situation has been handled, has led to riot, serious injury, and loss of life. The irony of the situation must be apparent to all, when it is recalled that it was Britain in the general elections of 1930, that Mr. Bennett, seeking to arouse the passion of the unemployed, and to prejudice their minds against the Government which was then in office, used the words: 'Nine years of wasted effort before the great betrayal; it did not take Judas that long.'

"It was in the same city that, from the public platform, Mr. Bennett said: 'I meet men wearing the white buttons, and all they ask for is the chance to work. Think what it is to have a wife and children, and all you men ask is a chance for employment?'

"It was also in Regina, that, for political purposes, the unemployed were first banded together, and

Working Atop New R.C.M.P. Building

Among federal government work projects now under way to the extent of $3,000,000, is included a new headquarters building for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Ottawa. It will contain living quarters for unmarried officers and non-coms of the force. Here are some of the workers far out on a derrick mounted atop the R. C. M. P. building helping in the work.

time to time, as conditions might determine. The employment which it would serve to create would be all in the nature of constructive work. Comprehensive measures of the kind would serve to increase the social capital of the country as distinct from its private capital. It would improve and beautify our country. Moreover, it is work which would appeal to the imagination, and which should arouse the interest and enthusiasm of those who may be assigned to it.

Asks Question

"Would it be possible to conceive a finer example of the kind of national government necessary to cope with social and industrial problems, which depend for their solution so completely on the co-operation of Federal and Provincial governments, than would be afforded by a Liberal government at Ottawa, and Liberal government in the provinces of Canada? It would seem that this is the kind of national government which the people of Canada really want, a government, in the Dominion and provinces alike, that will be able to give expression to the will of the people as unimpeded as possible in Canada. Liberal, constitutional difficulties might be removed as J. S. Woodsworth and the C.O.F. would wish, said Mr. King. He asked where would they find their aim of a Co-operative Commonwealth better attained than by having governments of Canada of one mind."

The Liberal Party has made it abundantly clear in Parliament that there is no issue between Mr. Bennett and ourselves, or the need for social reform, declared the Liberal leader. "There is, however, a clear-cut and significant difference between us in the methods by which we would seek reform. There is also a clear-cut and fundamental difference in relation to the vital question of economic recovery.

"Mr. Bennett must know by now that no broad scheme of social reform can be carried through successfully in Canada without close co-operation between the Dominion and the provinces, and that, to ignore the provinces, or deliberately to invade their constitutional rights, is a dangerous assault upon the foundations of our national life. Mr. King referred to his own lifelong interest in labor and social problems. It was this interest which led to his appointment as Canada's first Deputy Minister of Labor and his later entry into the cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier as Minister of Labor. During all this time and later during the last 16 years as Liberal leader he had enjoyed the confidence and loyalty of the Liberal Party. He attributed this confidence to his interest in the problems of labor and he could say with assurance that he had been true to the cause of the working man."

"Unemployment is the hardest cross which a working man is called upon to bear," said Mr. King. "Mr. Bennett has tried to solve that problem, but he has tried too late, and his methods and policies have been at fault. The problems of labor cannot be solved by any one man. They require, more than any other problem, united effort. Their solution, moreover, will not be found in endless experimentation, but only in the application of principles and policies which have stood the test of experience and time. Even in a period of great emergency, such as the present, it is too much to hope to secure the united effort of all, but the effort of a political party, united in its aims and policies from one end of the country to the other, can go a long way towards effecting even that result."

"Of this, at least, I am sure: the task which confronts Canada today is one to which Liberals can give its whole heart. To loose the hands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke." Is it anything more the aim of Liberalism in this twentieth century than it was even in ancient days?

"It is with this aim in view, and in this spirit, that as one of the old political parties of Canada, with traditions of which we are proud, and with a desire to render our country at this hour of its great need a service which is truly national, we invite all who desire to share in larger measure some of the burden of their fellow-men, to join our ranks, so that, if entrusted with power, the party may, with greater certainty, achieve the objects which it has in view."

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Julius Sanietag, 22, today duplicated the feat of Steve Brodie. He leaped from the Brooklyn Bridge into the East River.

Sanietag was immediately pulled from the river aboard a tug and taken to the Beekman St. Hospital where authorities said he suffered a concussion of the brain, and possible internal and other injuries.

Ability To See Comfortably

The object of a modern eye service is to enable patients to see comfortably. That means seeing without strain on the eyes. And also the avoidance of many bodily results of eye strain. That thought deserves the consideration of all who are not certain of the condition of their eyes.

Pimples and Blackheads Over Face Two Years. Cuticura Healed.

"I suffered for over two years with pimples and blackheads all over my face, mostly on my chin and forehead. The pimples were hard and large, and at times festered. At night when I became warm they became very itchy and burned. I would wake up many nights scratching them. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was healed completely."
