IN MEMORIAM

In fond and loving memory of the late William J. Bears, who departed this life one year ago today (May 26th).

We cannot say and we will not say that he is dead; he is just away. With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand.

He has wandered into an unknown land. Add to us dreaming how very fair it needs must be, since he lives there.

And we—oh, we, who the saddest years of our life have spent in waiting for the old time step and the glad return.

Think of him faring on, as dear to the love of there, as the love of here.

Think of him as the same, we say that he is not dead; he is just away. Interred by his wife, Catherine Bears, and daughter, Mrs. T. A. Keenan. L-5120

The young people seeking to advance their general education, and the speaker was glad to note in Prince Edward Island an increase in keeping with other countries of the world. There had also been an increase in the teaching staff, and in this the Carnegie Corporation had borne part of the burden in the payment of the salary of Mr. John Croteau in the Economics Department, and Miss Seaman, in the History Department. In addition Mr. John Connolly, Mr. Hazen Wigmore, Miss Helen Ramsay and Mr. Wm. Reddin had been added as juniors on the staff.

Fidelity of Staff

As Principal, Dr. Robertson expressed his admiration for the efforts of the staff all through the session. From Dr. Steele, the Vice-principal to the latest addition, they had worked hard and faithfully six days a week from 8.15 a. m. till 5 or 6 p. m., the first part of the day spent in teaching and that after the noon interval in preparation. "The students were a hard-working, faithful body of young persons, whose attainments were sufficient proof of the work done in the class rooms, and whose conduct, bearing, and attitude were most worthy of praise. Self-help had made possible the attendance of some. Several of these had attained a high standing in classes, some had not reached their proper positions.

Need of Prizes

In stressing the desirability of more prizes and awards for successful students, Dr. Robertson cited the example of Hon. Frank R. Heertz, whose prizes were intended to be of real financial assistance to the students. Many young people who had not attained an academic standing, and who had not been able to continue their education through circumstances, were awaiting opportunities.

While education was a personal matter, it was also a community matter in as much as leadership in the community was required. People should therefore, to the extent of their possibilities, assist promising young people, by providing prizes to all who were worth while. Dr. Robertson cited the case of the University of Glasgow, the large calendar of which was more than half occupied with prizes. More than half of the students of Glasgow were assisted by these donations.

The speaker urged the students not to cease their efforts with commencement. Many would go to teach schools, some to other institutions. These he urged to go on encouraged by the success attained by their predecessors. He mentioned the record of Malcolm Dockerty, who, in graduating this year from Dalhousie had attained the highest marks ever made in the medical school there, and who had made his way largely through self-help; Fred Wigmore, who was also at the head of his class in Dalhousie, gaining distinction in all subjects; Chester Stewart, of Norboro, who more recently had gained highest honours from Prince of Wales College, had won a $300 scholarship, had written a competitive examination and had gained the highest awards available, and who in his first year in medicine, had taken distinction in six subjects, and had also taken an extra subject to occupy his leisure time.

Dr. Robertson urged those who would go to teach, to keep the forward lock, and to keep the open book. He exhorted them to devote themselves to their schools, and to self-development. For the latter purpose there was now available many books under the Carnegie Library Demonstration, which held tremendous educational possibilities. In the second year of the demonstration Miss Bateson intended to give more attention to the schools, and to supply books to the children of school age. Children should be taught not only how to read, but also the reading habit. The speaker appealed to the young teachers to get in close connection with the library for the benefit of the growing child and to talk of the wonderful possibilities of the libraries. The introduction of the libraries, he believed, was the greatest step forward in Prince Edward Island in the last fifty years.

History of College

Mr. H. H. Shaw, Chief Superintendent of Education, briefly reviewed the history of Prince of Wales College. In 1804, the square on which the present building stood was given by deed for the purpose of education, and about 100 years ago the first building had been erected. Just fifty years ago Principal Robinson and the speaker had made their first contact with the institution. At that time 228 had written examinations, and 88, about 40%, had passed. One heard much now about the "death rate." But last year's figures indicate that 703 wrote examinations, and 403 had been four teachers with a class of Wales College, about fifty-five per cent. Fifty years ago there had been four teachers with a class of 109 students. In this class there were about 40 girls and 70 boys. Last year there were about 323 girls and 147 boys. The staff had been increased to twenty-one.

To Raise Standard

The students who entered Prince of Wales College next fall would be required to reach the age of eighteen years before they would receive a teacher's license. There were two ways of raising the standard of teachers—more teacher training at Prince of Wales and the refusal of licenses to applicants less than 18 years old. The standard would be raised to the extent that one more year at Prince of Wales College would be required for teachers. Premier MacMillan in closing referred to the benefits to be derived from the Carnegie Libraries.

LADIES NIGHT AT Y'S MEN'S CLUB

The Y's Men's Club held their "Ladies Night" of the season Thursday night before closing for the summer months. After enjoying a very wholesome supper served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the club, the evening's entertainment started off with singing. The Club President, Mr. A. M. Douglas, presided and first called upon Nell MacLean who welcomed the guests. Mrs. Willard Spencer then rendered a very pleasing solo, followed with a recitation by Miss Ruby MacDougall which received an encore. Next was another solo by Y's Man Peter Crichton which also received an encore. The next item on the program was a stunt put on by Y's Man Ern Clawson which taxed to the utmost some of the long winded orators of the club. A score by Roy Smallman received an encore and a dialogue with Stuart Dickson and A. M. Douglas taking part provided a round of laughs. A sing song and another stunt, followed with a few brief radio flashes by Winchell MacLean which bared a few secrets of some of the club members. The evening's entertainment was brought to a close with remarks by Y's Man Fred Holman, chairman of the program committee and Y's Men, Dr. McLaughlin, Messrs. Reuel LePage and Jim MacFadyen. A vote of thanks was passed to the Ladies Auxiliary for the splendid supper served.

ure. The Principal had said that the building was already taxed to capacity. It was hoped to extend the course along agricultural lines. As His Honour had said agriculture and business were on a par with the professions.

The junior college was not concerned wholly with those who were going into professional work. It had done well to keep the boys and girls in the province two years longer than they otherwise would remain.

The best qualified man possible had been placed directly in charge of normal training, and during the last year more normal training had been given than during any previous year. Prof. Shaw on his travelling scholarship had gathered much valuable information in Scandinavia. One lack in the school system was music, which must no longer be regarded as a fact. In great countries of the world great things formerly regarded as fads were now regarded as essentials. The teaching of music was possible in colleges and schools and was of great value in developing the community spirit. To these ends the Department of Education would be turning its attention in the immediate future.

The results of the examinations had brought disappointment to many, but the people must realize that the standard of education must be raised. In the Press during the last two weeks one read the record of many distinguished boys and girls who were a credit to the island, to the institution. Any person going out from Prince of Wales need not fear competition in the Dominion or anywhere else.
