Sir Henry Drayton on War Savings

Canadians who do not realize the urgency of Canada's war needs are hoarding some $90,000,000 that should be in active circulation according to Sir Henry Drayton, who addressed a War Savings Committee gathering in Toronto.

"There is not a single bit of good money being hoarded," said the former Cabinet Minister. "You can go anywhere in this country, and with the exception of those who have contributed their share to the fighting forces, little or no war sacrifice has been evidenced, nothing done voluntarily to contribute to our war effort."

The former cabinet minister termed "unfortunate" what he said was a statement of Hon. J. L. Falconer concerning confiscation of wealth for war purposes.

"The statement was hardly the way to meet the situation," he said "shortly after it was made, there was a noticeable drop in deposits of $90,000,000. Today there is $125,000,000 in circulation, but of this only, in round figures, $33,000,000 is in active circulation. The balance is hoarded and that's the sort of thing we must fight against."

"We want to give everybody confidence in themselves, in this country, in our ability to win this war, but they must not become over-confident and fail to realize the extent of their duty," he said.

Sir Henry cited difficulties of post-war adjustment and pointed out that if every home, no matter how humble, has its quota of war savings certificates, this problem will to a great degree be alleviated.

"This country has the money to meet the goal set for the February 'pledge campaign' he said. "I have figures of October 31, 1939, before the earning power was swollen by war industry. On that date, deposits amounted to more than a billion dollars and accounts of $1,000 or less represented 92 per cent of the whole. Accounts of $1,000 to $5,000 represented seven per cent. So together these two most classes represented one billion dollars," he said.

"So you can see that if this was the case in October 1939, there is any amount of untapped money in the hands of the Canadian people of small means waiting for you to glean," he said.

"There's not a family speaking generally, but what is in an infinitely better position than it was a year ago. The number of men employed in Canada has gone up tremendously. And this is in great degree because England is spending her money in Canada. Because England has thrown the securities of her people on the bargain table, so there'll be money to pay for this war, which is just as much ours as hers. Can any Canadian decline to return to the common defence every single cent of money the mother country has been spending there?" he demanded.

"The first order for them arrived in England on December 29, from Australia. Traditionally, Australia orders first, New Zealand is next. Then in February, come Canada and the United States. In March South Africa, India, South America and the West Indies follow on."

Tastes, naturally, vary with climates and customers. South America's cards are warm and vivid in coloring, and done, of course in Spanish or Portuguese as well as English. There are no snow scenes.

For India there is a special range appealing to each of many classes, with snow for the hill stations. In the Dominions and Colonies there is a definite preference for sketches or photographs of old corners of London, glimpses at Cathedral cities, and pictures of English villages.

The Empire demand for Christmas cards from England was better for the second Christmas of the war than for the first when it was remarkably good. The help of the Paper Controller in releasing raw materials will make the present year even better, in the opinion of one of the leading producers.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26 — (CP) — Numerically the North American Indian is stronger than ever, but ethnologically he's fast becoming a "back number."

Officials at the Indian Affairs branch of the Department of Mines and Resources forecast that the last 50 to 75 years will see the disappearance of the primitive Indian who roamed the country when Canada was young.

The so-called "redskin" is a vanishing breed, one authority said. "His place is being taken by well-educated men and women whose only knowledge of the life their forebears led is the accounts they read in history books."

At the same time Canada's Indian population is growing fast, the official said. This could be...

OTTAWA, Jan. 26 — (CP) — Each province works as a unit. Edward Evans purchased a $1,750 ambulance and has raised $1,950 through a "self-denial" levy on individual members of each of his branches. The latter levy has been similarly carried out in all other Dominion branches.

Nova Scotia purchased a similar ambulance and has supplied the Red Cross both nationally and internationally with thousands of articles.

Institutes in New Brunswick contributed $1,834 to the Ministry of Defence and in addition raised $3,700 of which the Red Cross received $1,781. For Brien guns went $900 and $1,215 was sent abroad to the National Federation of Women's Institute in Great Britain to aid the needy war victims.

At the last report Alberta's "war fund" was nearing $2,000 and wool had been collected in quantity for the weaving of blankets and making garments.

Two bed units (64 beds) have been purchased by Saskatchewan's rural women at a cost of $5,000 for their own Red Cross Hospital and $3,000 raised through the self-denial levy in addition to making clothes and aiding Red Cross efforts.

Ontario institutes completely furnished a comfortable recreation room at Camp Borden; donated a hospital unit of 32 beds to the Taplow Hospital and made over 25 tons of jam in some 65 canning centres; the women doing the work and supplying the sugar, the Red Cross supplied the cans.

Manitoba women raised by levy some $632 for refugee work and have co-operated whole-heartedly in all Red Cross activities. In Quebec in addition to the P. W. I. fund, canning and sewing has been done and over 100 blankets supplied for overseas.

Writing to Mrs. B. F. Gummow, Peabody, B. C., corresponding secretary for the institute, Finance Minister J. L. Tisley said, "I believe nothing could be more useful than stimulation of interest in War Savings Stamps and Certificates. Such systematic saving on the part of ordinary citizens is vital if we are to finance this war and meet the needs of our women's institutes have many thousands of dollars worth of stamps."

A united effort of the branches in all provinces has raised $2,121 for war equipment with Alberta and British Columbia still to report.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26 — (CP) — The Indian population of Canada was 104,994. Ten years later it was 112,519, and a 1939 check showed 118,378 Indians.

"Of course, it's difficult to say how completely the Indian will adjust himself to white man's civilization," the official said. "Indian culture differs widely in various parts of the country."

He explained that a few primitive tribes such as the Takudah and Hoppers in the Northwest Territories still cling steadfastly to the old ways. Typical of the far end of the scale are the Caughnawaga Indians of Quebec, recognized as highly-skilled steel workers.

REAL OLD TIMERS. Said by scientists to have arrived in what is now Canada 15,000 years ago, the Indian easily claims the title of "oldest inhabitant."

Since Confederation, tracts of land have been set aside as reserves to be used as a kind of training school where Indians could learn the white man's ways.

This policy has resulted in millions of dollars being spent annually on medical services, education and other forms of assistance. In the fiscal year 1938-39 education alone, requiring maintenance of more than 300 Indian schools with an enrollment of approximately 19,000 children, cost the government $1,951,337.

As a result of this policy, officials say, the Indian gradually is being trained to take his place in the life of the Dominion. One indication is that in the year ending March 31,

OTTAWA, Jan. 26 — (CP) — Canada's county women, through the Federated Women's Institutes, have carried the voluntary war effort to the furthest outpost of the Dominion in the first year of the war.

Numbering over 75,000 in membership this organization is the largest such society in the world and is affiliated with that international group, the Associated Country Women of the World. The record of its war so far has aid levy cooperation with the Red Cross in raising funds to assist in this country's emergency and war effort is a tribute to the rural areas of Canada and their unity of purpose.

"How the Women's Institutes can best help the Empire win the war" is the theme kept before 3,691 branches scattered from coast to coast. Having offered their services at the outbreak of war to both the Canadian and British Prime Ministers, the ministers of finance, defence and war services, their offer has been translated into the raising of funds for the purchase of ambulances, medical supplies, tens of thousands of articles sent to devastated areas in Britain through the Red Cross, and food conservation reports Mrs. H. ### Oceania French Train To Fight

AUCKLAND, N.Z., Jan. 27 — (CP) — With a new governor, new administrative council and an armed force willing to serve anywhere on tonight expressed "personal" appointment concerning a Dominion Government offer to pay half the cost of the transporting feed grains to Eastern Canadian farmers if the provinces involved pay the other half and arrange the shipments. Mr. Taylor returned from Ottawa today.

Official reaction of the New Brunswick Government to the proposal awaits a discussion between Mr. Taylor and other cabinet members. The three Maritime Ministers of Agriculture will confer on the matter at Moncton next Thursday or Friday, he said.

The federal offer "is not anything like the plan the provincial ministers presented" to officials at Ottawa last week, stated Mr. Taylor.

The Dominion proposal would place the heavier burden upon the provinces and there was no guarantee that the price of feed to farmers would not be increased. He expressed belief it would be necessary to reg. The price if farmers were to receive any direct benefit.

He taught you noble to be. Not to abuse your liberty. But to the weak to render aid. On virtuous actions to be staid.

He taught you to be strong and brave. And at your peril life to save. Remember your Chief Scout's last word. For life exigent be prepared.

He knew the loyal hearts of boys. Their enthusiasms and their joys. On helpfulness and courtesy. Lies the romance of Chivalry. And what is nobler than a youth Whose character is based on truth.

CENTRAL ROYALTY W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Central Royalty Women's Institute was held on Jan 2 at the home of Mrs. Major MacRae with fifteen members and one visitor present. The President presided and the meeting opened by the singing of the Ode. Roll call was answered by Ways of making money. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. The different committee gave their reports. After a lengthy discussion the motion of sending cards to sick instead of fruit and flowers was withdrawn and left a before.

New Committees appointed — School, Miss L. Cullen and Mrs. R. Roper. Sick, Mrs. C. Wood and Mrs. B. Diamond. Red Cross — Mrs. Major MacRae, Lunch — Mrs. C. Wood, Mrs. W. F. McLeod, Mrs. W. Ward. Correspondence was read and discussed.

It was moved by Mrs. C. Wood seconded by Mrs. R. Roper the Institute be divided into groups, each group to entertain as they decided. Two pairs socks turned in to Red Cross. Paper on Legislature.

Public Health and Child Welfare were read. The questionnaire on Legislature was filled in by Mrs. H. Stead, Public Health and Child Welfare questionnaire filled in by Mrs. Wendall Wood.

Roll call home made valentine of name a vitamin and its chief source of supply. A delicious lunch was served by the committee in charge. The meeting then adjourned.

OTTAWA, January — The war savings campaign which opens next month is in no sense a stamp-selling effort. This point was vigorously emphasized today by Walter F. Zeller, national campaign chairman.

The campaign is to reach its objective, Mr. Zeller said, an average cash subscription of $5.00 per month will be required regularly from two million people. Stamps have never been intended as anything more than a means of raising the money, and people with very low incomes to purchase war savings certificates on the installment plan.

"There has been an enormous increase in Canadian pay-rolls since the outbreak of war," Mr. Zeller pointed out. The people who are earning these extra wages are being asked to let the government have the use of this extra money for a few years and, in doing so, provide for their own financial security. In the midst of a desperate war, they are asked to save and lend all that they can after providing the necessities of decent, plain living for themselves and their families. Five per cent of the average bread-winner's income was not, he thought, too much to ask as an investment in war savings to support the country's war effort.

The campaign committee therefore is appealing to war savers to purchase individually from one certificate per month ($48.00 cash per year) to ten certificates per month which is the maximum allowed to any investor.

The dominion's war effort, he pointed out, is to be the maximum that the people of Canada can contribute toward a British victory. There is no other measure for it. The task of financing it must be placed on the same footing and war savings are a vital feature. Canadians who contribute their share of support in this way can only satisfy themselves and the needs of the situation by saving every cent they can spare. Those who feel that the purchase of a few war savings stamps would meet their obligation and a wrong conception of the whole situation," he said. "The committee's appeal is for the purchase of certificates, not stamps — the purchase of as many certificates regularly as each individual can pay for out of his earnings."
