CURSE O' LOVE

A Story of Love and its Test by MILDRED BARBOUR

Norma reached town unmolested. She was so eager to get home and to see her husband again that it is doubtful whether she would have noticed a skulking figure by the roadside.

The exciting events of the night had made the original reason for her flight seem almost paltry and inconsequential. The paltry or inconsequential on the part of Stokes, lying unconscious on the ground, and the realization of what the tragic situation might mean to Philip had shown her with sudden clearness that her love for her husband was greater than any other consideration in the world.

What did it matter, she thought, whether or not she married her love because he owed her father a large sum of money? What did her pride, what did anything matter except Philip? If he didn't really love her and had married her for convenience, she would make a fool of herself, even yet. What a fool she had been to run away, to think she could live without him.

She noted thankfully that the pink Venetian palace was dark and silent. Evidently her absence had not been noted by her father or any of the servants. As she drove into the garage she noticed that Philip's car was not in its accustomed place. But he frequently left it in the private lane at the other side of the garden. His was a "bus," he often laughingly explained, to which wind and weather had done their worst.

Norma let herself in and made her way noiselessly upstairs. The house was wrapped in silence. Philip's door was closed. She hesitated a moment before it and then, mindful of her promise to Dr. Merrivale, tiptoed to her own room.

She undressed in the darkness and sank thankfully into bed. She had not realized that she was so weary. Determinedly she put her hands under the pillow and thought that the night had brought her a restful sleep.

The sun was shining through her coral silk curtains when she awoke. Birds were singing in the garden. The scent of flowers drifted in on the breeze. She heard the clip-clip of the lawn-mower as the gardener went over the already perfect and velvety sward. The sound reminded her that it must be late, or such noise would never be tolerated.

She glanced at the tiny clock on the bedside table and its hands pointed almost to noon. "How silly of them to let me oversleep," she thought. "Dad and Phil will already have breakfasted and gone."

She rang for her bath and a breakfast-tray, and lingered over her rolls and coffee, turning over in her mind what she would say to Philip; whether she dared tell him what Sydney Stokes had revealed, or whether it were better to keep silent and let him tell her

YOUNG WOMEN SUFFER MOST

These Two Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ayer's Cliff, Quebec.—"I have been teaching for three years and at the end of the year I always feel tired and have no appetite. I was a real sick each month too, having pains in my back until sometimes I was obliged to stop working. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I heard many women telling how good it was so I bought it and it would help me. And it did. Now I take six bottles every year and recommend it to others."—DONALDA FANTUZZ, Ayer's Cliff, Quebec.

"Unable to Work" Canning, Nova Scotia.—"I had irregular periods and great suffering at the times, the pains causing vomiting and fainting. I was teaching school and often for some hours I would be unable to attend to my work. Through an advertisement in the papers I knew of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has been of great benefit to me, the troubles being completely relieved."—LAURA J. BATOR, Canning, King's County, Nova Scotia.

Governor General Enjoys Banff

(Special to the Guardian.) JASPER PARK LODGE, Alta., Sept. 29.—Their Excellencies, the Governor General and Lady Willingdon, left Jasper for Edmonton

Monday evening on their special train. Their final tribute to the famous golf course at Jasper Park Lodge was playing until almost the last moment and having the cars which took them to the station pick them up at the caddy house. "I have had a splendid time," said his Excellency as he stepped on the train, "I played too much golf." Lady Willingdon was equally enthusiastic about Jasper, and in fact, everyone agreed that the eight days had been nothing but pleasure.

The trip to Maligne Lake, where a night was spent at Brewsters Chalet, the drive to Mount Edith Cavell and the Ghost Glacier and the fishing expedition to Caledonia Lake, were outstanding events in the all too short stay at the Lodge, as one member of the party put it, and the quiet and the beauty of the surrounding mountains stood as an ever changing background, while golf was well woven into the scheme of things.

Before leaving the lodge, where they stayed in picturesque pine log cabins, and where nothing was spared to make them comfortable, their Excellencies presented the manager John O'Brien with handsome autographed portraits of themselves, as a mark of appreciation and gave Mrs. O'Brien a beautiful brooch. The Vice Regal party was given a hearty send off at the station in the village of Jasper. Fifty or more youngsters, girl guides, brownies, scouts and cubs mustered on the platform, in the care of Rev. Harold Edwards, Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. W. C. Aynsley, and were reviewed by their Excellencies. The Governor General and Lady Willingdon were both very much interested and expressed the opinion that the turnout was exceptionally good, especially as the children had been organized but a very short while. They are all this season's product and the young Cubs have organized a week, as Mrs. Edwards explained. The Wolf Howl and the various salutes were demonstrated and the send off culminated in three cheers.

Lord and Lady Harding, the Hon. Ruby Harding, Capt. the Hon. Inigo Freeman-Thomas, Hon. Mrs. Freeman-Thomas, are spending another night at the Lodge and will leave in the morning for Victoria, where they will spend a short holiday. Mrs. R. B. Osborne, Capt. the Hon. J. Jarvis and Capt. E. C. Meiville left with their Excellencies.

CHEAP ELECTRICITY.

Electricity is one item in the cost of living in Canada which is much cheaper now than in pre-war days. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics index number shows a reduction in the price of electricity for residence lighting of 31.3 per cent. from 1913 to 1926. Canada leads the world in the per capita distribution of electricity from central electric power stations.
