Canada Banking System Pattern For U. S. Change

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—(Special)—Sir John Aird, president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, just back from the annual meeting of the American Bankers' Association and hopeful of a steady return of normal business conditions, in an interview with The Telegram forecast that the next United States Congress would make important amendments to the United States Banking Act and would a banking system on the lines in force in Canadian banking institutions.

"The banking situation in United States has improved a great deal," Sir John Aird stated. "In my

DEMOCRATS HOPEFUL

Sir John believed that Californians felt that Roosevelt's reputation of Tammany and Hoover's wavering on the prohibition question had strengthened Democratic hopes.

He looked to the Chicago World Fair to stimulate business and pointed out that prior to the 1929 crash, fair promoters secured $10,000,000 from responsible people. He said the money was intact and available for fair purposes.

Sir John stated that he preferred to withhold comment on the Empire preference tariff provisions and that American business men were adopting a policy of watchful waiting before conceding that Empire trade would seriously disrupt United States trade.

HOARDING OVER

Sir John believed that business men had begun to feel that a modified form of the Canadian banking system could be adopted advantageously in each of the 12 Federal Reserve divisions of the United States. He felt that the American banking situation had improved greatly, that hoarding had practically stopped and that the number of important bank failures had been retarded.

"At the beginning of the year there was a panic condition in regard to banking over there but that has been displaced by a fear—there is a great difference between a 'panic condition' and a fear—a fear that on account of the unsettled conditions in other parts of the world, that something might happen that would be reflected adversely in the banking world."

"Is that fear present in Canada?"

"No, I think that the rank and file of people here are more confident in our banking system, although," with a smile, "I see that some people in Ottawa expressed some doubts the other day." Members of the association, he said, seemed to think that we are getting out of the slump and that the upturn would be gradual. "Is there any feeling that the election will bring back prosperity?" "It is a 50-50 proposition," said Sir John
