It was possible the catch might improve this month but there was a considerable drop in October over the same month in 1939. There was no explanation for the scarcity of fish. Apparently there had been no gradual decline over a number of years but a sudden sharp drop this season. The price to the fishermen averaged about seven cents per pound, the supervisor said. FRIDAY

One of the largest crowds in recent years attended the Provincial Fox Show at the Exhibition Building yesterday. Not since the boom years of 1929-30, when the industry was at its peak, has so many interested people assembled to witness the judging of the various animals. Over two hundred automobiles, each fully loaded on arrival, were parked around the main building while the show was in progress.

Interest was intense all through the day, but reached its climax when the Marked Silvers and Platinum classes were placed on the table.

The displays of foxes delighted and amazed everyone because a year ago there was a scant two score of the breed in this province.

There were some beautiful specimens, and it was really interesting to see how closely they were watched by fox breeders, many of whom are no doubt considering purchasing some of these animals

This is placed there to keep the soil from dusting away. Power lines in the vicinity of the site have been placed underground, assuring free take-offs and landings.
