THE LIVER TO BLAME.

So long as the liver is active in filtering the bile from the blood there is no biliousness and no constipation, because the bile is passed from the liver into the intestines where it acts as a cathartic in keeping the bowels active. Because of their direct action on the liver as well as the bowels, Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills thoroughly cure constipation, the real cause of nine tenths of the common ills of life.

JAPANESE FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

On February 11, 1889 Japan became a constitutional monarchy by the act of the present enlightened Emperor. The constitution is that of a limited monarchy. The Emperor rules with the advice of a Cabinet, which he can select irrespective of the majority in Parliament, as does the President of the United States. Responsible Government as we have it in Canada, is, however being gradually evolved, and the Cabinet is becoming more and more responsible to the Parliament and less to the Emperor. There are two Houses, a House of Peers appointed by the Emperor and a House of Commons elected by the people. The voting franchise is based on a property qualification and is limited to the few in parliamentary elections. The voter must be twenty-five years of age and pay a direct annual tax of at least $5 a year. With us there are about 20 voters in a population of 1,000. In Japan there are 22 voters among a like number.

Japan is divided into forty-five prefectures which correspond roughly to our Provinces, each with a Governor and a Legislature, the former appointed by the Emperor, the latter elected by the people. In voting for members of the Legislature the franchise is more liberal than in voting for members of the national Parliament. Any male citizen over 20 years of age and paying an annual national tax of $2.50 may vote for Assemblymen. In municipal elections the qualification is still lower—the ownership of one foot of land or the payment of $1 in direct taxes yearly. In the Parliamentary elections of 1902 only 185,193 possessed the right to vote, the men of the army and navy not having this right. At the last election for Assemblymen over 2,500,000 actually voted, and in the municipal election 3,500,000 votes were cast. In this graduated scale of voting qualifications there are four times as many voters in municipal affairs as there are in national affairs.

The constitution guarantees political liberty and defines the "rights of man." All subjects are eligible to civil and military offices, are amenable to service in the army or the navy and in duty bound to pay taxes. The man's house is his castle, as with us, and cannot be entered or searched without his consent, except by due process of law. The right of property, freedom of speech and of religious opinion are secured in the constitution. The freedom of the press was at first somewhat restricted, but most of the restrictions have been removed and newspapers have greatly multiplied in recent years. So also the tendency is toward an extension of the voting franchise and the greater responsibility of the Executive to Parliament. Civil and religious liberty are further developed than in Germany, while as compared with Russia, Japan is far in advance in liberty and the general education of her people.

A Meeting of the Provincial Executive held the other day decided to appoint a man to procure information as to the value of our Island fisheries and fish exports, to be used in connection with the Fishery Award case before the Privy Council.

We hear frequent complaints from travellers of the old dilapidated cars in which passengers are carried between Painsec and Point du Chene. Surely passengers to and from the Island are entitled to as good cars as those in use between St. John and Halifax, or between Moncton and Montreal. If not, there are 100,000 Islanders who want to know the reason why.

The Patriot says—"the Russians have already lost more guns than Napoleon used at Waterloo." According to the best authorities Napoleon had 246 guns at Waterloo, as against 156 in Wellington's army. Two hundred and twenty-seven French guns were captured, being 71 more than Wellington's forces possessed when the fight began. The point is not important except as a matter of accuracy, but we doubt whether the Russians have so far lost as many guns as Napoleon had in his last memorable battle.

The esteemed Examiner is sometimes unconsciously very funny. In Saturday's issue contains an artless story of a young lady who on Wednesday afternoon lost a beautiful watch and advertised her loss at once in an evening paper that afternoon and the morning paper of the following morning. An honest farmer found the watch and happened to leave it with The Examiner to be restored to its owner. That journal advertised the watch as "found." The lady got her watch and the editorial sage remarks that she "is now also wiser in a better knowledge of how to advertise in Charlottetown." It is clear from the Examiner's own story that its advertisement did not assist in finding the watch. The most it can claim is that it may have assisted in finding the fair owner. But she was not lost. It is not much of a trick to find something that is not lost. It is quite clear also that in finding the young lady The Examiner was not the best medium. She was doubtless a reader of the papers in which she advertised and not ordinarily a reader of The Examiner. Somebody seems to have told her of the "Found" advertisement.
