Polio Victim Chances Good. NEW YORK, Aug. 30 — (AP)—A 2-year-old polio victim, stricken aboard the Cunard liner Parthia in mid-Atlantic, was taken to hospital Saturday night with a good chance to recover. The youth, Sidney Moody, Jr. of Plainfield, N.J., was carried off the liner on a stretcher, outside the portable iron lung which had been taken to the ship by plane and Coast Guard cutter. Dr. Nathaniel Greenfield, who went along with the iron lung on the mercy mission first by plane to Halifax, and then by cutter to the Parthia — said the youth stood the trip well. The doctor said he thinks Moody has a good chance to recover. The Parthia's 293 other passengers were permitted to leave the ship after U.S. public health officials had examined the vessel as it came up the harbor. Dr. Greenfield said Moody suffered paralysis of his left arm and right leg, and a bladder disorder, but could recover completely. "He is still seriously ill but not critically," the doctor said. "Of course he is still not out of hot water."

40 years trouble ended—Now Regular. "After 40 years of trouble with constipation, I tried KELLLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily, and now I'm as regular as a clock. Stowaway Is Still Hopeful

GANDER, Nfld., Aug. 30 — (CP)—The old Londoner who stowed away in a transatlantic transport plane to get to his friend in Moncton, N. B., remained hopeful last night that "something could be arranged" so he could complete his trip.

Immigration officials here today said they were holding Robert Green who arrived aboard a British South American Airways plane yesterday. They said he had a passport but declined further comment.

Green, a psychology student at Hull University, told the Canadian Press he "just got a powerful yearning" to see the girl he met while he was serving with the R.A.F. in Canada during the Second World War. He declined to reveal her name.

"All I want is a short visit because I plan to re-enter Hull in October," he added. When asked how he would get back, Green replied: "That will take care of itself when the time comes if everything works out normal."

He told how he stowed away with six biscuits and some chocolate when the plane left London for Halifax. When the Lancaster was two hours out the crew discovered Green and the skipper reported the affair to his London base.

Under normal procedure, Green could be either flown directly back to Britain from Gander or detained in a transit camp for a while and then flown back.

Livingstone's Home Now African Rubble

JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 30 — (CP)—A plaque marking the home of the great African explorer and missionary, David Livingstone, has been erected at Kolobeng, in Bechuanaland Protectorate, where the Scottish doctor lived with his wife from 1848 to 1851.

It was placed by W. J. Spencer, of the Bechuanaland public works department.

Mr. Spencer found that only the stone foundation remained to show the site of the Livingstone house. The graveyard where were buried the missionary's infant daughter, Elizabeth, and the artist and traveller, Alfred Dolman, and his English servant John Coleman, was overgrown. When the underground was cleared a fourth grave, the occupant of which is not known, was found.

Dr. Livingstone returned to Kolobeng, the only permanent home he ever had in Africa, after discovering Lake Ngama in 1849.

Scheele, chief of the Bakwena tribe, had moved his people there in 1846, and the explorer showed them how to make a dam and a canal from which their gardens could be watered from the small Kolobeng River.

A house for the missionary, a school and a smithy were built, but Mr. Spencer found them nothing but heaps of rubble. He found two other links with the past, however. The little river still ran surging down from the hills as it did 100 years ago, although no trace of the dam or canal remains.

Close beside it he found the dwelling of Sametse, an old and wrinkled native woman whose mother was educated by Mr. Price, brother-in-law of Mary Livingstone. Sametse has lived there all her life and is spending a peaceful old age surrounded by children and grandchildren, descendants of the Bakwena children who once

Preparedness Keynote Of Crerar's Speech

By Robert Marjoribanks (Canadian Press Staff Writer) TORONTO, Aug. 30 — (CP)—General H. D. G. Crerar urged Canadians Saturday to prepare for the possibility of a third world war. The wartime commander of the 1st Canadian Army then took the salute as some 12,000 veterans of two world wars paraded before him.

Without "significant military regiments of former soldiers, sailors and airmen streamed past the General as he stood before the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand. Fifty bands played regimental marches for the warrior's day ceremony.

Spectators filled all available space in the 24,000-seat grandstand and lined the exhibition park boulevard six and seven deep.

Earlier, at a luncheon, the General said Canadians are reluctant to accept the military responsibilities they assumed as members of the western European Union and the Atlantic Pact.

"Without significant military power" paper pledges could not "long continue to influence that grim and ruthless group of men who rule Russia," he said.

"If fight we must — let us get fully prepared in advance for that dire emergency and let us and the United States, so organize these military preparations that we shall be able to do that fighting mainly on enemy territory not on that of our Allies."

For the second consecutive day since the fair opened Friday, rain soaked the thousands of visitors who swarmed over the park's 14 miles of streets.

Strike Halts Production

ARKON, O., Aug. 30 — (AP)—A C. I. O. United Rubber Workers' strike halted production Saturday in the big B. F. Goodrich Company which employs nearly 16,000 workers. Any hope for immediate settlement faded when negotiations — still deadlocked — were recessed until tomorrow.

"There has been little progress, but nothing on major issues," H. F. Lloyd, international president of the union said. The negotiations have been in progress in Dayton since Aug. 8.

The major issues are union demands for a pay raise of 25 cents an hour and $100-a-month, company-financed pensions.

A check of Goodrich plants here and in six other cities in as many states showed the strike was 100 per cent effective. It started with the Friday midnight shift at the exact hour the company's contract with the union expired.

Production workers are off Sunday, but the recess in negotiations meant the shifts scheduled to report at midnight Sunday and 6 a.m. Monday were certain to remain out.

Goodrich, until it laid off 700 men three weeks ago, had the largest number of workers among the big four of the rubber industry.
