SEPTEMBER EXCURSIONS TO THE CANADIAN METROPOLIS

"Montreal, Alt. 48.3. Population 700,000, the commercial metropolis of Canada and sixth largest city in North America. Beautifully situated at the foot of Mount Royal on an island in the St. Lawrence River, about 700 miles from the estuary of that mighty artery through which pulsates so large a portion of Canada's commercial life. This city is built on the site of the ancient Indian village of Hochelaga, first visited by Jacques Cartier in 1535. Over 250 years ago the early French navigators established a trading post for furs here, and it was the last section of French Canada to pass into the possession of Great Britain in 1760. At the head of ocean navigation, with command of one of the three water routes by which the products of the masonry, vast warehouses and grain elevators, and the largest floating dry dock in the world. Big transatlantic steamers call here regularly from ports in Europe during the season of navigation and the harbour has won its place amongst the most important of the world, both as regards the sufficiency of the equipment and the extent of the business done. Numerous railways make Montreal a centre for a vast and constantly growing traffic. Montreal is a city of great enterprises, where mighty results are achieved, with a record for stability equal to that of any of the great cities of America, and is advancing year by year to still greater future. Besides its commercial greatness, the city has the additional charm of historic attractions, and there are many places of interest which link the present with an eventful past. With imposing public buildings, universities, educational institutions, magnificent churches, fine business blocks, substantial manufacturing establishments, splendid hotels, and hand-some residences, the city possesses all that is calculated to make a city attractive. Evidences of prosperity and wealth are everywhere.

PRINCE EDWARD THEATRE

Patrons of the Prince Edward Theatre enjoyed an exceptional treat last night and the big audiences were enthusiastic in their praise of the splendid attractions which Manager Gallagher is providing. "Helene of the North" was the head liner last night and it certainly was a gem. It was claimed for it—a big gripping story pulsating with the life of the great Canadian North. Marguerite Clark one of the greatest stars of the film firmament in this production scored a dramatic triumph. The story tells in a graphic and original manner of the vicissitudes in the life of a young and captivating girl, the daughter of a titled English woman, who through a misguided fancy wed a notorious character of the Northwestern Canadian woods. Growing to womanhood in this rough environment, she became desirous by Pierre, a rascally half-breed, for whom she feels a natural and intense repugnance. Later she falls in love with Ralph Connel, a young member of the Northwest Mounted Police force, who is anxious to arrest Pierre for a number of serious misdeeds. The embers between the two men is increased by their mutual interest in Helene. From this point a number of powerfully dramatic incidents develop terminating in the supposed marriage of Helene and Pierre, by which the cure apparently wears her to the half-breed, but actually marries her to Ralph. Of this trick by the Cure on Pierre Helene is ignorant, until a few years later, when Helene, now in the possession of her rightful position and title, meets Ralph, now Lord Traverse, at a society function, and learns that they were married years before and that the Cure procured the wedding ceremony in Latin so that Ralph, an educated man, could reply in the required manner with-
