British Girls Anxious To Get Near To Action

BY DENISE DALY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Dec. 6 — (CP) — The number of members of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division in Britain) has increased tremendously since the initial contingent came some 18 months ago and the number is increasing constantly now that girls are beginning to enlist in England for this service.

The majority who join the service here are English girls who were already overseas before the war.

Many of the English girls who enlist do so because their husbands are able to work in England and they want to get close to fighting as they can. They join a Canadian service because they are a Canadian girl.

They are such girls as AW Dorothy Roe and AW2 Mary Smithers whose husbands were serving in the front lines. The new WD's are given three weeks of basic training and then, according to their past experience, they train as cooks, for clerical duties or as teleprinter operators or dental assistants.

Unlike the CWACs who live in barracks, WD's find their own places to room. Most of them share flats with two or three other girls. After the day's work the WD's go to their flats, cook dinner and do their washing, ironing or darning. Some of them attend cooking classes in their spare time or a conversational French course. During the summer they played softball, which has given place to bminion and later on the girls hope to skate.

WD's regularly send a small party each Sunday to a local club to cheer up injured Canadian airmen. "The boys seem really to appreciate it and we benefit from the visit just as much as the boys," said L.W. M. MacKinnon, Moscomin, Sask. "We get cheered up just to see them so cheerful despite all they have to bear."

Could he have a busy time since the girls came to Britain. These were the marriages of: Sgt. Officer Nancy Smith, Calgary, to Major D. B. McArthur, Toronto; Sgt. Mary Ward, Shawinigan Falls, Que., to Lieut. E. A. Beneman, Dutch trial officer; C. J. Levens of Toronto to L.A.O. D. S. (Red) Wible of Vancouver; L.W. Mary Iscoe to Pte. Roy Wolfe both of Toronto; L.W. Faye Brownless of Gravenhurst, Ont., to Pte. Sgt. Max Webster of Windsor, Ont.

With the growth of the WD's in Britain more officers are required and some of the girls from the first group of WD's to arrive have been chosen to train with W. A. F. officer cadets.

They are: Sgt. Helen Cotterill, Hamilton Ont.; Cpl. Peggy Douglas, Winnipeg; Cpl. Hazel Kendall, Toronto; Cpl. Margaret Lay, Arden; Cpl. Margery McLaren, Montreal; Sgt. C.A. Stackhouse, Lachine Que.; Cpl. L. G. Simms, Toronto and AW C. M. Smith, who enlisted in Montreal but whose parents live in Stornaway, Scotland.

THE LINEMAN

This subject of this sketch by Grant Macdonald, noted Canadian artist, is Ronul Bernier, Canadian National Telegraphs lineman. He is one of a large group of workers who aid effectively in Canada's war effort by maintaining the nation's vast communications system. The artist has depicted him using a spanner to tighten the straps by which cable is suspended from the supporting wire, technically known as the "messenger wire." The increase in channel mileage, the measure of message traffic, of the Canadian National Telegraphs since the start of the war would circle the globe nearly four times.
