

W. M. S. CONVENTION BROUGHT TO A CLOSE

MONCTON, June 2—At noon today, the Twenty-Sixth Annual Convention of the New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island Branch of the Woman's Missionary Society, which opened in Central Methodist Church on Wednesday morning, closed after a series of exceedingly busy sessions. From the outset the business was carried through with despatch; and in many ways the convention closed to be considered one of the most successful in the history of the organization. Reports from the several districts have been most encouraging; and the many little acts of sentiment which featured the sessions throughout, served to render the convention all the more interesting, and the routine not irksome.

One hundred and three delegates in all answered to the roll call as the largest attendance; and it may be safely said that all will leave for their homes, well satisfied and delighted with their trips as a whole.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON

The Thursday afternoon session opened at 3 o'clock with singing and prayer.

Miss Sanford read a highly interesting paper on "Women under Christianity."

Mrs. Coulthard delivered an interesting address on "The Unfinished Task of Women's Work."

Mrs. Chipman read a letter from Mrs. Ross, president of the Women's Missionary Board, who is at present visiting the western branches of the W. M. S.

Rev. G. J. Bond, who has travelled extensively in China, was then introduced to the meeting. Mr. Bond gave a short address on the need of the missionary societies.

Miss Stewart read a very interesting paper on "The Duties of the Members of the W. M. S. Between Each Meeting."

The consecration service was led by Mrs. (Dr.) Rogers, of Sackville, which was partly a memorial for the members of the society who had passed away. The names of all the departed members were read out.

Mrs. Rogers, who will leave this branch of the W. M. S. and go to Newfoundland soon, spoke briefly as to her regret in leaving, and after a few prayers the meeting adjourned by singing "Shall We Gather at the River."

EVENING MEETING

A public meeting was held in the Central Methodist Church last evening when Rev. George J. Bond delivered an illustrated lecture on "China." Mrs. W. B. Coulthard the newly elected president of the N. B. and P. E. I. Branch of the Woman's Missionary Society occupied the chair, supported by the ex-president, Mrs. J. D. Chipman.

The service opened with a prayer by the Rev. J. L. Batty, pastor of the church, followed by remarks by the chairman, after which Mr. Bond presented his lecture with a few explanatory remarks, referring to his own personal experiences in China three years ago, after which was displayed a series of fifty-two views, showing chiefly the modes of river travel, bringing out the interesting fact that it took him one month steaming the tide, and only forty-eight hours on the return journey.

He showed views of the hospitals, school buildings, churches, house boats and many other interesting features of the country. The rivers, with their banks of rugged scenery, were most picturesque, and were graphically described by the lecturer. Illustrations of various missionary

SIR FREDERICK BORDEN ILL

LONDON, June 1—Sir Frederick Borden the Canadian Minister of Militia and Defence, is not feeling well and has cancelled all his engagements.

SIR F. BORDEN.

He left London yesterday for the country to enjoy a short rest. He had a fainting attack one day last week and since that has been slightly indisposed. He did not attend the King's levee on May 29th.

(Anna Pavlova, in Harper's Bazaar).

Will the American women think me presumptuous for what I am about to say? I hope not. And yet—will you, dear people, resent a little truth and a little lesson? It may be you will ask, who am I, Anna Pavlova, Premier Ballerina of the Imperial Russian Ballet at St. Petersburg, to speak truths to women who, because they are women, are all royal in their own right? Briefly, I shall tell you of the school from which I graduated, and then, less briefly, I shall tell you of that knack of grace which you clapping hands have admitted I possess, and which you too may have at the cost of little labor and thought.

First, I am going to tell you how to stand to a friend, should always be relaxed. I call all the great Greeks statuary to bear witness that what I say is so. Remember that charming broken line on the left side of the Venus de Milo—the long, graceful sweep of the right side. Always allow the weight of the body to rest on one foot rather than on the other. Have the foot which is not bearing the weight, lightly touching the ground. Allow the entire side of the torso to relax with the foot and limb which is slinking the burden.

That lets the hip and the shoulder down, throws up slightly and charmingly the hip and shoulder supporting the weight. The attitude is graceful, natural, altogether feminine.

SHELDON ELECTS A SPEEDY TRIAL

MONTRÉAL, May 31—The famous Chas. D. Sheldon, blind pool artist, who has spent several weeks in jail pending his trial on a charge of illegal gambling, appeared this morning before Judge Langelle, and his attorney, Mr. Pelletier, made the choice of having his trial before the Court of Sessions.

It was at first believed that Sheldon would be tried before the Court of King's Bench in the June term, but as forecasted exclusively in The Herald some weeks ago, it was thought best, for reasons not at present made public, to have a speedy trial without a jury.

The accused was brought this morning in the van from the city jail and arraigned before Judge Langelle, who is the date when one of the most interesting trials Montreal has ever seen will be begun, unless it is found necessary, owing to the number of cases demanding immediate attention, to postpone it.

The plan of the defence is so far a secret, but it is understood that Mr. Sheldon himself, will be the main witness in his own behalf. He maintains as firmly as ever that all his business was legitimate and honest, and that if he had been left alone his clients would still be making their 30 per cent a month.

Sheldon constantly expects acquittal, and has declared to his friends that as soon as he is free he will settle down again in Montreal and endeavor to make and repay the money due his clients.

Mannheim, Ont., June 6 (Special)—After suffering from Backache and Rheumatism for fourteen years, Mrs. Mary A. "Yes, I will recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to any sufferer from Rheumatism," Mrs. Cook says. "I had it so bad that sometimes I would sit up nearly all night. I first thought I would try doctors, but I finally decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills first. They cured my kidney and so I didn't have to try the doctors. And just think that after fourteen years of suffering one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills should cure. I feel that I could guarantee them to anyone suffering as I did."

THE YOUNG MEN'S MAN

The Home of Good Hats

SHAKESPEARE SERMON.

(Corp. 1909 by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.)
Instructed by the antiquary times, He must, he is, he cannot but be wise.

Troilus and Cressida, Act II, Sc. 3
Various subjects have held a paramount position in various ages as educational forces. For a long time Greek and Latin authors bulked largest in the minds of the teachers of the young. With the rapid development of science, there was a tendency to make a knowledge of the material world of first importance. A man might be familiar with Latin and Greek, Sanskrit and Chinese, and yet be a mere pedant; he might be able to trace the stars in their course, and give the history of the earth from the time when it was a mass of gas and vapor until it became the resting place of humanity, and yet, so far as life is concerned, he might not be wiser than the American boy who knows of rocks, of plants and animals, is after all a poor equipment for training up a family or teaching a man his duties as a citizen. The benefit derived from the study of the classics has been largely accidental. The Roman legends of Greece and Rome, the outgrowth of the primitive history of those nations; the history of the founding of the Eternal City; the story of the struggle between the Patricians and Plebeians in the time of Coriolanus; the account of the struggles between Persia and Greece, and Rome and Carthage,—have gone to the creating of character, which after all is the end of education.

History is of supreme value in the education of mankind. The story of the nations enables people to build wisely and well. Under ordinary circumstances what was said of Nestor holds true of any man:
"Instructed by the antiquary times, He must, he is, he cannot but be wise."

The purpose of education is to cultivate imagination and establish strength of will. History, by presenting the picturesque past, the romances and kings and queens, the heroic deeds of men and women, the sacrifices of life and property made by citizens for their country, feeds the imagination. A knowledge of the struggles that brought about freedom, of the stern judgment of rulers, of the unflinching determination of patriots, gives to the student strength of will.

In a previous sermon Shakespeare's detestation of the mob has been dwelt on. Why is the mob the "giddy multitude." It is illiterate; it is unacquainted with the past; its surrections arise because the uneducated crowd vainly believe that society can be changed in an hour. Did they know history they would realize that sudden changes, in either the physical or political world, usually mean death. France is still suffering from the effects of the bloody revolution of the eighteenth century. There would be fewer religious sects, fewer advocates of communism, nihilism and all the other isms, if the history of the past were intimately known, and if the masses were ignorant of the crowd, profits by his ability to pervert the facts of former times. There are two practical benefits derived from sitting at the feet of the antiquary times. A man is taught how to read history. In the light of history past, present, and future become one. This is admirably expressed by Shakespeare on the lips of Warwick in "The Wars of the Roses":

"This is a history in all men's lives."
Figuring the nature of the times deceased.
The which observed, a man may prophesy.
With a true aim, of the main chance of things,
As yet not come to life, which in their seeds
And weak beginnings lie intreasured.

It is only the man who is versed in history, who can do this. He has his eye to the future. The pages of history are strewn with many wrecks, like Richard III. and Charles I., that serve to warn kings how they must not attempt to govern. There are guiding lights like Henry V. and Queen Elizabeth which show monarchs how to win the esteem and love of their people. Henry V. and Elizabeth, the patriot king and queen of England, are still shaping the character of the nation; Washington and Lincoln are still giving freedom and solidarity to the American people; though dead they yet live.

What was it made Shakespeare so wise? Largely a knowledge of his history. His pages teem with historical information. Greece, Rome, early Scotland, early Britain were all as familiar to him as was the past of his England. By familiarity with the past, he was able to understand the present; by acquaintance with kings and statesmen and philosophers of the ancient world, he could speak with wisdom to his own age and to the future. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding." For statecraft, the citizenship, for morals, the past must be known. Shakespeare was in many ways the greatest political and social teacher. He was this by his knowledge of the past, by his power of reproducing that past, and of applying it to the life of the present.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO A TRURO MAN

TRURO, June 4—The King's birthday was quietly celebrated here, all official offices, banks and public institutions being closed. There was an unusually brilliant display of hunting, but the stores and other business houses were conducted as usual. A game between Truro and the Ramblers of Amherst, with a finish of eight to three in favor of Truro.

A serious accident happened to the Collector George H. Lawrence. He was run down while crossing Prince Street by a fast going milk delivery cart and is today under the care of Mrs. Johnson, the matron and nurses at the local hospital, suffering from broken ribs and injuries to his right leg at the knee. Mr. Lawrence some time ago suffered an accident to his left leg which resulted in permanent stiffness at the knee and lameness. It is hoped by his many friends that a like result will not follow the present disability.

THE MARRIAGE QUESTION

BRANTFORD, Ont., June 1—The question of the right of a specially ordained probationer to solemnize marriages was up before the London Conference again yesterday, when the name of R. E. Lackland of Walton, was proposed for special ordination. "I would ask if this includes the right to marry persons," said Mr. Dougal of Goderich.

This is a matter of just a little doubt, as I think it would be well for our man to be cautious," answered Acting President Ford.

Rev. A. R. Kellman, of Putnam, thought the Conference should give a decision. Rev. Walter Rigby, St. Clair, read from the discipline of the Church regarding marriage and held that this made clear a specially ordained man was given the privilege. No decision, however, was reached.
