Notrump Technique

It is not always a sound practice to run a long suit at notrump and then to look proud for the fulfilling tricks. South had that point driven home to him in today's deal

North dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♦	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the heart king, and though declarer should have taken trick rather than risk a shift to spades, he held up the ace. West continued with the heart queen and when the ace was played, declarer could see for himself that West had started with only a four-card heart suit at the most.

However, South promptly ran off the five diamond tricks, evidently determined to put a large pile of tricks in front of him before "something happened." When he then led a club from dummy, East made a brilliant play—he put up the queen! This, as may be seen, was quite a blow to the declarer. If he took the trick he would never get back to his own hand for another club trick, whereas if he allowed East's queen to hold, he still would make nothing but the ace in clubs. The upshot was that South came out with only eight tricks—one spade, one heart, five diamonds and one club.

After taking the heart ace, declarer should have gone a bit more slowly about cashing the diamonds. He should have led to the king and immediately returned a club, putting in his own jack or ten. West, of course, would cash his two hearts, but declarer would then control West's next play and for running the diamonds, would be in a position to take another club finesse.

Obviously, if declarer had attacked the club suit early it would not have done East any good to put up the club queen on the first lead from dummy.
