A GIRL'S CASE

(From the Vancouver Province) A girl feels bad, a trifle sad, then what do you suppose? She takes her bag, extracts a rag, and powders up her nose. Sure cure, by jing, for everything. If she has ragged hose, or looks a fright she makes things right with powder on her nose. When things are wrong she plods along, assumes no downcast pose. From care she's free as long as she has powder on her nose.

ANTE-SUBMARINE DAYS

The skipper of an English tramp steamer one dark, stormy night was endeavoring to get his bearings, being not at all certain of his immediate position. He pored over an old chart which did not seem to help matters, then turning to his first officer, he said, pointing to a small black speck on the chart: "If that's Cardiff, Bill, we're all right; but if it's a fly-spot, 'eaven 'elp us!"

Men wouldn't care how much their wives talked if they would only use the sign language.

puzzling almanac and to make calculations the correctness of which I was by no means certain. "Then these same clerks gave me a great deal of practice in addition. I had to add up the columns of their reports to see whether they had added them correctly or not. I have some times suspected that I may have substituted errors rather than their own. But, at any rate, I remember the many hours of somewhat tedious labor which I devoted to the matters of the Southern Presbyterian Church—the statistical and not to the more entertaining parts—because at that time I had not the imagination to give significance to large bodies of statistics. All of this, however, is merely a playful allusion to what was a very delightful experience with me. My father, because of his office, had an extraordinary wide acquaintance with the active membership of the Southern Presbyterian Church, its ministers and elders, of course, in particular. Their names were familiar in our household; anecdotes about them made their personality very real to us; the visit of a President of the United States, from time to time, very gladdened us.

"My father was a very lively companion and seemed to provoke and draw out liveliness in other people. He had a very risky habit of always saying exactly what he thought, a habit which in part I inherited, and of which I have diligently endeavored to cure myself. But he was the best instructor, the most inspiring companion, I venture to say, that a youngster ever had, and in facing a Southern Presbyterian I cannot think of myself as a President of the United States; I can only think of myself as the son of Joseph R. Wilson, and I only wish that I could claim some of the vital connection with the church, which my father could claim. Because those of us who stand outside the active administration of the church, so to say, get an illegitimate usury from you. We do not seem to add a great deal of value to our capital, but we do live on its great investment of spirit and of the kind of energy which keeps the world alive, which makes us different from the beasts of the field.

"When I think of the great bodies of opinion which sustain the affairs of the world, it seems to me that the heart of nucleus of them is the people of Christianity, and that, therefore, the conversation of that great fountain of all that is just and righteousness is one of the most important things conceivable and when I hear men like Mr. Stuart pleading for the means to introduce this great influence into a part of the world now for the time feeling its connection with the rest of mankind, now first awakening to the possibilities of the power that lies latent in it, I wonder if it is possible that the imaginations of Christian people will fail to take fire.

"Why, this is the most amazing and inspiring vision that can be offered you, this vision of that great sleeping nation suddenly cried awake by the voice of Christ. Could there be anything more tremendous than that? And could there be any greater contribution to the future momentum of the moral forces of the world than could be made by quickening this force, which is being set afoot in China? China is at present inchoate as a nation it is a congeries of parts, in each of which there is energy, but which are unbound in any essential and ac-

PRES. WILSON'S RECOLLECTIONS OF HIS BOYHOOD.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—President Wilson made a little speech last night to a body of clergymen, in which he told of one phase of his early life, and paid tribute to his father, "one of the most inspiring fathers that ever a lad was blessed with." The President said he was speaking not as President of the United States, but as the son of a minister of the Gospel. The speech was made at the meeting of Potomac Presbytery in the course of his remarks the President referred to foreign missions, and declared that it seemed to him that the heart and nucleus of the great bodies of opinion which sustained the affairs of the world "is the people of Christianity." Referring to China, he declared the most amazing and inspiring vision that could be offered was that of the great sleeping nation suddenly cried awake by the voice of Christ.

"I have not come here tonight," said President Wilson, "to make an address, for I feel that an address by me would merely be an interruption of the business of the Presbytery, which is very much more important. I can say with sincere conviction, that anything I might be able to say to the Presbytery, I do not come here as representing the office which I now occupy, because so soon as Dr. Taylor asked me if I could meet with the Presbytery, my thought went back to a time, long before I had any thought of occupying public office, when throughout a happy boyhood I was associated with one of the most inspiring fathers that ever a lad was blessed with, who during practically the whole of my youth was the State clerk of the Southern General Assembly, and who, therefore, among other things, edited the minutes of the assembly.

"I did a lot of the hard work, let me say, of editing those minutes, and I still retain in the back of my head certain grudges against some Moderators of some presbyteries. I do not remember whether the Moderator of Potomac Presbytery was among them or not; certainly not the present one. I remember then the clerk of those presbyteries gave me a great deal of trouble. Some of them, particularly of the country presbyteries, would not consult the almanac. They would say that the presbytery convened on the second Monday after full moon, or early candle light. My father exacted of me that I should find which Monday that was and calculate the probable hour of early candle light. It was before the days when I had studied, at any rate, the mathematical aspects of astronomy and I was not perfectly familiar with the hour which the sun kept. It was, therefore, necessary for me constantly to resort to very

Itchy Nose and Running Eyes Cured In Five Minutes By "Catarrhozone"

"What Catarrhozone did for me in one week was simply a miracle," writes Malcolm R. McIntosh from Sydney. My ears buzzed and my head was full of noises. The end of my nose it was red and itchy—the inside it was sore and encrusted. I had vile droppings from my throat and was very sick. Relief came quick—so I kept up my treatment and was absolutely cured by Catarrhozone.

Nothing else will so effectively and quickly cure you as Catarrhozone. Get the $1.00 outfit; it always does the trick. Small size 50c; sample trial size 25c., at all dealers.

Five unit, and just as soon as the unity comes, its power will come in the world. Should we not see that the parts are fructified by the teachings of Christ? But, that is quite apart from what I had come to say. I had not come to speak on foreign missions. I am merely competent to utter my deep allegiance to the things which are represented by bodies of people like this and to express my thanks to God that as a youth and as a man I have been permitted to have some part in them.
