Even The Dogs Match The Frock

NEW YORK, Oct. 12—Lavish use of furs, velvets in rich and glowing shades, coo feathers, leg-of-mutton sleeves and tight skirts slit at the hem will characterize the fashions of the coming winter as indicated by gowns displayed at a fashion show held in benefit of the social service auxiliary of the metropolitan hospital.

Costumes complete in detail from shoes to jewels were displayed at the show held yesterday, the climax being the appearance of a lady in black and white, leading a black and white Borzoi. Her black suit was trimmed with ermine bands above the elbow and she wore a small black hat high in the back with white feather trimmings.

High necklines predominated in the day time costumes, and for evening wear the high neck was indicated by a scarf or cape. Evening gowns of velvet often had cloaks or short capes of the same material.

Paris Cops Kiss Halts City Traffic

A kiss that paralyzed traffic in the heart of the downtown section of Paris was administered by a petite Parisienne to a very stern looking "cop" directing vehicles and pedestrians in the square in front of the Opera.

The charming lady in a pretty frock and a perky hat, started out as if to jay-walk, heading directly for the minion of the law.

When she reached her destination, she rose on tiptoes, smiled and puckered her pink lips. Traffic halted, the copper stooped and kissed the lady on both cheeks, after which she beamed broadly and proceeded diagonally to the opposite curb. The hero of the episode blew a loud blast on his traffic whistle, drew his face into stern lines and yelled out, "Get a move on, there; hurry up!"

Rub in Minard's after exercise.
