HAS ROUGH PASSAGE.—Miss Nan Brow was one of the passengers on the S. S. Degraze which went to the rescue of the ill-fated steamer Kentucky being towed into St. Johns, Nfld., as referred to in yesterday's telegraphic despatch from the bleak and frozen northern land.

In concluding, Mr. Shaw said that the spirit that actuated the work of Service was best told in the poets own words:

To all I sing, and if one of you linger,
Over my pages in the Long, Long Night,
And on some line lay a calloused finger,
Saying: "It's human truth, it hits me right."

Then will I deem the loving toll well spent,
Then will I dream while—content,

A hearty vote of thanks, moved by Mr. S. A. McDonald, seconded by Mr. K. J. Martin, and supported by Mr. C.H. Black Mr. W.L. Cotton and Rev. W. Bruce Muir was tendered the lecturer by the chairman President J. G. MacPadden. Mrs. (Dr.) Gillis accompanied by Mrs. Fred Dorey left yesterday morning for St. John where they will visit the former's sister, Mrs. J. Frank O'Neil, Elliott Row.

Mr. Rufus Hogan left yesterday morning on a visit to Jacksonville, Florida.

Mr. Harry McKay of Eston, Saskatchewan, is visiting in this city and is unaccompanied the reference to Mrs. McKay being incorrect.

The Works

His poems, the lecturer also remarked, contained but little of comedy and light humor. They were unconventional in style, as suited the primitive civilization of the north that most of them attempted to describe. They were full of the hard and pitiless struggle of men who strove to wrest an existence from the bleak and frozen northern land.

In concluding, Mr. Shaw said that the spirit that actuated the work of Service was best told in the poets own words:

To all I sing, and if one of you linger,

Street Car Rooms
Printers Chafe
Over Delay

NEW YORK, March 14.—Up and down and to and fro through the dark streets of Brooklyn, a street car roamed yesterday morning. It was looking for Brooklyn Bridge, from whence it had started. While a motorman and an inspector strained their eyes to see the names on passing streets, 20 printers offered advice from the body of the car. The printers had boarded the "Typers Special" at three o'clock to Flatbush but the motorman took a wrong turning and they found themselves a couple of hours late, at Walby market, miles from their destination.

"Gotta stay on the tracks," said the motorman. Every now and then he stopped the car and the inspector got out to ask a policeman. At the dawnning they found Brooklyn Bridge again, but the printers were too upset to appreciate the romance of the situation.

THE LATE CAPT. WELLINGTON HUME.

The funeral of the late Capt. Wellington Hume was held from his late residence, at Iris, on Wed, Feb. 24th, and notwithstanding the almost impassable condition of the roads was well attended.

In accordance with his last wish interment was at Brooklyn. This necessitated the traversing for a distance of an unfrequented road which was utterly impassable for horses, which had to be abandoned when this was reached, and it was a touching sight to see the body being borne along by the hands of faithful friends across the intervening space to where they were met with horses from Brooklyn and the journey by team resumed.

It was widely known and highly respected.

Visions London
100 Years Hence

LONDON, Mar. 4.—London of one hundred years hence, instead of being grimy, badly planned and old-fashioned, like most of the present day British metropolises, will be a civic paradise, girt by a belt of beautiful parks and intersected by splendid boulevards, if G. T. Forrest, Chief Architect of the London County Council, has his way. In a remarkable address delivered at a private meeting of experts, he declared now was the time to plan for making this new London, otherwise the city will simply grow up haphazard as in the past, and become even less suited to the growing demands of up-to-date traffic than the London of today.

Mr. Forrest objects emphatically to seeking to limit London's growth. "What he deems necessary is a wise direction of its development."

"The coming of the motor car led us at first to believe that people would live farther and farther from the centre of London," said Mr. Forrest. "Now there is a tendency in the opposite direction, and we will probably find as time goes on, that more and more people who own cars will move into flats near the centre area. They will use their cars for getting out of London rather than for coming into it."

—LECTURE IN KENSINGTON.—A large audience gathered in the King George Hall, Kensington, Wednesday evening when Mr. John Anderson of Charlottetown gave a lengthy and delightfully interesting description of his recent visit to Scotland and France, which was intensely listened to. The choir of the Presbyterian Church rendered a short musical program of choruses, trios and solos. Mrs. McAdam who is at present visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McEwen, greatly pleased the audience with her fine rendition of "Story of Arville." The financial result, $22.60 will be used in procuring new music and anthems for the choir. At the close of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. J. F. Proffit, seconded by Mr. Robert Agnew, while impressive remarks were made by Dr. Genge and others in appreciation of Mr. Anderson's kindness to them.

Collects Fake Damages From 33
Rail Companies

NEW YORK, Mar. 4.—The New York World says that after fraudulently collecting money for fictitious injuries from at least 33 railroads and traction companies in seven states, Harry Peters, 35 of Philadelphia, has begun a sentence of two or three years in the state prison at Brenton, N. J. In 1922 Peters' eye was injured when a piece of steel became imbedded in the ball. He collected damages for an injury. Eighteen months ago, he began a series of frauds on various railroads, claiming in every case, that an electric bulb had smashed beside him and a piece of glass had become lodged in his eye. The condition of his eye substantiated his story, and he collected a total of about $5,000 damages from the 33 companies.

Stevens.
"I took my instructions from my superiors," was the answer.
"You took your instructions in these cases from the minister direct," pursued Mr. Stevens.
"Yes."

He would like to see the official who would not take instructions from the minister.
Mr. Stevens then questioned about the objection of Mr. Bisailon to the appointment of Mr. Pichet to the service. Mr. Stevens read a letter by Bisailon opposing Pichet's appointment. One ground was because he was "associate of Falcon."
"He is the king pin of smugglers," stated Mr. Bisailon, in an answer to a question of Mr. Stevens regarding Falcon.
Mr. Stevens proceeded to read the letter further, described Falcon as a "high road smuggler and an acolyte of Oscar Gagnon, the lawyer."

The committee roared with laughter, and immediately Oscar Gagnon, Bisailon's counsel jumped to his feet. He emphatically denied that he was the "acolyte" of any crooks. He was practicing criminal law in Montreal, he pointed out. He asked the committee to take a proper and fair view of this matter. "If you want to make a charge against me you are welcome," Mr. Gagnon heatedly challenged.
Questioned about his relationship with Hon. Mr. Bureau, witness declared that he was an "intimate associate" of the former minister.
Mr. Gagnon strenuously objected at this stage to any attempt to try to associate me with my client."

Luther Bible
Is Reported
Found in Berlin

BERLIN, March 4.—The Neue Berliner Zeitung says that a Bible which is believed to have belonged to Martin Luther, has been discovered among the possessions of a bookseller of Chemnitz. (The book which is said to have been printed by one, Hans Lufft, of Wittenberg, is an Old Testament. Numerous marginal notes, apparently written in Luther's hand, leads to the belief that the reformer used the book in the preparation of his translation of the Bible.
