A ROSY REPORT MADE IN GERMANY

Claims Victory and Uninterrupted Progress in Poland and Capture of 10,000 Prisoners. Cool Admission of Loss of Squadron in South Atlantic Which They Claim to Have Anticipated.

(Special to The Guardian)
BERLIN, Dec. 13.—The occupation by German forces, which were advancing on Warsaw from the North, of Prusany, recently reported unofficially, is said definitely by the official Press Bureau to have been accomplished. This is the most important factor in the latest developments from the Eastern theatre of war and while in itself not important shows the Germans have begun active offensive operations North of the Vistula in the direct line of communication between Wilenberg, East Prussia, and Warsaw. This shows that the advance is directed against the fortified line along the narrow river. If this line were broken the Germans would be in the rear of Warsaw which would exercise a deciding influence on the Polish campaign.

News from South Poland and Galicia makes it clear that notwithstanding certain success is achieved by Germans and Austrians, severe resistance is being encountered everywhere. Evidently the Austrian forces in the Carpathians are too small to clear the Hungarian territory of the enemy alone and must attack and repulse one column after another. The Austrians report 10,000 Russians captured but fail to say within what period, making the report meaningless. Operations in Serbia are also meeting dogged resistance but are proceeding South of Belgrade. The loss of the cruiser squadron off the Falkland Islands is regretted but is hardly a surprise since it was not expected the ships would escape from their pursuers.

WINTER MILD IN NORTHERN RUSSIA

(Special to The Guardian.)
LONDON, Dec. 13.—A Petrograd despatch says that enormous quantities of all sorts of goods from England and elsewhere are awaiting shipment at Archangel. These include half-a-million tons of coal, thousands of tons of herring, machinery, cottons and chemicals. The winter has been exceptionally mild, and it is expected that navigation will remain open until the middle of January with the help of ice-breakers.

POPE'S EFFORTS FOR TRUCE FOR CHRISTMAS FAILED

(Special to The Guardian.)
ROME, Dec. 13.—Observators Romano, the Vatican Organ, referring to efforts of Pope Benedict to bring about a truce during the Christmas season among the warring powers, says: "The August Pontiff, in homage, faith and devotion to Christ the Redeemer, who is the Prince of Peace, also by reason of sentiments of humanity and pity," especially towards the families of combatants, addressed confidentially the belligerent governments to ascertain how they would receive a proposal for a truce during such a solemn festivity as Christmas. All the powers declared they highly appreciated the loftiness of the Pope's initiative. The majority gave their sympathetic adherence to the proposal, but some did not feel able to agree to it. Thus, lacking the necessary unanimity, the Pope has been unable to reach the benevolent result which the paternal heart of his holiness promised himself."

ARRIVAL OF RUSSIAN EMPEROR AT TIFLIS.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 12.—The arrival of the Russian Emperor at Tiflis and the enthusiastic reception he has received in the Caucasus relieves considerable apprehension which has prevailed regarding that section of the country. His arrival at Tiflis is chronicled yesterday.

The apprehension regarding Caucasus was due to the fact that emissaries of the Turks and the Germans had started a propaganda in that region promising the Georgians establishment of the old Georgian kingdom and enlisting Mohammedan sympathy for Turkey.

Nobody doubted the sentiment of the Armenians and the cultured Mohammedans and Georgians, but many doubted the illiterate Georgians and Mohammedans, who constitute three-quarters of the population of the Caucasus. The Emperor's trip and reception have now dispelled all fears.

EXCURSION RATES TO BE RESTORED

Successful Representation by Delegates of the Charlottetown Board of Trade to the Inter- colonial Management Results in Restoration of Saturday Excursions at One Way First Class Fare.

As the result of representations made by the Charlottetown Board of Trade the Management of the Inter-colonial Railway have consented to restore the Saturday excursion first-class fares on the Prince Edward Island Railway.

A deputation from the Board of Trade, consisting of Judge Stewart, President, and Mr. J. P. Gordon, went to Moncton on Saturday to press the matter on Mr. Gutelius, General Manager. As Mr. Gordon had to proceed to Montreal, he had little time to discuss the matter, but Judge Stewart returned a fairly long interview with Mr. Gutelius, who was accompanied by Mr. Hayes and Mr. Melanson.

The Judge pointed out that the Saturday excursion was greatly appreciated by the country people who come to town to do their week-end shopping, and its withdrawal was likely to adversely affect the interests of both the farmers and the merchants. It was further explained that since the abolition of these Saturday returns there had been a falling off of about fifty per cent. in the first-class tickets issued at certain country stations.

In reply Mr. Gutelius stated that the total receipts for passenger tickets did not bear this out, the month of November showing an increase of $700 in passenger traffic over the corresponding month of last year, when the Saturday excursions were in vogue. He also explained that nowhere else on the Intercolonial system were Saturday excursions conceded except in the summer months; moreover, Prince Edward Island enjoyed the privilege of second-class returns all the year round, a privilege unknown elsewhere. The second-class return was equivalent to the single first-class fare, so that if farmers desired to travel on the week-end, there was nothing to hinder them taking advantage of the second-class return tickets.

Judge Stewart rejoined by pointing out that it was mostly ladies who went to town for shopping, and although he admitted the Island was better off in respect to second-class returns than other sections of the Intercolonial, yet it was not customary or always pleasant for ladies to take advantage of that concession. He pleaded that it would be a hardship to lady-shoppers and a loss to merchants were the Saturday excursion fares not restored.

After further discussion, in which Mr. Hayes especially showed every desire to meet the wishes of the Island, Mr. Gutelius conceded the petition of the Board of Trade, and promised that Mr. Melanson would visit the Island on Monday (to-day) to make the necessary arrangements.

Judge Stewart next asked that the Murray Harbour summer train arrangements should be continued throughout the year, but Mr. Gutelius could not see his way to give his consent, although he agreed to a continuance of the Christmas-week arrangements which have been found so advantageous in past years.

IN THE CHURCHES YESTERDAY

In Zion Church last night the pastor, Rev. G. C. Taylor, gave in his sermon, delivered in his typically easy and fluent, withal forceful style, a strong moral lesson which could not fail to appeal to the better and nobler judgment of his hearers. His subject was "The Pleasures of Sin," and he based his remarks on two texts, first the Book of Proverbs, 16, and the 11th Chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, 24 and 25. "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man but the end thereof are the ways of death," and "Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season."

It was almost forced on them, he said, when they used such a phrase as "the pleasures of sin," could there be any pleasure in sin? And at once they tried to reply, if there were no pleasure in sin there would be no sinners. No man would go out of his way, would go aside from the path of holiness, if he did not expect to find pleasure in his transgression. Men who went into sin invariably were seeking something they imagined to be better than what they experienced, were seeking that which was pleasant. "The tragedy of life," said Mr. Taylor, "is in this, that left to our own choice between good and evil, good seems to be difficult and evil seems to be easy; good seems only applicable to other cases and not to theirs. So far they have found the way of evil to be pleasant and will not admit that this is sin. They say it is a pleasant way of spending life and almost pity the man who walks in austere righteousness. There is another side to it. This path they are walking in seems not only to afford pleasure; but they tell you that all this talk about the sinfulness of pleasure is a great mistake—that men were born to be happy and anything that interferes with their happiness is sinful; that the only thing that will make a man really that which he was intended to be is that which ministers to his pleasure. But what about the end? Have you ever considered what it will amount to when the bill is handed in? Have you ever thought that you are paying too heavy a price for the pleasure that sin promises? Sin goes along assuring us that there is no possible harm coming, that no doubt here and there fools have gone down and sold themselves to the pleasure that lasts for a moment; but we are not such fools. Sin says to us: 'we are wise men, and what is more, if you find that the bargain is not a good one you are at liberty to turn again. You are master of your own soul.' That is what Sin says to us. You remember how it was with Samson, going down to the Philistines to "have a good time," as the young men would say. He was confident of his strength; he was safe enough and could go when he liked and stay where he liked. He went and came until one day the Philistines laid hands on him, and the next thing we see is the great giant with his eyes put out and those who but a short while before were at his mercy making sport of him. It does not matter how strong we are in will, or how far-seeing we are, pleasure can break that will and enthrall it. It is hard to distinguish between good and evil unless we have the enlightenment of the Spirit of God. It is very difficult to look under the tinsel and false jewelry of sin and find there the hollow sham that it is. Evil never could exist if it came out in its own form and bald dimensions; it simply has to wrap itself in what appears to be, as it were, the drapery of God. Beneath its outer finery we have a skeleton and all that is loathsome. Evil not only has to pay a tribute to God in seeking to be Godlike, but it pays this much of tribute to mankind, that it admits there is that much of good in man that he will not go to evil without being tempted. The men who are hurried to their doom are after all men who were seeking the right but had not taken the precaution, in their own weakness, to commit their way unto God. In their own way they had made their choice and found, to their bitter sorrow, that "there is a way that seemeth right unto a man but the end thereof are the ways of death." There is this of paths in it, that it is so hard to detect the evil when it comes to us in the form of good. Sin has always been able to hold its place in the market, because it does honour its promises; we have its cheque always cashed in full, as it were. Ye shall be as gods, knowing good from evil. But what did that barren knowledge amount to? There is Judas reaching out for the thirty pieces of silver. He gets them; they were promised him. And all he could buy was a tragic grave. Those who allow sin to lead them say, there is no obligation in the sinner; there are no commandments to observe, no one to speak a word of authority, no place to say "thou shalt not." It is not the magnitude of sin that counts; it is not the smallness or bigness of sin that matters, but it is the direction in which that sin leads us. Does it matter whether we go headlong to ruin or slip gradually over the precipice? Sin, whether it be big or infinitesimal has the inevitable tendency to sever your connection with heaven. There is one thing necessary to get away from sin and its consequences, and it is to sit down and seriously count the cost. Distinguish between the sham and the reality, and then see how much sin has to give when it comes down to that which is substantial and lasting.
