Foreign Soldiers March In Downpour In Franco Parade

(By Larry Allen, Associated Press Foreign Staff)

MADRID, May 19.—General Franco today watched Spain's mightiest military display move through a soaking rain in a victory parade intended as a splendid farewell to the foreign soldiers who helped him win the civil war.

Italian, German and Moorish troops joined some 127,000 Spaniards sloshing along the drenched Avenida Del Generalissimo to pass in review before the huge tribune where Franco stood.

More than 150,000 men in war equipment saluted Franco.

Two million spectators—Madrid—lined the streets from every corner of Spain cheered the soldiers and chanted Franco's name.

More than five hours after the parade began, motorized equipment splashed past the reviewing stand, one of the final units of the parade.

In the line of march were at least 1,000 field and anti-aircraft guns and 400 tanks.

In addition to Spanish troops there were 10,000 Italians, 8,000 Moors and 5,000 Germans who are expected to leave Spain within two weeks.

The Italian equipment included 60 heavy guns and light mountain artillery borne on 200 mules. Among the fighters were Italian Alpine troops in full equipment and 60 black-shirted legionnaires with up-raised daggers.

CAPITOL

SUMMERSIDE

Mr. Donald Baker of Kensington, P. E. I., who was awarded an athletic distinction by Mount Allison University at a banquet held in the Men's Residence recently. Mr. Baker served the Mount Allison Varsity hockey squad in the nets and was captain of the team. The Mount Allison squad captured the Maritime Intercollegiate Hockey Championship this year. Captain Baker was also presented with the Halifax Herald Trophy, emblematic of Maritime Intercollegiate Hockey supremacy, Col. P. L. West, of the Mount Allison Engineering faculty, at the banquet. Mr. Baker is a senior Arts student at the University of Toronto. He has a record of good academic standing, which is a prerequisite to playing an intercollegiate competition at Mount Allison.

Shirley Temple At Capitol

Shirley Temple, the screen's favorite, thrilled a capacity audience at the Capitol Theatre, Summerside, last evening in a picture which far surpasses anything that she has ever done. Singing, dancing, romance and fun-provoking show people make this 20th Century Fox picture the hit of the season.

If you're thrillable you will thrill to this musical performance. The grand group of troupers which aids and abets Miss Temple is headed by that scintillating stepper, George Murphy; the irrepressible Jimmy Durante; gorgeous blonde Phyllis Brooks and Edna Mae Oliver, the popular prim and pudish grande dame of filmdom.

POULTRY SOLVES INDIAN PROBLEMS

REGINA, May 18.—(CP)—Indian women have started to raise poultry and may, in the opinion of Thomas Robertson, inspector of Indian affairs, solve the problem of excess dogs on reservations.

Indian reservations are notorious for large numbers of nondescript dogs.

The practice of poultry raising has never been general on the reserves, but now Indian women's organizations are encouraging it and it will mean war on dogs.

"The Indian women won't stand by and see their chickens killed off by the dogs," said Inspector Robertson.

Royal Couple Spend Night Aboard Train

(By The Canadian Press)

CALEDONIA SPRINGS, Ont., May 19.—The luxurious palace-on-wheels that is the official residence of Their Majesties in Canada rested last night beside the railway station in Caledonia Springs, and the King and Queen slept aboard their train under glittering skies.

For the first time a British monarch was spending the night in the open Canadian countryside. Overhead the northern lights flashed in a brilliant aurora display. Tired from their hectic day in Montreal, the King and Queen may have already been asleep when the royal train reached its stopping place, 65 miles east of Ottawa.

No sound disturbed the night scene. A few passing trains were under orders to slow down as they passed. No patriotic engine crew was to greet Their Majesties with a whistle blast.

Near the cars stood searchlights, like floodlights for a movie set, ready to make any point as light as day.

When the 12-car special rolled to a new, specially-built siding, switches were thrown and silks. A Royal Canadian Mounted Police officer was assigned to guard each switch.

All night long police guarded the train, walking beats along either side of the train as if on a city street. Further back from the train, at the nearest roads, other police stood guard. The station and its platform were closed to local use.

Nothing untoward was expected to happen in the night; nothing did.

Day revealed gray skies with splattering rain and chilly wind. From their observation car, the royal couple could see the green fields and in the distance low rolling hills, a scene not unlike the Queen's native Scotland.

A.Y.P.A. Play Is Presented At Kensington

The A. Y. P. A. of St. Mary's Church, Kensington, presented their play "A Face in Three Ages" by Jay Tobias, in the King Edward hall recently before a large audience. The repeated applause from the crowd testified to their utter enjoyment of the play and the excellent acting of the players.

The stage setting was very colorful and beautifully arranged. The scenes were laid in the living room of the Brooks summer cottage in the Ozarks. The part of Mr. J. Osgood Brooks, a rich old bachelor, who was continually haunted by his long lost love Bedoune, was taken by Mr. Ernest T. Mill whose acting was perfect.

The part of Mrs. Annabel Brooks, a pretty widow very much in love with Osgood, was beautifully acted by Mrs. Ernest T. Mill whose two daughters, Constance and Barbara were delightfully impersonated by Mrs. Reagh Sudbury and Miss Wanda Mill. Mr. Edith Ross and Mr. Cecil Mill took the parts of Sieve and Davy, romantic swains of Connie and Babs.

Miss Marion Lockhart had a most difficult role, Liz Yeates, the comedienne behind the scenes, carried the part very cleverly and was applauded again and again. Mr. Reagh Sudbury, as Newt Hawson, Liz Yeates' beau, and general handyman who grows from a comedian and would have to be seen to be appreciated.

The title role Grace Darling was very gracefully taken by Mrs. J. Cecil Mill who grows from a timid country cousin to a charming personality with all the men clamouring for her hand. Her charm and technique kept the audience on tip toes all through the evening.

Mr. Norman MacDonald, as Spud Brower was the hit of the evening with his lightning changes to the wicker chair, the hat, the quilt at home and a comedian and as the true pal of Grace Darling makes things lively.

Other characters in the play were William Thorwald, a health fanatic, taken by Mr. Cecil Mill. Mrs. Reagh Sudbury had a dual part, as Ma Hawson who surprises the audience as being the long lost Bedoune of Osgood.

The specialties of the evening included a vocal solo sweetly rendered by little Glennie Sudbury. Instrumental music was played by George B. Freeman, violinist, Mr. Mill and Harry Cousins, harmonica; William Duran, guitar; and Mrs. Russell MacKay, pianist. Mr. Rocco Walker accompanied by the audience with a vocal solo.

The play was under the direction of Mr. Norman MacDonald and was highly spoken of by all.

Mr. B. Freeman presided in his usual genial manner.

The singing of the National Anthem brought a most enjoyable evening to a fitting close.

Text Of Speech Before Senate

OTTAWA, May 18.—(CP)—Following is the text of the King's speech in the senate today at the ceremony of assent to bills.

Honorable members of the senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

I thank you sincerely for your address received on my arrival at Quebec. The Queen and I deeply appreciate your loyal and affectionate messages.

I am very happy that my visit to Canada affords me the opportunity of meeting in parliament assembled, the members of both houses. No ceremony could more completely symbolize the free and equal association of the nations of our commonwealth. As my father said, on the occasion of his silver jubilee, the unity of the British Empire is no longer expressed by the supremacy of the time-honored parliament that sits at Westminster. It finds expression in the free association of nations enjoying common principles of government, a common attachment to ideals of peace and freedom, and bound together by a common allegiance to the crown.

The first time I have been deeply touched by the warmth of the welcome accorded us since our arrival in Canada. We are greatly looking forward to visiting the various provinces and, before our return, to paying a brief visit to the United States.

It is my earnest hope that my present visit may give my Canadian people a deeper conception of their unity as a nation. I hope also that my visit to the United States will help to maintain the very friendly relations that exist between that great country and the nations of the commonwealth.

These visits, like the one recently made by the Queen and myself to the continent of Europe, will be viewed as an expression of the spirit of our peoples which seeks ardently for closer friendship and better relations not only with our kindred but with the peoples of all nations and races.

Honorable members of the senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

May the blessing of divine providence rest upon your labors and upon your realm of Canada.

WEEP FOR NATURE

The rejected suitor was standing before her, listening to her elaborate explanations of her decision. "I must have made myself quite plain," she said.

He sighed. "It's only fair to give nature the credit for that."

WELCOME STRANGER

"Jack, dear," she murmured, "I hardly know how to tell you, but soon—soon there will be a third sharing of this home—coming to live with us next week."

"My darling," he cried, "are you certain?"

"Positive," she replied. "I had a letter from mother this afternoon saying she was coming to live with us next week."

FIRE HAZARD GREAT

FREDERICTON, May 19.—The forest fire hazard in New Brunswick was considered dangerous tonight, with woods drying rapidly in absence of heavy rain within recent weeks. Thrilling Scene

Most thrilling and emotional of the scenes within the Parliament building came when Their Majesties, centre of a long and brilliant procession, were walking down the Hall of Fame, and re-echoed through the high arched corridors.

Crowds hung in the balconies and lined the main foyer beneath the peace tower and as Their Majesties appeared there was a spontaneous singing of the National Anthem, which was heard in the corridors through the high arched corridors.

Troops lined the route from Government House to Parliament Hill. Thousands lined up along the way and crowded into the open arena of lawn and plaza before the main building. Promptly at 3 P. M. E.D.T., the royal car with its constant threat of rain, entered the grounds through the centre gate.

Royal Salute

A royal salute of 21 guns fired from the ancient Province of the hills announced Their Majesties' arrival. Through solid lines of soldiery the car, flying the royal ensign and escorted before and behind by the mounted and on foot of the Princess Louise Dragoons, circled the square and drew up before the Peace Tower.

A company of Governor General's Foot Guards in red tunics and fur busbies stood in two lines across the entrance. Their Majesties, in the hand played "National Anthem. His Majesty wore the same Field Marshal's uniform he wore on his arrival in Ottawa earlier today.

Inside the car, his majesty had been in position for hours. The building rang with clanking tread of brilliantly uniformed officials and military officers while every vantage point was occupied by those not privileged to seats within the Chamber itself.

Great Royalty

Prime Minister MacKenzie King and Hon. Daniel Dandurand, Minister of the Interior, in the Senate, dressed in Privy Councillor uniforms of dark blue, gold braided tunics, and gaiters, entered the Chamber, greeted Their Majesties when they stepped under the portal of the main entrance.

Some 25 brightly uniformed officers, aides-de-camp and honorary aides and the King's personal staff formed up in the foyer into two files with Their Majesties in the Senate Chamber. Within the Senate Chamber was the huge circular crimson cushion, the woodwork which, save the seven justices of the Supreme Court of Canada, headed by Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff. Based on either side were the seats for Senators and their wives, the diplomatic corps members in the brilliant court uniforms, the members of the Church in Ottawa in their robes, and women in many colored evening gowns.

Brilliant Spectacle In Senate

OTTAWA, May 19.—(CP)—Cheers resounded through marble halls today when King George and Queen Elizabeth, escorted by magnificent uniformed aides, entered the centre block of the Parliament Buildings and walked slowly to the Senate chamber where Their Majesties gave royal assent to bills and made a short speech.

Parliamentarians joined newspapermen and women in a lobby to obtain a preview of Their Majesties, whom they saw later when called to the bar to hear some of their seasonal orations proclaimed law. The scene was a rich setting of majestic splendor. The Queen walked regally beside her scarlet-tinted King, her robe of state, of white silk, jeweled in a rich setting of majestic splendor. The Queen walked regally beside her scarlet-tinted King, her robe of state, of white silk, jeweled in a rich setting of majestic splendor.

Royal Assent

Dr. L. P. Gauthier, assistant clerk of the Senate then bowed to the Throne and announced: "Your Majesty, the Senate and the House of Commons have passed certain bills to which we humbly ask Your Majesty's assent." In French, repeating the phrase in French, "I have the honor to inform you, Your Majesty, that the Senate and the House of Commons have passed certain bills to which we humbly ask Your Majesty's assent."

Clerk Moyer replied "His Majesty thanks his loyal subjects, accepts their benevolence and assents to this bill."

In all cases, the phrases were repeated in French. Next followed the King's delivery in English and French of the brief address prepared for him. The King read slowly, frequently lifting his eyes from the document to look about the chamber.

Leave Chamber

At the conclusion of the speech the Speaker of the Commons bowed to the Throne. His Majesty lifted his hat and the Queen bowed, as the Commons broke apart, to let the Speaker and the Mace lead them back to their own chamber.

Then the King's aides, the ladies in waiting and the Black Rod Majesties who left the chamber in the same order and by the same route as they entered.

All these proceedings had been carried out on almost complete silence on the part of the spectators. But when the procession passed out into the Hall of Fame cheering, unrestrained and loud, echoed through the corridors and a spontaneous singing of the National Anthem rang through the building in the most heart-touching outpouring of emotion the afternoon had brought.

Appearance of Their Majesties beneath the high arch of the Peace Tower was the signal for prolonged cheering from the thousands assembled on the plaza. Banners were hushed only while the band played the National Anthem as Their Majesties stood together on the step.

At conclusion of the anthem the Queen turned and impulsively shook hands with Mr. Mackenzie King and Senator Dandurand, then turned and with His Majesty, entered the royal car with one last wave of the surrounding crowd.

The Royal Canadian Dragoons formed the mounted guard for the return to Rideau Hall. They formed up about the car and set off at a brisk canter down the hill, out the centre gate and back along the route they had followed only an hour before. A second royal salute marked Their Majesties' departure from the grounds.

As a final salute to Their Majesties the strains of the National Anthem rang out from the carillon in the Peace Tower.

Trooper With Guard Unseated

(By The Canadian Press)

OTTAWA, May 19.—A haughty trooper of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards mounted escort lost every shred of dignity by tumbling ignominiously from his horse here today immediately behind the state carriage bearing Their Majesties triumphantly through lanes of cheering citizens.

Pennoned lance erect, chin up, and tall plume on his brass helmet waving gracefully, the Dragoon trotted smartly behind the royal carriage along the Rideau Canal, which was crowded with yachts.

A shrill siren on one of the boats frightened a horse. Up went the horse's head and down on the pavement went the Dragoon. In that one mortifying moment he lost his seat in the saddle, his gleaming helmet, his lance, his dignity—and his nerve.

The troop trotted on and his shamed mount hastily followed them. The Dragoon ran back to pick up his lance, then dove into the oblivion of the crowd.

LEAVE HUSBAND HOME WHEN BUYING HAT

Advising women on how to shop for hats, a well-known stylist said: "I'd say make up your mind first of all what you want to look like. Then go to a good milliner, and let her put her hand in her hands. She also urged shoppers to leave girl friends and husbands at home, declaring that, "Of course there are exceptions, but the aver-

King And Queen

The moment had arrived and this one homely touch was all that was needed to make it perfect.

A few moments later the King and Queen stepped down to the red carpet spread from the omnibus enclosure and shook hands with Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and others of the Government, all resplendent in court uniforms.

A gasp of unrestrained admiration went up from those fortunate enough to be close to the royal pavilion when the Queen stepped forward to receive a bouquet of roses from the wife of Mayor Stanley Lewis. The beauty and grace of the Queen and the kindly bearing of the monarch went straight to the people's hearts and they gave vocal evidence of that fact almost continuously.

Dramatic Feature

A significant and dramatic feature of the arrival was the sudden appearance of the sun through light and rain-heavy clouds, almost at the moment Their Majesties alighted from the train. It was only a brief respite from the bleakness of the day but it provided a thrilling interlude that brought exclamations from all sides.

Disdaining the weather, Their Majesties were dressed lightly and their royal landau, drawn by four postillioned horses, was opened so that the thousands lining the route would not be disappointed.

A constant wave of cheering that could be heard a mile away followed the slow course of the royal carriage, guarded front and rear by mounted dragoons, through the federal district system of parkways around the southern limits of the city, along the old Rideau Canal, up past the National War Memorial which the King will dedicate Sunday, and along the Ottawa River to Government House.

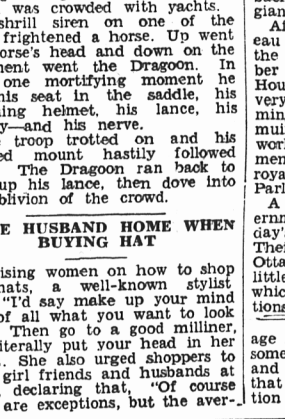

Have Little Rest

There was little rest for Their Majesties. Immediately after their arrival the King received Daniel C. Roper, United States Minister to Canada who is newly arrived, and presented his credentials personally, and other members of the diplomatic corps paid their respects. Her Majesty received the wives of the ministers and Mrs. Smerous Farnham, sister of the bachelor Baron Silvercruys, Belgian minister.

After a quiet luncheon at Rideau Hall Their Majesties attended the function in the Senate Chamber and returned to Government House only to face another but very informal ceremony when they mingled freely with Lord Tweedsmuir's guests at a reception to the working newspapermen and women who are travelling on the royal tour and the members of the Parliamentary Press Gallery.

A state dinner tonight in Government House completed the day's program, a heavy one for Their Majesties who visit to Ottawa had been shortened to a little more than two days into which has been crowded the functions planned for four days.
