Not After Honor But, Cold Cash

(United Press.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Falling by every other method to force champions to fight, the New York Boxing Commission is going to put them on their honor to observe the rule requiring the defence of titles once in each six months.

The theory is laudable, but, like a lot of other high-minded ideas, it will not work where drastic measures have failed.

The boxing business is not totally without honor and the men engaged in the profession are not all rogues, but there is too much money involved in the sport to place such a premium upon honor.

Champions and their managers feel that there is nothing dishonorable in refusing to follow a rule that has not been handed down with the old traditions of the fight game and some of them may figure that they will be in a better position to eat when they have a little money in their pocket rather than a heart full of honor and high ideals.

Tennis and golf champions, it has been pointed out, must defend their titles annually. If they do not enter the championship tournaments, they are champions no longer.

Track and field champions are forced by the A. A. U. to enter the annual championships and defend their titles.

Baseball champions have to fight through 154 games each season and then engage the champion of the other league to win the world's title, and it's rather a rich prize.

There is one big obstacle that prevents the application of these rules to boxing, however.

Tennis, golf and track and field athletes are sports. Professional baseball still possesses an element of sport, but there is nothing in boxing but commercialized business.

Boxing is the business of fighting for money and taking no chances. Sport involves the taking of chances, or there would be no sport.

National organization, it has been pointed out frequently, is the only solution of the problem as it is found in boxing. But it is not a sure solution.

In Europe, the International Boxing Federation assumes the control of the game, but its rulings are accepted generally only in the countries where the rulings are beneficial.

The International Federation acknowledges Emilio Spalla as the heavyweight champion of Europe, but in every country, with the exception of Italy, he is looked upon as the biggest punk of Europe.

England has a good working plan of keeping the titles of ring champions straight through the awards of the Londale belts. Possessors of the belts are regarded as the class champions of England and they have to live up to the deed of title to retain their championship emblem.

It would take a good many years, perhaps more than boxing will live in this country, to build up the prestige for any belts that might be offered in this country that are attached to the Londale belts.

The "Police Gazette" belts were prized in the old days in this country but they have passed out of circulation.

Tex Rickard offered a lot of belts, but his purpose was to sell fish and they were used as a club over the boxers who won them.

SILVER FOX SKINS TO MESSRS C. M. LAMPSON & CO., PER PARCEL POST

Silver Fox intended for Messrs. C. M. Lampson & Co., London, should be packed in parcels weighing not over 11 lbs. per package, including the wrapper the outer covering should be of unbleached muslin or some similar fabric. On this should be plainly marked the following address:

Messrs. C. M. Lampson & Co., 64 Queen St., London, E. C. 4, England.

In addition, the name of the shipper should be plainly marked on the outside wrapper, to enable Messrs. C. M. Lampson & Co., to identify the package or arrival.

Each package should also be marked with a number on the outside, starting from (1) and following with the next number, until the close of the season.

At the time of making shipment, letters should be written to Alfred Frazer, 212 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., and England, stating the number of packages forwarded and the number of skins in each package; also the amount of insurance required on each package.

Goods consigned to Messrs. C. M. Lampson & Co., may be insured under the terms of their open policies from the time they leave shippers' possession until delivered to their final destination, it being only necessary to advise Messrs. C. M. Lampson & Co., or Alfred Frazer by mail at the time the shipment goes forward.

PRINCE EDWARD THEATRE TONIGHT

V. E. Taplin, who will lecture on Foot and Shoe Problems, and conduct the Style Show in the Strand Theatre tonight, is the pioneer of Corrective and Protective Footwear in Canada, and is today accepted as the leading authority and advocate in the world on the subject.

The methods employed in his business are said to be years in advance of modern shoe fitting methods. These will be demonstrated by him to all who call at Alley & Co., Ltd. Mr. Taplin believes in fitting the foot in the proportion of the foot itself, and provides nine (9) widths of shoes in all sizes for this purpose. Careful attention is given to all peculiarities of the structure of the foot, as well as to conditions of corns, weakness, etc., etc. The experience of Mr. Taplin has proven that there are very few feet beyond satisfactory repair, providing they are properly fitted in shoes possessing scientific lines.

Mr. Taplin may be consulted at Alley & Co., Ltd., Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

The lecture and style show tonight is free, but a silver collection will be taken at the door, in aid of the two Orphanages. 11.

which every right thinking citizen should have an interest in, namely, the necessity of having some kind of a suitable place where our delinquent boys and girls may be placed so that they may have a chance to become useful men and women.

 L. E. SHAW

Mr. Shaw was highly complimented upon his report by Chief Justice Mathieson, Mr. Justice Hazard and others, the report being adopted as read.

President's Report

Hon. Dr. McMillan said the work of the past year differed but little from the preceding years. This was the 14th annual meeting of the Society, the board of management having met faithfully every month. Eleven neglected and dependent children were specifically dealt with during the past year, but it was not deemed necessary to make any of these cases wards of the Society.

The activities of the organization concern neglected, delinquent and dependent orphaned children. The two Orphanages provide means of dealing with the latter cases and these institutions have been a great help to the Society. The neglected and dependent children are a big problem and during the past year one would be inclined to think that there has been evident a wave of petty crime and disrespect for law among the youth of the city. When children are found absolutely neglected the Society can deal with them by regular process of law and they are placed as wards of the Society in homes throughout the country.

"Up to the present I, for one, and I think the most of the members will agree with me, have not been satisfied that this particular work has been done well enough. We have always made an investigation of the homes in which our wards have been placed and we have exacted a certain standard and satisfied ourselves that those homes were suitable for the placing of young children. During our history we have placed between fifty-five and sixty children; but on account of our deficiency of revenue we have not been able to keep in close touch with those homes. We have all been endeavoring to obtain more money and we have not been successful until very recently. Recently two or three things have happened which have shown us there must be visitations by a responsible agent to these homes. We have known cases where some of our wards have changed homes without our knowledge, and some where wards have been taken out of their foster homes. The duty of looking after these fifty odd wards is in itself an important business.

Neglected and dependent children, if not looked after, very soon graduate into the next class—the delinquent class. This is another important matter. In the past we have been in the habit of sending these children out of the province. There is a satisfactory Protestant home for girls at Truro. There are industrial homes at St. John and sole ourselves with that abortion. We should have been very happy to reach an agreement with our Allies upon a settlement of the reparations question providing we were not made to bear the entire cost of it."

"We now must revert to the treaty. The reparations commission will hear the Germans. It will name experts as it wishes for the purpose of re-evaluating Germany's capacity to pay today, tomorrow, and later. Every time it believes it necessary it will fix the amount judged equitably, and with the guarantees we hold, which we will abandon only against final payment. We are well able to bring Germany to terms.

"In defending our rights we are also maintaining the rights of our Allies, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Rumania, and Yugoslavia. It is the status of the world which is at stake, we intend to remain guardians of this. We do not despair of our friends but this is the right method. Recent events already have demonstrated that we are right to a great extent and future events will aid us in completing the demonstration.

Government proposals will appeal strongly to them. The Labour party is condemning the Government for not re-establishing the Agricultural wage boards, which it is claimed, offer labourers the only satisfactory assurance that fair wages will be paid. Farmers, however, always dislike the wage boards and the Government are anxious to keep the favour of the farmers.

The second interim report of the tribunal of economists appointed by the Government to investigate agriculture was published yesterday. The tribunal makes subsidy proposals similar to those of the Government, but it strongly urges the re-establishment of the wage boards tribunal and says, "we could not contemplate a subsidy to agriculture unless a considerable proportion of the benefit was enjoyed by agricultural workers."

The labour party is making an aggressive campaign for the farm workers' vote.

Mr Neil McLeod, K. C. on Recent Biography

The splendid series of intellectual entertainments which are being given in the Civic Building each Tuesday evening under the auspices of the I. O. D. E. seem to improve with each meeting. Those that were unfortunate enough to miss this treat on last Tuesday evening, have missed that which they will not have the privilege of hearing again for some time, if ever.

The speaker was Mr. Neil McLeod, K. C., who discoursed on his studies in recent biography. Summerside is fortunate in having as a citizen, a man of Mr. McLeod's attainment in literary lore, and his who is willing to share with his fellow citizens the knowledge which he has obtained through his extensive reading. Mr. Creel MacArthur, Mr. L. A. presided in the usual genial manner, and referred to Mr. McLeod in his introductory remarks, as the dean of literary men in Summerside.

Before the lecture a well executed piano duet was given by Mrs. Douglas Gordon and daughter Miss Jean, also two songs, "The March of the Cameron Men," and "Lucky Jim" was rendered by Mr. Ewen Nicholson, in his usual excellent style.

At the outset, Mr. McLeod referred to the important place which biographical writings hold today in our current literature. He referred to the fact that in late years especially, there has been a great number and variety of biographical sketches and miniature work pictures of notable men and women, which class of writing, seems to meet a public taste and supplies a popular demand, otherwise it would not be published in such abundance.

The speaker thought that it might not be improbable that in this movement may be found the beginning of a recoil from the plethora of fictitious characters, that one meets with in modern fiction, at any rate he declared it to be a new factor in our literature. He now turned to enumerate some of the works of this class that he knew of within his personal knowledge, the first of these being the work of Lord Bryce, "Studies in Contemporary Biography," comprising twenty sketches of some of the most prominent leaders of thought and action of his own time. Another by Stirling Taylor, "Modern British Statesmen," one by Lytton Strachey "Eminent Victorians." Mr. McLeod then proceeded to give a review of a few of these volumes. Of the twenty sketches in the Bryce volume, six, he said, dealt with eminent English statesmen, the first in the group being Lord Beaconsfield, and the last, W. E. Gladstone. Others dealt with great jurists and historians, and others again with great ecclesiastics and others with men of letters and leaders in ethical knowledge. Of Bryce himself the speaker paid a high tribute and dwelt on his description of such eminent types as Archbishop Tait and Cardinal Manning, and the notables described by Strachey and Taylor, such as Robert Walpole, the Two Pitts, Edmund Burke and Lord Beaconsfield, Florence Nightingale, Dr. Arnold of Rugby and General Gordon. All of these played a more or less prominent part, and most of them a leading part in the life and destiny of the English people.

We had already formed, when we supposed to be fairly accurate and concise estimates of their life and work and of their place in history, said Mr. McLeod, but if the views presented to us by these volumes were to be accepted, then we

TOURIST TRAVEL IN BERLIN SMALLEST IN MANY YEARS

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—Berlin attracted only 88,850 visitors during September, and of these 9,354 were foreigners. America furnished 1,215 of these visitors, but showed a larger number than any other foreign country. Sweden was second with 844. Austria supplied 870 tourists and Russia 859. There were only 112 from France and Belgium together.

These figures are the lowest monthly record which has been reported for several years, and they spell disaster for hotelkeepers.

Many of the larger hotels now have entire floors closed up, and hotel employees are finding it difficult to get positions.

The number of visitors to Berlin in August was 112,290, which was a great decline over August of last year. Increased railway fares have undoubtedly done much to discourage Germans from traveling. Trains all seem to be crowded, but the number of trains has been greatly reduced.

Well, if they raise the price of coal 90 cents a ton why not save the ton and buy 90 cents' worth of kerosene? You can do it with one of these oil heaters. We do not mean that they will entirely take the place of coal, though some use them that way, but they will cut your coal bill down to less than you'd believe possible. With an oil heater you can let the coal heating plant come up slow in the morning and run it on less fuel.
