A case is reported in the Halifax press of a narrow escape from death by two men in the forecastle of a schooner which was heated by a stove. A change in the wind prevented the stove from drawing properly and the escaping coal gas rendered the men insensible, one of them being in a dangerous condition. A case exactly similar to this occurred in Alberton recently.

A prominent Queen's County resident writes that if the train arrangements between Summerside and Charlottetown are not at once changed, so that farmers all along the line can come into this city in the morning and have ample time to make their purchases and return home the same day, there will be a bigger trade than ever developed with foreign mail order houses. It is most unfortunate that such is the case but the change can be easily made with little or no extra expense, and The Guardian will be pleased to suggest a remedy in tomorrow's issue.

With the warm weather comes the longing for pleasant outings in the briny air and naturally the mind at once turns to horses and carriages. With this end in view Worth's Livery Stables on Prince Street, have been supplied with first-class double and single carriages and runabouts that at once combine style and comfort and make the enjoyment of the drive a lingering memory. J. G. Worth, proprietor, has also fine turn-outs for weddings and private parties as will be seen by the ad appearing elsewhere in this issue, and those anticipating the above needs are asked to confer with him before getting a team elsewhere.

In the Vice-Chancellor's Court, on Monday last, the following cases came up:—Re Robert McLaughlin's will; $375.00 this day paid into court, that it might determine to whom under the particular wording of the devise in the will the same should be paid by the executors.
