

Queen Quality Italian Silk Lingerie

enables the woman of refined tastes to satisfy her dearest wish at prices appreciably lower than heretofore. With the outbreak of the war, and the sudden stopping of European importations, arose the necessity to supply and the incentive to create those trim-fitting garments of lustrous beauty and sympathetic softness which Canadian women had learned to love. With the birth of this new Canadian industry came a most noticeable drop in prices, and now the possession of luxurious lingerie is no longer restricted to the woman of wealth. MADE in CANADA and shown by the smartest shops.

If you have difficulty in supplying your needs, write us for the address of your nearest "Queen Quality" shop.

HAZELBROOK BAPTIST CHURCH.—On Tuesday evening the Rev. E. P. Calder conducted the third of the series of special services. The audience was much larger than on Monday evening and was gripped from the very outset by the preacher as he dealt with the subject, "The Master and His Work," based on the words, "He came to seek and to save that which was lost." He portrayed the world as a great auction room with its varied bidders. He dealt with the great powers inherent in the human heart and showed the great purpose of human life. This was the only medium for manifesting the God life. The ringing appeal touched all present and gave great inspiration to all. Mr. Calder will continue each night this week.

THE MAILS.—There was a crossing both ways at the Capes yesterday. 8 boats leaving each side. The boats left Cape Traverse at 6.30 a.m., with 53 bags of mail, and arrived at Cape Tormentine at 12.05. The boats left the other side at 6.35, with 58 bags of mail, and arrived at Cape Traverse at 1.20 p.m. The mail brought over was composed wholly of paper, sacks, which had accumulated at Tormentine for more than a week past. The boatmen failed to await the arrival of the special train from Sackville, which brought down 130 bags of mail, comprising all Monday's and Tuesday's mail. The train leaves Sackville about 4 o'clock each morning and the explanation given by the Railway is that the train was detained 10 minutes loading an extra heavy mail and also a further delay of 15 minutes occurred on account of the engine heating. The train did not arrive at Cape Tormentine until 7 a.m., whereas the boats had left at 6.35. The boat house keeper at Cape Tormentine when asked for an explanation sent the following: "I did not know special was coming as operator here asked I. C. R. Station at Sackville last night but they did not know special was coming." There will be a crossing both ways to-day and the boats will bring over all the letter mail and the largest part of the papers on hand at Tormentine. The mail special left Charlottetown as usual last night at 8.45 p.m.

It is just about impossible for the steamers to make any progress with the present conditions.

Mr. Murphy has worked at the barbering in Charlottetown and also in Nova Scotia, and being an artist in his line, of a genial disposition, he is bound to work up an excellent business. 9172

BROKEN STRINGS OF VIOLIN, MESSAGE.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—(By mail)—It may have been only a coincidence, but there are some who, having heard the story, believe there was more in it than that.

A musician, whose wife was an accomplished violinist, left for the front shortly after the war started. His Christian name was Remy. At parting he told his wife, "If I go under, I will try to let you know directly, before the official news reaches you." She scarcely played any during his absence. But the other day she took up her violin, feeling impelled to play a certain piece which he liked above all. When she opened the case two strings of the instrument suddenly snapped, the D and E "Re and Mi" she thought at once. It was the warning he had said she would send her.

The next day a War Office telegram informed her that her husband, Sergeant Remy, had been killed in action.

VICTORY, NOT BUSINESS SAYS LLOYD-GEORGE.

LONDON, March 21.—"Business as usual," the slogan which many authorities consider the most demoralizing phase of the British people's attitude toward the war, was forewarned vehemently for the first time by the British Government in the House of Commons through the lips of Chancellor of the Exchequer, George Lloyd-George.

Speaking on the inconvenience that will be caused to many business interests by the Government's proposed commandeering of industrial plants for military purposes, he exclaimed:

"This is a state of war and we can't have business as usual. What we want is victory as usual." The enthusiasm which greeted this declaration presaged the retirement into the ashbins of "business as usual" placards now adorning numerous shop windows throughout the British Isles.

AN ALL-STAR BILL AT THE PRINCE EDWARD

The second all-star bill of the week presented at the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday contained one of the most thrilling and pathetic stories ever presented here, involving the old question of labour and capital. It was a great industrial play entitled "The Lily of the Valley," in three reels, showing in a striking manner the terrible consequences wrought by the greed of the capitalist. The play abounds in interest and excitement and the strike scenes are, without doubt, the most thrilling and original of any picture of this kind ever seen on the Prince Edward screen. It has a sad story, which is delineated by superb artists in a highly emotional and natural manner. The settings are excellently appropriate and the drama is replete with all those qualities that go to make a distinct success. A feature of the bill was an impressive three-part Eclair drama, entitled "For the Mastery of the World." During the present gruesome conflict which is sweeping European soil one can but think how much more horrible would be the atrocities if either of the nations implicated had in its power a wireless bomb apparatus which could be operated at a distance of 3,000 miles. The control of so terrible a weapon would make its possessor the absolute master of the world's power. A man has invented a bomb which could be operated by wireless from a distance of 3,000 miles, and the man had secretly interested two powerful nations, which were in conspiracy to grasp the mastery of the world. And with all this terrible force at his command the man made the appointment for the final test of the weapon. Then there was a girl and a secret service detective, who loved the girl. The girl was implicated in the deep plots surrounding the sale of the bomb, but the detective, who trailed the conspirators to earth, loved her. Then a terrific explosion for ever destroyed the invention and the inventor, and brought the girl tight into the arms of her lover, the secret service officer. The rare possibilities of the story have been developed to their highest degree in the picturing of the plot, making a substantially interesting and entertaining play.

"ENJOY HYMN OF HATE."
LONDON, March 20.—A couple of days ago the students at the Royal College of Music, London, sang in chorus Lissauer's "Hymn of Hate," the words and music of which were reproduced in London newspapers in order to hear what the so-called "mildly hymn sounded like. Sir Walter Barrett conducted the choir.
Sir Hubert Parry, a leading British musician and director of the college, said afterwards:
"Sir Walter asked the students to sing the hymn with plenty of snarl to express honestly the intentions of the composer, but they laughed too much to snarl. However, when they came to the word England they rolled it out in fine style, and Lissauer would have been delighted to have heard its reverberating note.
"What do I think of the music? Well the man who wrote it certainly knew his business. The music carries out the idea intended and is unquestionably better than the poetry, and I felt like sending Lissauer a telegram telling him how much we enjoyed his work and what infinite amusement it had afforded us, but I did not see how I was going to insure the telegram reaching him."
