Georgetown And Vicinity

Mrs. William Hook of Charlottetown is on visit to her parents Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lavanier.

Mrs. James MacLeod of Murray River visiting her mother, Mrs. Minnie Rafuse.

Mr. Joseph Goteil, Jr., left recently for Charlottetown where he has obtained employment.

Mrs. Patrick Murphy and family were recent visitors to Mrs. Murphy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Fisher of Portune.

Miss Jean Murphy has returned home after undergoing an operation in the Charlottetown Hospital and her many friends are glad to hear that she is convalescing satisfactorily.—Geo.

Few farmers have as yet commenced potato digging but reports from some of those who have started operations are anything but encouraging, with considerable amount of rot being in evidence. It is to be sincerely hoped that this condition will not be general when the majority of our farmers start harvesting their potato crop.

Those lovers of that much sought after delicacy, the tasty mushroom report them in poor supply this fall. There are many favorite haunts of mushroom pickers which in other years were always sure to yield the pickers a plentiful quantity of this or their favourite, which this fall seem to be taking a seasonal rest from production.

Speculation on this season's hockey prospects are rife these days and it is expected a meeting of players and those interested will shortly be held to formulate plans for this winter's activities. Several members of last year's team have departed to other centers and their places will have to be filled by drawing on the best available from school and junior teams. The only one sure thing about the situation at present is that we can rest assured that the team will be there fighting to hold the Southern King's Trophy which they so convincingly won last season.

Local Egg Prices Continue Steady

Paying prices for eggs have remained steady for the past week with production showing a slight further decline, reports Mr. F. M. Nash, supervising poultry products inspector. Surplus stocks continue to move to other Maritime points and Newfoundland. Grading stations are now quoting producers for ungraded eggs fob station AL 57, AM 55, AP 53, B 34, C 21 and for the graded pack are receiving AL 62, AM 60, AP 58, B 39, C 25. Dealers are quoting retailers for loose eggs AL 65, AB 63, AP 40, B 45, C 30 with two to three cents above for A grades in cartons. Retailers are handling mostly Grade B eggs and these are retelling to consumers at 52-53.

Live and dressed poultry receipts to local dealers continue light with prices unchanged. Live poultry continues to move to U. S. A. markets. Hatching egg shipments to U. S. A. are increasing weekly.

Mr. Nash offers the following advice to producers at this time: Why fatten poultry for market? — Birds will gain more weight in the same time, on less feed while being fattened than if they were not so treated and the public is willing to pay a higher price per pound for fattened birds.

Types of stock which require fattening—Cockerels of all ages whether marketed as broilers, fryers or roasters. Capons require little if any fattening, being usually sufficiently fat and soft fleshed if killed off range. The labor and cost of fattening cocks, pullets and hens is rarely justified. Cockerels of the light breeds such as Leghorns are uneconomical if fattened after broiler age and are discriminated against on most markets.

Methods of fattening—Soft feeding in fattening crates is the most satisfactory method. Pen fattening is the logical substitute for crate fattening but should be considered as only a substitute.

Selection of birds for fattening—Health and apparent vitality should be the main basis for selection. Diseased or very unthrifty birds should not be put into fattening crates.

The fattening room—Freedom from draughts and sufficient change of air are important. The room should be darkened down somewhat between feedings. Temperature of the fattening room, if within reasonable limits, is not an important factor in fattening since average temperatures of 36 degrees F., 53 degrees F., and 60 degrees F. give results which are satisfactory.

Fattening feeds—All feeds should be soft mixed using skim-milk, buttermilk or whey. The value of the cereal grains is as follows in descending order of efficiency: corn and oat groats or hullless oats (equal), buckwheat, wheat, oats and barley. Ten per cent of meat meal makes an excellent supplement to the ground cereal grains as also does 5 per cent of rendered mutton or beef fat.

Color of fat—If white fleshed birds are required they should be taken off green range two to three weeks before fattening and white rather than yellow corn used in fattening. Skim-milk, buttermilk and whey have a whitening effect if used as the mixer for the fattening feed.

Feeding management — Birds should be starved for 18 to 24 hours before fattening and flushed with Epsom Salts. They should have water to drink between feedings. Feeds should be medium finely ground, mixed to a consistency which will just pour, be given twice daily and not in greater quantity than will be cleaned up in 20 minutes to one-half hour. Usually a two-weeks crate fattening period will give more economical gains than a longer period although in pen fattening three or four weeks is often desirable.

Care after fattening—Starve the birds with water to drink for 10 to 14 hours before killing. Handle with care to avoid bruising and carry out the killing process with care. The birds should be chilled as soon as possible after killing.

BREADALBANE VILLAGE W. I.
