Contract Bridge

By Josephine Culbertson
NO GAIN WITHOUT RISK
Bridge bidding is no different from other forms of investment. It is rare indeed that there can be substantial gain without incurring a risk. Observe East's action in today's deal. Certainly it was risky, but it was also highly profitable!

South dealer. Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding: South Pass West Pass North 1♠ East 2♠ South 2NT West Pass North Pass East Pass

It required both nerve and a certain amount of rashness for East to double the less-than-game contract, realizing as he did that he might be doubling the opponents into game and rubber. Nevertheless, there was a great deal of merit in East's bold decision. There that indicated the opponents would not find it easy to make two no-trump. For one thing, North had decided to "hang" one trick short of game, and therefore it was highly presumable that he was not very well endowed with high cards. An expert player does not accept a two-no-trump contract if he feels that there is any substantial chance for game. The second point that impressed East was that South had chosen to bid two no-trump instead of doubling the two-club overcall. This choice meant one of two things: either South did not have two club tricks, or, if he did have them, his distribution did not favor a double. Considering East's void of diamonds, it was the next thing to certain that South had length in that suit, but the presumption was also strong that West would have at least one or perhaps two stoppers in the diamond suit. East's spade and heart holdings were, of course, the "clinchers" for his double, which turned out beautifully. West made the inspired lead of the heart ten, and the contract was defeated three tricks — 800 points.
