Use Business Judgment In Buying a Car.

As a practical man your good business judgment will decide which car is best suited to your requirements. And in coming to that decision consider the following points:

1. Quality and Appearance.

Chevrolet is a fine quality car—speedy, dependable and comfortable. It is good-looking and a car of which any owner can be proud.

2. Equipment.

Chevrolet is a fully equipped car. Every needed comfort, convenience, and appointment you could want comes as standard equipment.

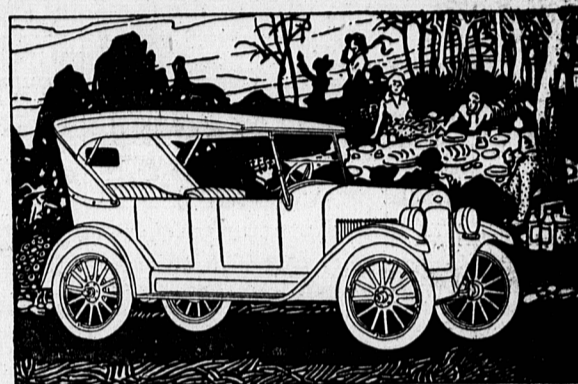

3. Price.

Chevrolet selling price including all the extras is considerably lower than that of any other quality car in the world.

4. Operation and Upkeep Cost.

Chevrolet is the most economical car built to run and maintain.

Buy a car as you would any other piece of practical equipment and your good business judgment will tell you that you cannot invest your money so as to get greater motoring satisfaction at anywhere near as small a cost as in Chevrolet.

THE REMOVAL AND CARE OF COMB HONEY

(Experimental Farms Note.) If the honey flow is heavy and of long duration the greater part of the crop can be removed before the flow is over. It is better to remove the supers of sections as they are finished as this prevents ravel stain and propolisizing. It is comparatively easy to remove supers during the flow as there is little danger from robber bees.

Hundreds have found relief for Aches, Pains, Bruises and Cuts in Minard's

As the flow declines the comb honey producer must give extra supers sparingly in order to have as many sections finished as possible before the flow stops. In fact it may be necessary to reduce the number of supers. It is not well to leave a super on at this time until all the sections are finished as they may become travel stained.

It is better to remove the finished sections and concentrate the unfinished sections to as few supers as possible. As the flow is drawing to a close the unfinished sections should be given to the best finishing colonies. When the sections are finished in the central rows they can be replaced by unfinished ones from the outside. It is well to remove all the sections before the flow ceases altogether.

As soon as the supers are removed by means of the honey-house, and care used to prevent robbing, sections that are only partially filled and capped can usually be disposed of locally at a profit but those containing only a small amount of honey can be piled up near the apiary and the bees allowed to empty them. These empty sections can be used as bait sections next year.

Comb honey should be stored in a warm dry room to prevent spoiling. If exposed to great variations in temperature, moisture may condense on the surface of the cappings, and the honey will absorb it, or it may granulate in the comb. If exposed to freezing the combs will crack and the honey leak. The temperature of the room should not go lower than 70 degrees F. and is better if maintained between 80 and 90 degrees F.

Sections honey that is well refined can be stored in the supers until ready for shipment. The supers should be tied up in close piles, closed at the top and bottom; it will keep much better and also maintain its aroma. There is also danger from wax moths. Some beekeepers find it necessary to fumigate to control this pest.

Comb honey is usually put up in single cartons or in cases holding 24 sections. Before placing the sections in the cartons or cases the wood must be scraped free of propolis and stain. Any sections that are leaking should not be packed.
