MORNING SMOCK.

On the lines of the smock coat for morning wear is a short smock slip to take the place of breakfast jacket or morning blouse. These short smocks fall just to the hip and have a loose blouse belt to hold the loose, smocked garments in trimmed lines on the figure. The smartest models are of white or tan khaki-kool, an all silk pongee, with the smocking done by hand with brown or leaf green silk. Elbow sleeves and a low turnover collar make the smock comfortable on summer mornings.

GLOVE NOVELTIES.

Gloves vary little from season to season, save in the detail of popular length. The long sleeve of fashion has brought the short one-button glove back to prominence, and these are offered in everything from chamols, always a practical summer favorite, to the finest and softest of kid. In novelties, the most effective and attractive things are the white walking gloves, with a line of black or color introduced into the stitching on their backs. Other gloves of heavy white or black silk have a narrow plaited frill trimming the edges. The elbow and three-quarters length sleeves are not entirely taboo, and there is still a considerable sale for long gloves, though for ordinary purposes the long sleeve and the short glove are most in evidence.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

TORONTO, Sept. 14.—The board of management of the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada, held one of the largest meetings in its history yesterday afternoon in St. James Cathedral parish hall. The Primate, the Archbishop of Rupert's Land presided.

The treasurer's report was for eight months, from January to September, in which he stated that $14,824 was asked for on apportionment, $25,823 had been received to the beginning of September. For Jewish work $13,068 had been asked for, and $5,378 received. An additional $6,440 had been received for special objects.

THE HAZARDS OF FARMING

Farming has always been a hazardous business. Fire and frost, and flood; wind, and hail, and drouth; blight, and the hordes of insect enemies, have destroyed the crops since man began tilling the soil.

"Yet, there's always some sort of a crop left," says a friend who lost a major portion of his shocked wheat in the July freshet. "All we can do is to put the seed in the ground and cultivate it the best we can, and leave the harvest to the will of the Lord. These rich bottom lands will overflow. That's why they are rich."

And with all its hazards, farming is perhaps the most stable and substantial of all businesses. They say that 90 per cent of the business fail. We have always suspected these statistics, but certainly a much smaller proportion of farmers are sold out under the hammer.

There is no starvation in the country, and few cases of charity, outside of the infirm and helpless. The problem of unemployment is not pressing and we do not lie awake nights wondering if we can get the money to pay next month's rent.—Farm Life.

HIS MUSE IS ROTTEN TOO

A local amateur gardener, on examining the results of his first efforts at raising radishes, retired to the solitude of the wood shed and with a pencil stub scrawled the following sorrowful lines:

"I sowed some radish seeds last spring I'm now inclined to use words biddish My radishes are full of worms, Also the worms are full of radish."

SYMPATHY.

(The Westminster Gazette.)

These splendid lines were written by the Chief Stoker of one of H. M. torpedo boat destroyers at present in the North Sea:

The middle watch. A wicked night With storm and driving sleet; A grim destroyer fights her way Through breaking seas and blinding spray.

Alert and ready for "The Day" That's promised to our Fleet.

A gun's crew standing by their gun The spray completely drenches; They stick it out—they do at sea, And one man to his chum says he: "What a cold bitter night, it must be For fellows in the trenches!"

LATEST FROM THEATRES

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE, BOSTON.

Next week the lively French force, "The Girl in the Taxi" will be seen at the Castle Square Theatre played by Mary Young and the Craig Players. It is one of the merriest and sprightliest forces that ever was born in Vienna, embellished in Paris and finally presented in America.

Mignon is the girl in the taxicab, but is not so much around her as the innocent-appearing with an old scientist that the plot revolves. Then there is a reprobate of a father who all fancy a pillar of society; a son who meets his father when he goes on his first party to a fashionable restaurant; the feminine companions of both who for various reasons have no desire to be seen, and many others with grievances or peccadilloes they are striving vainly to escape.

This piece created a sensation abroad when it was produced and repeated its success in New York and on the road. Miss Young will have the lead, William P. Carleton, Betty Barnicot, Theodore Friebeus, Donald Meek, Al Roberts, Mrs. Vida Crowley, Justine Adams, and Robert Capron will be in the cast.

COL. DAVID CARNEGIE LEAVES FOR NEW YORK

(Special to the Guardian.)
OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—Col. David Carnegie of the Shell Committee, left for New York this evening to confer with Mr. D. A. Thomas, Lloyd George's representative in America. It is understood Mr. Carnegie's mission will be to confer with Mr. Thomas as to the making of further British contracts for shells in Canada.

While the Shell Committee will make no statement that further large contracts will be placed here, the financing of these orders being rendered less difficult by the expected improvement in the exchange situation consequent on the visit of the British Commission to New York.

BRITISH CABINET DEBATES CONSCRIPTION

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, Sept. 14.—Official admission was made to-day for the first time that the British Cabinet is seriously debating the question of conscription. This announcement was made in the Commons when Parliament re-opened today by Premier Asquith. The subject was raised when a motion for adjournment was made. It was brought up by both opponents and advocates of conscription.

Premier Asquith finally arose to announce "this is not a matter which has escaped the attention of the Government. When the Government without undue delay and with due deliberation which the gravity of the subject demands, have arrived at their conclusion, they will be presented to the House and then become a subject of Parliamentary discussion."

The Premier expressed his regret at the question. The best way in which this country shall meet the call to bring the war to a successful conclusion had become a matter of public controversy. He hoped there would be no further debate on this subject for present.

ATTENTION DIRECTED TO BALKAN SITUATION

(Special to the Guardian.)

Partial mobilization of the Roumanian troops has been ordered to meet the concentration of Austrian troops at Transylvania. According to reports from Athens it is understood in Sofia that Germany demands permission for the passage of Austro-German troops through Roumanian territory. The delivery by Roumania of various supplies amounting to $40,000,000 to relieve the tenacious of the Balkan situation is reported in Athens. It is also reported that Germany and Serbia to consider joint action in case of an Austro-German attack on Roumania. Bulgaria is said not to be included in the negotiations in view of the Turko-Bulgarian agreement.

GERMAN LOSSES IN SUBMARINES ARE IRRETRIEVABLE

LONDON, Sept. 15.—The tolltale wake they leave behind is responsible for the losses of German submarine, according to the Daily News, which adds: "The losses have been more than formidable, they are irretrievable. The submarine leaves a peculiar trail on the surface marked by air bubbles. Auxiliary boats follow this curious wake which seamen learn to recognize, although it is not easily distinguishable in rough weather. Twenty three hundred trawlers are now engaged in the submarine hunt and constantly patrolling the waters around the British Isles."

HAMBURG-AMERICAN LINE IN CONTEMPT

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—A fine of $700 for contempt of court was imposed yesterday on the Hamburg-American Steamship Company by Judge Veeder, of the Federal Court in Brooklyn, for refusal to answer questions in a suit for damages brought by the owners of two other steamship companies.

Two of the questions which the Hamburg-American Line declined to answer were: "Did the Hamburg-American Line load and dispatch from this and other ports of the United States coilers with cargoes destined for German cruisers in the Atlantic?" and "Did Captain Boy-Ed, naval attaché of the German Embassy, direct the super-cargoes of these coilers, themselves German naval reservists, to divert the vessels from their stated courses so as to meet with the German ships of war?"

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND SEA

"GLORIOUS SUPERMEN"

During the attack on the German positions north of Ypres in which the Lahore Division of the Indian Army Corps was employed from April to May, many instances of individual gallantry came to light of which the following are typical. On April 26 the 1st Wilde's Rifles, a regiment which throughout this campaign has most gallantly upheld the reputation of the Indian Army in every action in which it has been engaged, formed the centre battalion of the front line of the Ferozepore Brigade, the regiment being under the command of Major T. J. Williams, D. S. O. On the left of the regiment were the Connaught Rangers in touch with the French Colonial troops, on the right were the 129th Baluchis, the line being continued by the Jullundur Brigade. The position to be assaulted was an extremely strong one and the assaulting force labored under heavy disadvantages. Owing to the limited time at our disposal it was impossible to reconnoitre the ground in a satisfactory manner, and little was known of the exact position of the German line beyond the fact that it was somewhere on the opposite ridge about 750 yards distant.

Tornado of Fire

The ground to be covered by the assaulting force was devoid of cover, rose slightly for the first 500 yards, then dipped and ended in a gradual upward slope towards the German position which commanded too whole line of advance. The enemy, needless to say, had had ample unpleasant fact which was soon proved by the accuracy of his fire. During the first 500 yards the casualties were fairly numerous from shrapnel and rifle fire but the ground was covered by short rapid rushes in fine style. On crossing the first ridge the regiment came under an absolute tornado of fire of every description, shrapnel, machine-gun, rifle, and last, but not least high explosive shells filled with asphyxiating gas. From this point onwards men began to fall rapidly, but still the gallant regiment rested on, losing, of course to some extent its formation, partly owing to the heavy casualties and partly because the brigade on the right was crowding it out. The murderous nature of the fire can be gauged by the fact that when the bottom of the slope was reached, at a point some 900 yards from the start, the commanding officer, Major Williams had been wounded, also Captain Radford, Lieut. Bainbridge had been knocked out by an asphyxiating shell and Captain Mahon had been hit in the knee but refused to report himself wounded and carried on until the end of the attack. In the face of these losses the attack was pressed to a point about 800 yards from the German trenches.

Officers Killed

Here Major Duhan, Captain Mackie, and Captain Banks, of the Guides, who was attached to the regiment, were all killed, as were also Subadar Badawa

Dast 58th Cokes Rifles (F.F.) attached to 57th Rifles, a most gallant Indian officer, who already held the Indian Order of Merit, Second Class, for his services on the North-West Frontier, remained behind in the British trench. Undaunted by the ceaseless fire which was poured upon him, he collected all the men he could find, amongst them many who were slowly recovering from the effects of gas. During his retirement after nightfall he picked up many men who were in each successive line of old trenches and brought them in. This officer had led his platoon with the greatest gallantry throughout the attack and subsequently assisted in bringing in eight wounded British and Indian officers, although he was exposed in doing so to a very heavy fire, being himself slightly wounded. For his most conspicuous bravery Jemadar Mir Dast has now been awarded the Victoria Cross, being the fourth Indian soldier to receive this high honor.

INSURRECTION SPREADING IN PORTUGAL

PARIS, Sept. 14.—A new insurrectionary movement has broken out not only in Lisbon, but in the principal provincial cities of Portugal, says a despatch to the Journal from Madrid. Despatches from the Portuguese frontier on September 12th reported an insurrectionary movement at Braga and Casias. Martial law proclaimed in northern Portugal on August 29th to suppress a monarchical movement.
