Weeping Eczema relieved by "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Mrs. J. P. MARRINIER

"For three years I suffered with weeping Eczema on the back of my hands. I consulted our family doctor and other physicians, but all the treatments and salves prescribed gave me no permanent relief. When baby came, I was afraid that the too would be affected. I had practically considered my case hopeless when I started to use "Fruit-a-tives" and "Sootha-Salva." In a short time the eczema completely disappeared, baby has always been wonderfully well, and I have not had a trace of it for four years."

Mrs. J. P. Marrinier, 452 Arlington Ave., Ottawa, Ont. SMILES

LOUD "What do you think of my suit?" "I can't say that it listens well."

DONE ON TIME Hubby: Dinner late again. You've done nothing lately on time. Wife: Oh, yes, dear, I've gotten a piano and a new dress lately—both on time.

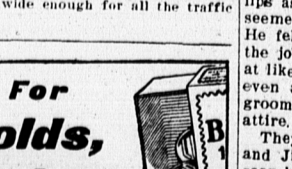

AT THE MUSEUM Rosamond (viewing knight's armor): How delightful 'twould be to have one's heart swayed by so gallant a knight. Mary Jane: Yes—if the tin sheik didn't try to rule with an iron hand.

TOO MANY TUBES Bug: I wonder which one of these tubes goes to Brooklyn?

On St. Valentine's Day Look like that at a miss. And you've got the girl pat. If she looks back like this.

The straight and narrow path is plenty wide enough for all the traffic it gets.

THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found mysteriously murdered in a cheap hotel. The only clues are a woman's handkerchief and a yellow ticket stub from the Paragon Theater in Montreal. JIMMY, the murdered man's son, decided to go to Montreal until the mystery is solved. He and DETECTIVE MOONEY trace the ticket to a THOMAS FOGARTY, who proves an alibi and says he gave it to a woman named OLGA MAYNARD. Police search for her for days. JANET RAND, Jimmy's sister, breaks her engagement with BARRY COLVIN, and Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. While with Mary at a cafe he accidentally runs into Olga Maynard and makes an engagement with her for the next night. She breaks down under his questions and faints. He is lifting her into a taxi when Mary, who is with another man, sees him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER 12 Jimmy fumbled helplessly trying to revive the woman who slumped beside him in the taxi-cab seat. He slapped her wrists, called to her, looked beseechingly at the driver, but that worthy was gazing imperiously ahead and minding his own business.

The rough jolting of the cab finally did what he was unable to do. She opened her eyes, looked at him and then began to cry. "I'm sorry he had been so brutal with her, and angry that he had been unable to get any satisfactory explanation from her. Tears had streaked her cheeks. Her hair—bleached, Jimmy concluded—was in disarray. "What are you going to do?" she asked. Her handkerchief was pressed closely to her mouth. Jimmy barely heard her.

"I don't know. Perhaps it would be better for you to give yourself up to the police. They'll find you any way in time." "How can I explain to them?" he asked. "I can't tell them any more than I've told you. If you don't believe me, they won't. She was crying again. "Do some thinking. Try to remember what could have happened in the theater stub after you asked her. He felt uncomfortable, self-reproachful, in the face of her tears. "If I thought you wouldn't try to run away," he continued, "I'd leave you here—the cab had stopped in front of her apartment building—and count on seeing you here again tomorrow night. Believe me, I don't like to see you in this trouble."

"Where would I go? Where could I go?" she asked. "I'll be here tomorrow night. I promise you." "I believe you," he said, and helped her out of the cab. His first thought when he reached the office the following morning was to find Mary and try to explain. When he did encounter her, however, along toward noon, the speech froze on his lips. He was about to speak, but she gave him a curt nod and turned on her heel. He thought of writing her a note and sending it through the office boy. "She'd probably tear it up," he reflected. He brought his worries along with him when he went out to lunch. He toyed with his food and pushed it back uneaten. Going up in the elevator he was conscious of a man staring at him. He was a man of perhaps 40 with black hair, gray around the temples, and a sharp pointed nose. He was broad-shouldered and bulky of chest but uncommonly slender from his waist down. There was something familiar looking about him. Jimmy knew he had seen him before.

A half smile played about his lips as he contemplated Jimmy. He seemed amused. It irritated Jimmy. He felt like asking to be let in on the joke. He resented being stared at like a monkey in a zoo. He was even annoyed by the other's fine grooming and obviously expensive attire. They went in the office together, and Jimmy realized where he had seen him. It was the man who had been with Mary last night when he was helping Olga Maynard into the taxi. The man opened the door of the chief clerk's office and walked in, leaving it open. Jimmy could see Mary smile at his greeting. They talked and Mary laughed heartily at something he was saying. Jimmy wondered whether they were laughing at the recollection of the spectacle he and Olga Maynard must have made in front of the hotel. "Who is that, Mac?" he asked the young fellow at the next desk. "Who? Oh, that's Church—Sam Church. He's one of the attorneys for the Q. and R. Handles a lot of death and accident claims. Comes in here quite a lot and makes it a point to give a little dictation once in a while to the boss' stenographer. I think he's pretty sweet on her myself."

"I see—thanks." "As a matter of fact," Mac continued, "I have a sneaking suspicion that Miss Lowell doesn't exactly hate Sam Church. Good looking dog. Built like a bull in the upper story—chest and shoulders—and like a greyhound below. Got a lot of money, too. I hear that all you need to get on in this world, Rand—money. It'll buy anything." "You think Mac," Jimmy asked, "that money can buy love?" "Mac was slow in answering. "Rand," he said, "it'll buy anything. There's nothing in this sentimental love in a cottage stuff. I know I was engaged once. Then war came and I went away, with her out crying and everybody promising wonderful things for the boys when we came back." "He cursed. "And then what happened? My girl marries one of these fat profiteers that stayed safe at home and made a pile of money while they were digging machine gun bullets out of me in France." "Rats!" he said. "Give me a million and I'll have everything I want and do anything I want. And if I overstep the law I can buy myself off. John Law doesn't bother the guy with dough. But he makes us poor flash step." "Mac," said Jimmy. "I think you're wrong. I hope you're wrong." He bent over his desk as Church came out of Mary's office, talking in low tones to the chief clerk, Hilton. The same amused smile was playing over his features as he passed Jimmy and walked out of the main office door. "Mary—" he stood in front of the water cooler, making a pretense of drinking, and blocking her path. "Mary, I know it looked rotten. Just give me a chance to explain."

Beauty and the Beast

COLOR CUT-OUTS

Beauty and the Beast Today's chapter of "Beauty and the Beast" contains a wonderful surprise for Beauty Tomorrow will end the story.

Beauty was not unhappy while she was with the Beast, but one day she had a vision in which she saw her father at home. Ill with grief over the loss of his daughter, then Beauty wept and implored the Beast to let her once more return to her home if only for just one week, and he consented. When she went away, the poor Beast wept and said sadly, "I am afraid you will never return to me!" Beauty's father was overjoyed to see her once more, and Beauty was very happy to visit all her old friends. She forgot all about the Beast and her promise to return in a week. Then, one night, she dreamed that she saw the poor Beast lying in the garden and he made hurried preparations to return, and when she reached the place, there was the poor Beast, almost dead, just as she had dreamed!

Keeping Healthy During Winter

Colds, Influenza and Like Troubles Can be Avoided

Have you noticed that some people enjoy good health through the most trying weather, while others succumb to colds or influenza at every touch of wintry conditions, or are attacked by rheumatism or sciatica? The reason is to be found in the condition of the blood. If it is rich and pure the system is able to resist disease. But let the blood become impoverished and the way is made clear for disease to enter the system. The common sense way to avoid colds and influenza is to keep a plentiful supply of rich, red blood in your veins. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have achieved world-wide fame for their remarkable blood-enriching powers. The new blood which comes from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills tones up the whole system and so helps the body to resist winter ills. If the system has already been weakened by colds, influenza or other winter ailments, then Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the safest medicine for rebuilding the blood and strengthening the body. An example of the value of these pills is given by Mrs. R. O. Stromberg, Cobalt, Ont., who says: "I had a very severe attack of grippe, or influenza, which confined me to my bed for a week. On getting up again I did not recover my usual strength. I was very weak, had a severe pain in my head, and a constant backache. I had to get a woman to do my work for me as I had neither the strength nor the stage to remember the great benefit I had through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in girlhood. I began taking this medicine, and soon my strength began to return. I am now able to do all my own work again, and take care of my baby boy. I am very grateful for what the pills have done for me, and hope my experience will be of benefit to some other sufferer."

When we wander out of the right path, we must pass through the valley of humiliation on the way back.
