The DOOM TRAIL

by ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH AUTHOR OF PORTO BELLO GOLD ETC.

WNU SERVICE COPYRIGHT BY BRENTANO'S

(Continued) "The gentleman who proceeded me," began Murray, "and who, I am told, once spent some time in our province many years ago, is unfortunately laboring under a misapprehension of the situation. It is not, my lords, as though we had the misfortune to be at war with France. Through the grace of God, the two countries have now been for some years at peace with one another, and their subjects in the New world have striven not to be behindhand in drawing closer the bonds of trade which in themselves are the best preventive of war."

"We manufacture in this country more goods of a certain kind than we can consume ourselves. These goods are in great demand among the savage tribes which inhabit the interior of North America. Both the French and our own traders have use for these goods in the fur trade, which is growing to be of increasing worth to the London merchants. If we withhold from the French the goods they require for trading with these tribes they will seek them from the manufacturers of the Low Countries and Germany. Thus our merchants at home will be deprived of a profitable trade, and we provincials will not be bettered. Also the supply of furs for the London market, much of which comes from the French posts, will be reduced. It seems to me, your lordships, that this prohibitory legislation will only have crippling effects upon trade and hinder the good relations between France and England and their colonies."

He said much more in the same vein, whilst Juggins twisted uneasily in his seat and the attending merchants and even their sleepy lordships hung upon his words. For he was a ready speaker. When he sat down the merchant who acted as master of ceremonies caused a start of surprise, in which I joined, by bringing forward a handsomely dressed gentleman, whose laced coat and gold-hilted sword showed conspicuously in such drab surroundings.

"Twas Raoul de Veulle; yes, Raoul de Veulle, whose mad exploits and escapades, love affairs and gambling debts, had kept all Paris gossiping these past three years and had just driven him into exile, the facts concerning which had been mysteriously secret. I had known De Veulle well.

Now he stood before us, his handsome face smiling bowing low before their interested lordships. In charming, broken English he repeated his brief message. He had been requested by his excellency, the French ambassador, to appear in this matter in answer to a plea offered by the petitioners to the ambassador for corroborative testimony to the justice of their assertions from a responsible French source.

He himself—he shrugged apologetically—as it happened was Canadian-born; he was just starting upon his way to take up an appointment in the Canadian government. He agreed unhesitatingly with what Monsieur Murray had stated. On behalf of the French government and of the Canadian authorities he begged to say that such legislation as New York wished to have perpetuated would have most unhealthy effects upon the trade and politics of their two countries.

Master Juggins sprang to his feet, his honest face aflush. "Many of the assertions of Master Murray and—" Pelham waved him to his seat. "We have heard enough," pronounced the whining voice. "You have no other first hand witness from overseas?" "No, your lordships," admitted Juggins reluctantly.

"Then further talk is fruitless," he went on, while his colleagues nodded their sleepy assent. "We are agreed that there seems to be some difference of opinion concerning this measure. Were it not for the fact that his majesty's governor of New York appears to favor the bill, we should consider the case made out against it unanswerable. But in view of Governor Burnet's approval we are resolved that the matter shall be referred back to him with a request for a full report upon the issue raised and pending the receipt of this report and a decision being reached his majesty's government will not take action in the premises. What is the next case for consideration?"

The petitioners, much gratified, flocked around Murray and his apologetic servant, and I followed Master Juggins from the chamber and out to Whitehall. "What will happen next?" I asked. "If I know Governor Burnet as well as I think I do, Murray and his French friends will draw slight comfort from their triumph today. Remember, he is three thousand miles from London and therefore able to think for himself. With you to help him—" "I felt something brush against my coat sleeve and looked around, I had just time to see the back of a gaudy red coat and a woolly black head, crowned by an ornate cocked hat, disappearing in the crowd.

"Do you see?" I said. "Aye," responded Juggins grimly; I might have known it. Well, 'tis a lesson in time. We will not forget it." We turned from Whitehall into the crowded Strand. "Murray will figure that this delay gives him time to bribe and buy his will, either in Governor Burnet's council or in the government here," continued Master Juggins. "At the worst he will think that he should be able to withstand the law's execution for several years and that in time much may be done—aye, much may be done, and in more than one way," he concluded grimly. "Then doubtless Murray will send at once a swift messenger to New York so that his friends may set to work in his interest," I suggested. Juggins stepped abruptly in the center of the footway.

"No, he will go himself, 'Tis too important for trusting to another. That was well thought of, Master Harry. We must not let him get ahead of us. You must sail on the first passage available. Do you follow me." And he started off as fast as his legs could carry him, bumping and prodding his person against all who did not move from his path. (To be Continued)

Ah! That is coffee!

NOTHING in the world so good as really good coffee. But good coffee starts with the bean. It must be properly grown, selected, blended, and roasted. Then it must be packed in sealed containers so that it is certain to be fresh when used. Try King Cole Coffee. You will find it as good as King Cole Tea.

The many friends of Mr. Roy Woolner are sorry to hear he is confined to his home with a severe sore throat, but hope to see him around soon again.

GATHER FOR POW WOV

SARNIA, Ont., Feb. 28.—Indians from the various reservations in the province were assembling here for a modern "pow wow." They have been called together to discuss the finding of human bones recently on Walpole Island and pass upon reports that they were those of the famed Shawnee chieftain, Tecumseh.

The meeting will take place in a little red council house overlooking the banks of the historic St. Clair River.

William Peters, 70 year old chief of Walpole Island Indians, tonight expressed the view that there was little doubt that the bones were those of the great Indian warrior. He also believed that Walpole Island should be selected as the site for the proposed Tecumseh monument, for on the island repose the remains of many Indians who fell in the war of 1812-14.

Glasgow To Hold First Empire Work

MONTREAL, February 28.—(Special)—Glasgow's first Civic and Empire Week, the big events of the Scottish tourist season this year will be held from May 29 to June 6, and a whole-hearted welcome in the Scottish city is assured to all Canadians who may propose a visit there during this period, it was announced to-day by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

On the opening day of the week, the giant new liner Empress of Britain, Clydeside's greatest shipbuilding achievement, will start for Canada on her maiden voyage, and it was with this noteworthy occasion in mind as well as in recognition of the great part played by the Canadian Pacific in the stimulation of Clydeside's shipbuilding that the Lord Provost, Magistrates and Town Council of Glasgow invited the Canadian Pacific Railway to the medium of conveying their welcome to all Canadians.

During the Civic and Empire Week all Glasgow's municipal activities will be available for inspection. Tours are being arranged to give visitors a view of the city's garden GLENMOLAX S-D-DNE-MAL HTRDU 38,000 houses have been erected by the corporation, while another 7,000 have been built by private firms aided by corporation grants. Almost twenty million pounds have been spent in providing these new homes, which now house a population of about 150,000. Visitors will also have the opportunity of visiting other undertakings of the municipality, including the electricity department, which provides current at average pre-war prices, the gas department, markets, public libraries, art galleries and museums, and many other ventures that are part of Glasgow's progressive development.

Excursions are being arranged to the corporation's Highland estate at Ardgoll, to its picturesque park at Balloch on the shore of Loch Lomond, to Loch Katrine, the source of the city's water supply of 75 million gallons daily, and to the far-famed Trossachs, first extolled in magic verse by Sir Walter Scott.

On the industrial side Glasgow has much to show. Within its bounds anything from a pin to battleship is manufactured, and from its centre radiate lines of communication to every part of the world. The Clyde leads the world in shipbuilding. New ships aggregating half a million tons were launched on this river alone during 1930, a tonnage that was equal to one-sixth of the world's total output and greater than the combined tonnage constructed in Germany and the United States. The shipbuilding yards on the Clyde will be open for inspection by visitors during the Civic and Empire Week, and those who arrive early will see the Empress of Britain, the largest liner built in Great Britain since the war. This liner, which has a tonnage of 42,500 and will be the fastest unit of the Canadian Pacific fleets, is now being completed near the spot where Henry Bell's Comet, a midge of 30 tons and the pioneer of steam navigation, ran aground in 1812.

Kelvin Hall will house an interesting exhibition during the Civic and Empire Week. One third of 220,000 square feet, will be devoted to a display of goods from all parts of the British Empire, while over the remaining space will be displayed working exhibits demonstrating Glasgow's various industries.

The British Open Golf Championship will be decided in June at Carnoustie, and later in the month a yacht from the United States will endeavor to win back from a Glasgow yachtsman the famous Seswenhake Cup in a race on the Firth of Clyde. Later in the month occurs the Clyde Yachting Fortnight, when the best yachts of the British Isles, including the America's Cup contender, Shamrock V, will be seen in action on Glasgow's famous river.

Piles All Gone

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding, protruding piles go quickly and don't come back, if you remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the hemorrhoidal veins causes piles by making the affected parts weak. Baby, a most deadly, salves and cutting fail because only an internal medicine can actually correct these conditions. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in 930 cases, he named it "Pile Cure".
