Making Clothes From Goatskins

LONDON, April 1 (CP)—British women have discovered a new and legal way of overcoming clothes rationing by making clothes of skins, which are coupon-free. They are using rabbit, lamb and goat skins, suede, brilliantly dyed in scarlet, emerald and orange, and skivies (the grain portion of sheep skin) grained to look like real pigskin. Many London shops have counters offering these skins and one Oxford street store sells nothing else.

British Barges Play Important Role In War

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, March 30 (CP)—There's a big merchant fleet in Britain that never goes to sea, but it's playing a role in the war almost as important as the big grey liners which churn through the seven seas. It's Britain's conglomerate of flat-bottomed barges which ply a net-work of canals and inland waterways totalling more than 3,000 miles. Their coming and going is unobtrusive, but it's no less important.
