THE LOST RIVER WAIRARAPA, NEW ZEALAND.

The complete alteration of the configuration and drainage system of the east coast of New Zealand in the neighborhood of Hawke bay, consequent upon a great volcanic con- plosion at the close of the Pliocene period, is discussed by Mr. H. Hill in an article entitled "The Great Wairarapa: A lost River," published in the "Transactions of the New Zealand Institute" for 1908. Formerly the coastline extended farther eastward than at present, and numerous streams which now form different river-systems flow south-eastward into a great river running for a considerable part of its course parallel with the coast. But great earth-movements at the close of the Pliocene period caused a large part of the coast to disappear beneath the sea, the Wairarapa river with it, and the present outline of the coast came into shape with the formation of Hawke bay. Poverty bay and other inlets. Before this great topographical change took place the network of tributaries from the west bared the country of much of the limestone that then covered it, replacing it by those thick, heavy deposits of pumice and shingle which are now so characteristic of the country between the Kaimanawa mountains and Taungataupo. In Poverty bay, the Kaikoi hills, and other regions there are today abundant facts to show what the country was like before the present plain and river-valley came to be. The new rivers, like the Tukituki, which suddenly became independent streams after the subsidence of the coast, effected very active denudation; and plains like those of Poverty bay

'Cut Out' Coal Extravagance

There's just as much room for economy in buying coal as any other necessity of life.

While Inverness Coal has more heat units to the ton than any other coal it costs no more than the common coal.

The use of a little judgment or "horse sense" will tell any person that the coal with the greatest amount of heat-producing qualities is the most economical to buy. Inverness is properly screened coal—every particle of foreign matter is extracted, leaving nothing but a good, uniform standard of clean, screened coal.

Buy the coal that will save dollars.

—To give the Guardian readers an idea of the immensity of the fishing industry in this Province it might be stated that Messrs. R. T. To meet the demands of fishermen for reliable nets this firm buys only newly made nets, all manufactured from best quality Seal Island Cotton. and Watro have all been formed by means of the materials brought down by them in time of flood; and as the process still goes on Poverty bay may once more become dry land. The soil of these newly-formed lowlands is thus naturally rich and will repay cultivation.

A QUESTION OF FAME

A good-roads agitator was speaking very enthusiastically to a group of farmers. One hay-seedy member of the audience was so much pleased with what he heard that he called out:

"You're the man I want for senator."

The speaker paid no attention to him. But presently the farmer again called out:

"You're the man for senator."

"My friend," said the speaker "you are kinder than you are wise. Let me ask you a question. Do you know the name of either senator from Massachusetts?"

"No, sir."

"Of either senator from Ohio?"

"No, sir."

"Of either senator from Virginia?"

"No, sir."

"Well, do you know who Julius Caesar was?"

"Yes, I've heard of him."

"Well, now, a mere senator, even from any one of the most famous states, is not well enough known for his name to have reached your ears. But the Roman emperors were road-builders, and, though Julius Caesar has been dead more than 2000 years, you know who he was. We are here not to consider such a small, transitory subject as a senatorship, but such a lasting and noble subject as road-building."
