SPONSORS OF NEW CONTEST REPORT UNEXPECTED PROGRESS

$160.00 In Prizes Creates Unusual Demand For Coupons Now Being Distributed by Ten Of Charlottetown's Business Firms

No one would think of refusing the sum of fifty dollars in cash for simply writing one's name and address on the back of a coupon. That is just the very reason that everybody is taking advantage of the new Consumers Cash Bonus Contest. Of course only one person is going to be lucky enough to receive the first prize of $50.00, but there are the other prizes as well, the second prize of $30.00 cash, the third prize $15.00 cash. Two $5.00 cash prizes. Five $3.00 cash prizes. Ten $2.00 surprise awards, and twenty $1.00 cash prizes. Forty prizes in all, so that each coupon you enter has forty possible chances of winning a prize.

The coupons are being provided for each 25 cent transaction at the following firms:

Johnson & Johnson, drugs, toiletries, confectionery;

R. P. Simpson, exclusive fashions, ladies' wear;

Miller Bros. Ltd., musical instruments, radios, refrigerators, washers, etc.

J. P. Crockett, radios, washers, refrigerators, stoves, furniture, beds, couches, etc.

T. G. Ives, refrigerators, Marconi radios, washers, stoves, new and used cars, etc.

Tom Davies, Red Indian Service Station, gas, oil, washing, greasing, polishing.

P. J. MacDonald, groceries, meats, fish, fruit, etc.

Sterns' Launderers, dyers, dry cleaners, and sole licensees for Nevawet Process.

Rogers Hardware Co. Ltd., stoves, refrigerators, paints, housewares, dinnerware, silverware, etc.

In connection with these firms we have mentioned a few of the lines included in their respective businesses. Many other commodities and services may be obtained from each of them, and the coupons are to be given out regardless of the amount of the sale or the article purchased, at the rate of four coupons to the dollar.

The tenth sponsoring firm is The Charlottetown Guardian, which is issuing coupons for subscriptions only, both new and renewal.

Persons having coupons which they were given by any of the above firms should write their name and address on the back of each coupon and deposit them at any one of the firms listed on the coupon. Out of town residents may mail them to the Consumers' Community Contest, care of The Charlottetown Guardian. Your coupons will be deposited properly if sent in in time.

This great contest will positively close on Saturday, Oct. 8 at 8:30 p. m., and the drawing will be conducted by Chief of Police Birtwistle.

The above business firms have done their part in co-operating to provide the buying public with this interesting contest. The more coupons you enter, the more chances you have of winning a prize. It naturally follows that it is to your own advantage to do all the purchasing you can from these firms during this contest term.

Do not hesitate to demand your coupons when dealing with them. The contest is open to every man, woman and child in this province. We do not feel that this ruling will exclude anyone who would not be unwilling to refuse the opportunity of trying for at least a share of the prize money.

It costs nothing to enter!

were missing.

There were 96 known dead in Massachusetts, 90 in Rhode Island 100 in New Hampshire and two in Vermont.

Fire and water vied in a battle of destruction in the historic, old Connecticut whaling port of New London. Farther north fire ruins also marked hill-enclosed Peterboro, N. H.

Massachusetts public health officials ordered residents of the flooded areas to boil their water.

Three western Massachusetts towns reported food enough for only 24 hours and advised the only means of getting in supplies would be by boat.

NAZIS FEAR

EXHORTS FOLLOWERS

Meanwhile, hurrying from camp to camp of fugitive Sudetens on this side of the border in Saxony, Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten German party, admonished and encouraged his followers to hold out a short time longer. Despite clashes reported from various localities, the policy of Hitler and Henlein continued to be that of letting the Sudeten Free Corps handle the situation without engaging Germany's regular army.

While there was much evidence that the Free Corps included experienced "volunteers," the German Reich had not technically intervened with force of arms.

(A dispatch direct from Eger, Czechoslovakia, said motorized German army units were lying along the border, awaiting orders to speed into Sudetenland while Czechoslovak troops, gendarmes and police were quietly retiring into definitely Czechoslovak territory).

DNB reported Czechs had placed dynamite under Elbe River bridges at Podmokly (Bodenbach) and Usti (Aussig) on the main railway line from Berlin to Prague and under the Eger River bridge at Falkenau near the Bavarian frontier. A big dam at Korlovy Vary and a sluice at Usti, DNB said, also had been mined. DNB said that at Braunau, near the Owl Mountains in Silesia, not only bridges but all public buildings had been made ready for explosion.

The agency added, however, that if the new Czechoslovak government could prevent destruction and evacuated the ceded regions, Germany was prepared to occupy them in "perfect order." The news accounts emphasized, however, that this did not mean that Czechs known for their anti-German attitude would be permitted to depart scot-free.

DNB reported clashes at scattered points along the Czechoslovak-German border.

London Welcomes German Veterans

LONDON, Sept. 22—British hope that the Chamberlain-Hitler talks at Godesberg would result in a "pacific and just" settlement was voiced by the Defence Coordination Minister, Sir Thomas Inskip, in a speech today welcoming 800 German ex-servicemen.

"To waste more precious treasure in a new war of greater severity would indeed be a humiliation as well as a disaster for the human race," Sir Thomas declared.

"I hope you will return to your own country with new friendships strengthened and world quarrels forgotten."

Lead by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha the Germans came for a three day visit as guests of the British Legion.

Daladier Averts Crisis In Cabinet

(A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

PARIS, Sept. 22—Premier Daladier tonight averted a cabinet crisis over opposition to the French-British plan to give up Sudetenland to Germany, but profound disagreements persisted.

Beset by political and financial troubles, the Premier whipped his cabinet into line, at least temporarily. He laid down the law both to recalcitrants in his cabinet and his parliamentary majority in conferences at his War Ministry office.

Because of Daladier's insistence that France maintain calm, it was said in Chamber of Deputies lobbies, all decisions on possible resignations of ministers or calling a special session of parliament were postponed to await the outcome of Czechoslovakia situation.

NEW CZECH GOVERNMENT TAKES OFFICE

Veteran Army Leader At Head — Indignation Rife Over Surrender.

(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

PRAGUE, Sept. 22—General Jan Syrovy, 50-year old Inspector General of the Czechoslovak army, formed a new cabinet today to cope with the Republic's rising indignation over surrender of its Sudeten area to Germany.

The veteran campaigner, who is considered friendly towards Soviet Russia, succeeded Premier Milan Hodza, whose cabinet resigned earlier in the day in the face of resentment against the Government's capitulation to Anglo-French pressure designed to appease Chancellor Hitler and forward the cause of European peace.

General Syrovy, emerging as the Republic's strong man in the hour of its greatest crisis, took over the War Ministry portfolio in addition to the premiership.

Held over from the Hodza Cabinet was Foreign Minister Kamil Krofta, who shared with President Eduard Benes and Hodza the decision to cede Sudetenland to Germany.

Without Portfolio

Three ministers without portfolio were named: Hugo Vavrecka, who has been in charge of the Government Propaganda Department, Peter Zenzle, Mayor of Prague, and Dr. Stanislaus Rukakvsky.

Additional appointments included: Jan Fritza, unification of laws, Stanislaus Mendl, public health; Dr. Emile Reich, agriculture; Joseph Horal, social welfare.

Dr. Jan Czerny, former Governor of Morvaia, interior; Joseph Kalfus, finance; Egbert Shubert, education; Vladimir Fajnora, justice; General Franz Nosal, public works; Heinbrich Kamenicky, railways; Dr. Karel Dynovsky, postal, Rudolph Janacekek, commerce.

It appeared certainly the army would have greater influence in dictating policies of the new regime, which the aroused Czechoslovakia people called upon to resist further sacrifices.

Benes described the new cabinet in a nationwide broadcast as "a government of national solidarity."

Offense to Nazis

Before the cabinet was announced, it was said outside Government official source selection of General Syrovy would be offensive to Germany because of his service with the Allies during the Great War.

By the same token, it was said in these circles that he was considered too friendly towards Russia to suit the Nazis.

Benes, in his address, hinted that new negotiations on a broad scale might give a new aspect to the gloomy prospect presented by clamoring on all sides for separation of her other minorities as well as the Sudeten Germans.

"Wait patiently," he said. "Our people have always been sensible and realistic.

"Our people understand that some times it is necessary to negotiate and some times to fight. If we must fight we shall do so to the last breath of life. But if the situation requires it, we shall negotiate."

Speaking with great emotion, the President pleaded with his people to have confidence and promised that the nation would not depart from its traditional policies of democracy and independence.

It was said in informed quarters on Government Hill that influences from abroad were directed not so much towards Hodza as at Benes himself.

All day long, however, the President was receiving spontaneous demonstrations of fealty from hundreds of thousands of his people.

"Hold fast," was the message he received from hundreds of his supporters.

DULL - APPEARING STUDENT MAY BE JUST FRIGHTENED

Often a child is not dull at all, but gets a sort of frozen terror that creates the impression of stupidity.

We are all this way, old and young. If you're in a room where people think you are up-to-date and smart, you are smart. You pick right up and say things that surprise you. But with a lot of people who think you're a back-number, you are apt to discover yourself saying inane things that you could kick yourself for afterwards. You knew better, but you couldn't help it.

Now it sometimes happens that at the beginning of the school year when everything is new and strange, a boy or girl will set up what might be called a fear wall against the work ahead. They are sure they won't be able to do it well, and consequently are not at their best.

We'll take a hypothetical case of James Jones who has heard that Grade 6 is very, very hard. James is handicapped before he begins.

Discouraged at Beginning

James is a plodder. He gets things slowly, but when once learned, they're there to stay forever. He is a little slow on the pickup while the rest of the room seems to be using a sort of magic about their lessons. The class has the reputation of being far above average, and Miss Black hasn't anticipated any slow-pokes. James marks for last terms were pretty good, but now she is astonished at his passing into her room at all. She simply cannot help looking at the boy with a half frown. Without really speaking a word, she clearly puts poor James in a class by himself. He senses it and freezes, just as anyone would freeze in a roomful of celebrities.

At home his mother and father get completely discouraged. They notice that the boy is in a sort of blue funk. He repeats that he's dumb. He says, "I can't think when I'm in school any more. I'm all mixed up."

His father tells him that he doesn't pay attention. Advises him to listen more attentively and get hold of himself. Maybe he says, "You're getting lazy, boy. Why don't you sharpen your wits and go to it? I'd be ashamed if you got behind."

Between misunderstanding at home, the quick tempo of the class, as well as a certain impatience on his teacher's part, the boy is losing faith in himself.

There is no stimulus to brains like praise. This is what he needs—praise and encouragement. Once he thinks he's pretty good, he'll be a lot smarter.

way in our flight the unadorned gloom of the beginning is supported by cheerful ornamentation; mounting to the close, the structure grows in austere sublimity, yet the presence of the unifying idea is felt everywhere—the single fundamental motive leaves its impress on every part."

The Toccato and Adagio in C, written by Bach for organ, and authoritatively transcribed for piano by Busoni, was next played. Both are fine—the Adagio particularly lovely. It is part of the transcendent genius of Bach, that no matter what instrument his music was originally written for, when translated to another medium it loses none of its power and beauty. Indeed, Bach himself was often his own best transcriber. Mr. MacEwen plays and interprets Bach, extremely well, and one feels that he enjoys doing so.

Bach was followed by Beethoven. From the works of this composer Mr. MacEwen next chose the Sonata Opus 57, labelled "Appasionata" by the publisher Cranz. The name well indicates the stormy and passionate nature of the music, which was said to have been inspired by a reading of Shkaespeare's Tempest. The work, deservedly popular, is a characteristic example of Beethoven's genius, and the recitalist did it full justice, bringing out in particular, all the beauty of the Andante Con Moto, which is the second movement.

Mr. MacEwen next played the Barcarolle of Chopin, followed by a group of etudes from Opus 10 and Opus 25. To this listener, the second etude of the group was very lovely and poignant. The Polonaise in F sharp minor, with its martial vigor and stately cadences was the concluding number of the Chopin group.

The final selection was the Sonata in B minor by Franz Lizt, and in this piece as well as in the Mephisto Waltz, played as an encore, those who like virtuosity and bravura were given an opportunity to enjoy themselves. Lizst as a man had many fine qualities. Prosperous himself because of his fame as a transcendent pianist, he gave generously of his help and funds to any needy musician who required his help, and disposed of large sums in charity. As a musician he made excellent transcriptions for the piano of several of the organ works of Bach and the orchestral works of Beethoven. But it is a thousand pities that in his case the virtuoso should have run away with the composer. Mr. MacEwen's technique was quite equal to the formidable demands Liszt made upon it, and his performance of these numbers was most brilliant.

In response to enthusiastic applause, Mr. MacEwen played two other encore numbers—the tenderly beautiful Chorale "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by J. S. Bach, and the fine Sonata in C major by Scarlatti.

The Women's Music Club is to be commended on presenting Mr. MacEwen in this splendid recital, and one knows that all will wish him well in his further studies in New York this winter.

The President's report is as follows:—

Incredible as it may seem, a year has passed since you elected me as your president. I am grateful for the honour and also for the confidence which you placed in me.

Our first duty after assuming office was to welcome His Excellency, the Governor General, Lord Tweedsmuir. His Excellency very graciously placed a wreath on the monument and greeted in a friendly way each comrade present. An act which was genuinely appreciated.

Remembrance Day was fittingly observed by the usual impressive service. The large gathering of people who assembled with us for this service exemplify the gratitude held for those who made the supreme sacrifice for the cause of freedom and liberty.

Carrying out the usual custom, we attended Divine Service, this year, at the Trinity United Church, with our comrades, the South African Veterans. We also had the honour of sponsoring their Paardeberg Dinner, the responsibility of which might well become an annual event for this Branch.

For the first time, the Charlottetown Branch celebrated that historic date, April the ninth, Vimy Day, which was a decided success, due to the whole hearted cooperation received from the unemployed comrades who carried out the details to such a happy conclusion.

We are grateful to the Provincial Government and City Council for the timely interest taken in the monument. The condition of the masonery was brought to our attention by W. F. Burke and Comrade Donald Kennedy. On taking the matter up with Premier Campbell and Mayor Foster, authority was granted to proceed with the work, without delay. The grass area around the base was enlarged and the unsightly stains and their cause removed. Many favorable comments have been received on the improvements.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing our gratitude to His Honour, Lieutenant Governor DeBlois, for his attendance at our official functions, and for his thoughtful contributions which have been of great assistance, especially in our relief work.

Unemployment and relief continue to be our major problems. The most optimistic cannot see or even hope for any improvement, although Federal, Provincial, and Civic Governments are doing all they possibly can to improve conditions, and we appreciate their efforts on our behalf.

Through the efforts of the Provincial Command and cooperation of the Federal Government, Comrade B. Wonnacott was reappointed Secretary for the Veterans Unemployment Assistance Commission, in this Province, and due to his constant efforts, the welfare of our unemployed comrades is taken care of in a manner that would not be otherwise possible, and it is in their interests that I would suggest the Provincial Command urge to have this position made permanent. Comrade Wonnacott also handled our relief work, and the efficient way in which he carried out this difficult task, along with his other secretarial work, is worthy of our commendation.

We were glad to welcome to our Province, Dominion President Col. W. W. Foster, D.S.O., and General Secretary Major J. R. Bowler, M. B. L. I trust that their visit, here, will stimulate Legion activities to still greater things. Our Provincial President, B. W. Robinson, accompanied by his executive, paid us an official visit, and we will look forward to meeting them again. The active interest taken in the Branches by the higher Commands cannot help but be beneficial.

Our thanks are due to the Ladies Auxiliary for their continued interest in our work. It would be difficult, indeed to carry on without their assistance.

The Executive have, at all times, worked willingly and harmoniously together, each one ready to serve in any way possible. I cannot but hope you will give the incoming President and executive, the same spirit of cooperation as you have given me.

J. S. WALKER
President, Charlottetown Branch.
