ROYAL COMMISSION ANALYST & Zam-Buk

A PURE emollient of great healing power—one well adapted for treatment of skin injuries and diseases. This, in brief, is the report of W. Lascelles-Scott, F. S. Sc. (Lond.), of Little Ilford, England, after submitting Zam-Buk to a series of clinical and personal tests.

DR. SCOTT writes:—"I have chemically analysed the unguent preparation known as "ZAM-BUK," samples having been obtained from the makers direct and by independent purchase. Zam-Buk is a balsamic ointment of pale green colour, and agreeable aromatic odour. Its constituents being exclusively of herbal origin, Zam-Buk contains none of the impure and often irritating mineral drugs and animal fats present in less carefully prepared ointments; hence it never exhibits a tendency to rancidity.

"Zam-Buk is possessed of rare antiseptic and bacteriacidal power which promptly alleviates cutaneous disorders due to parasites and pathogenic organisms. Moreover, its astringent and balsamic constituents render Zam-Buk an emollient of great healing power.

"I have no hesitation in certifying the entire purity of Zam-Buk. It is well adapted for the treatment of superficial injuries and skin disorders."

NOVA SCOTIA LEGISLATURE

Discussion of Public Accounts Report Featured Yesterday's Session of Provincial Parliament.

(Canadian Press)

HALIFAX, N. S., March 2. — Hon. William Chisholm, leader of the opposition, took the opportunity when the motion was put this afternoon in the legislative assembly, to go into committee of supply, to launch a criticism of the public accounts for the year 1926. He charged that assets which had been declared of no value by the report of the auditors, had been included in the balance sheet of the public accounts this year and expressed his belief that the auditors had not seen the accounts in question at all but had attached their certificate to the report on information given them by the government.

He was answered by John Doull, Conservative, Pictou, Premier Rhodes and Hon. G. S. Harrington, Minister of Public Works, speaking in turn, and was supported in his criticism by a Conservative member, W. B. Armstrong, Colchester. The debate was featured by a light censure administered by the Premier following the remarks of Mr. Armstrong, who had questioned the efficiency of the report and asked that the government "manfully and courageously face the true situation and give the people the facts in connection with the financial condition of the country."

Premier Rhodes questioned the ability of "Lawyers however good they may be in their professions", criticising the work of a firm of auditors which numbers among its employers the Royal Bank of Canada. It was not competent, he believed for such a person to cast aspersions upon the public accounts of Nova Scotia which bore the certification of such a firm of auditors.

Mr. Armstrong, making two attempts to interrupt the Premier only to be met with refusal on the part of the latter to brook interruptions, was given an opportunity to ask his question when the Premier finished, he wished to know if he had been included in the remarks of the premier.

"If the circumstances fit your case, than alright" replied the premier, who had said during the course of his remarks that he was not referring particularly to the statements of the leader of the opposition.

Hon. Mr. Chisholm was answered by the Minister of Works and Mines, who had made the motion to go into supply. He admitted that there were possibly some items mentioned in the balance sheets that were not assets in the true sense of the word, but they represented expenditures that had been made and something had to be shown on the opposite side of the sheet. Up to the present no means had been discovered whereby that procedure could be obviated. It would undoubtedly be done in time. The expenditures had been made on these items with no provision made for retiring them as assets when their value became exhausted. He referred to bridges, culverts and buildings among other things mentioned by the opposition leader in his criticism.

There was nothing to be gained by making general charges against the report of the public accounts, Mr. Harrington said, nor was it fair to make insinuating statements in the house, he awaited, he said, a direct charge framed in specific detail. He would be only too glad to act upon any valuable suggestion that might be advanced from any quarter whereby the financial statement could be improved.

Considerable progress was made on the estimates for the department of natural resources. Frank Stanfield and others objected to a provision to take over a vacant farm near Truro for the use of the Agriculture Department in training boys who are to be brought out from England under a joint scheme with the Federal government for colonization purposes. He declared that money was being spent with no return to that department and that the plant at Truro was large enough to take care of all activities. One building in Truro he said, an expensive one belonging, to the Agricultural College was being used more for dances than any other purpose. He objected to making any more outlay there as being bad business. The item passed with the reservation that it might be reconsidered at a future time.

Ban Sought on Unions of British Civil Servants

LONDON, March 2, — Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told a large civil service deputation today that the government no longer can tolerate "divided allegiance" in the Civil Service.

He said that the question of relationship of civil servants to the trade union movement would be dealt with in the coming trade union legislation, which besides making a general strike illegal will, according to Mr. Churchill, virtually disfranchise trade unions, catering for civil servants, of their power to affiliate with the Trade Union Congress and the labor party. Nearly 100 unions will be affected by the proposed legislation and it is expected that the whole trade union movement will stoutly resist any attempt by the government to deny the right to combination to civil workers, assuming Mr. Churchill's use of the phrase "civil servant" to embrace all government employes and not solely the higher ranks in government offices.

The question of how far civil servants are privileged to belong to and obey trade unions became acute as a result of last year's general strike.

SHARING THE GOOD NEWS

It would be difficult to imagine a happier association of Scripture paragraphs than is here found. They fit each other like tenon and mortice. There is something subtle and arresting in the nice exactitude. One realizes that he is touching a fine underlying principle of the greatest, most persistent and universal of all the phenomena of history.

Persecution of the Christian Church whether by ecclesiasticism or imperialism defeated itself. It scattered the converts as has been said like live coals, blest incendiaries of the world.

When Philip went to Samaria it was only one more proof and illustration of how the Christians rose above race prejudice. In the kaleidoscope of Pentecost they had seen a beautiful pattern of how all races were to be included in the shining of the Gospel. They worked to that end. They were not toiling to support an institution. As yet there was none. They were not defending a system of theology. Such a system had not yet been elaborated. They had a vivid realization of the Person of God and his immediate and gracious relation to man. They saw God revealed in Jesus. They understood the meaning and motive of his sacrifice. They felt themselves associated in that sacrifice in such a way that they could no longer live selfishly. They must be "ambassadors", devoted to "the ministry of reconciliation."

In this spirit Philip went to Samaria, Peter went to Syria and Paul went to Europe. And what happened in Samaria happened everywhere. Multitudes "gave heed to the things spoken." And the final and net result was "much joy" everywhere.

It is improbable that Philip preached a formal sermon with text after the modern method. He rather entered into conversation with those whom he met, answering their questions and explaining the work of Jesus, not to an audience but to individuals or groups of such. His great success was in the "August City", so named for the Emperor Augustus. More and more Philip felt himself "constrained," shut up to one course, that of being an evangelist of the good news of Jesus Christ. His human speech was to convey the Divine word of reconciliation. His human sympathy led him to associate himself with those to whom he ministered. So that he always said "our need" never "your need"! Such a ministry could not fail! It was a triumphant success.

UNDER THE STUDY LAMP

Religion is a joy creator, not a joy-killer. It made Samaria happy as it had never been before. It did the same for the cities of Asia Minor and Europe and so on and everywhere and ever since.... If Britain's drum-beat is heard 'round the globe so is the shout of Christian gladness.... It is passing strange that religion has ever been associated with sadness or gloom. Perhaps this came from an exaggerated emphasis upon the suffering of Jesus. But the Master's greatest legacy to his disciples was his "joy". He said "My joy I leave with you." His desire was that their joy might be "full"....

Lesson X 2.

Religion creates an unfailing fountain in the heart, a fountain of gladness. It does not depend upon external sources. It is neither augmented nor reduced by them. It is the consciousness of union with God. It is the peace and happiness of heaven in anticipation, a foretaste of it. It has been said that most of the appearing mirth of the world is not mirth but art. The wounded spirit is not seen but walks under a disguise. .... Doubt hamstrings evangelistic effort. Under Philip's effort to evangelize Samaria was the profound conviction of the truth of his message. That is what has given character and success to every similar effort in every part of the world unto this present day. The simple enthusiasm of faith must be regained if the early triumphs of Christianity are to be repeated. Devotion to an ecclesiastical institution or to a system of theology is no substitute for this.. Zeal for conversion and a strictly religious life must clothe the successful evangelist like Jesus' seamless robe.... It is an open question whether the evangelizing energy of Christianity has not almost died out. The more is the pity since the world never stood in greater need of the "good news" from Jesus Christ, the tidings that are really good and which make good.

Motto: A man is but a steward of his own goods whereof God will one day demand an account. Babees Book.

STEWARDSHIP AS A RULE OF LIVING. (Consecration Meeting.)

In Jesus' parable the Lord of the stewards did not give any cut and dryed program of how they were to proceed. Instead of that he gave leeway to the personal judgment of each. Each was to use his own mind and method. This is the Divine way of training. Each is to get "straighway" to his work and keep at it. Fidelity insures increased capacity and increased reward. So it will be in heaven hereafter and forever.

WHY IS TEN-MILLION-DOLLAR OFFER NOT ADMITTED BY U. S.? ASKS PARIS

PARIS, March 2. —The United States Treasury's coyness in admitting that France is offering an extra $10,000,000 over and above what she must pay this year is considerably puzzling the French public, which has Premier Poincare's word for it that the offer has been made, and knows also fairly fully in what terms it has been presented.

The Premier himself may know what the hitch is which has led to a long series of denials that any offer has been made, and then that it was not official, but he is not telling.

If the reason lies in any hope on the part of the United States Government of attaching to the acceptance of the offer any kind of promise that this payment will connote acceptance of the terms of the Mellon-Berenger agreement, then that hope is doomed to a most dismal disappointment.

Settling at St. Mary's Road at a tim ewhen the land was held in the embrace of the primival forest, he with his wife and family succeeded in bringing his farm to a high state of cultivation, and erecting buildings thereon, which are a credit to his persevering energy.

To the aged and bereaved wife and family the deep sympathy of the community is extended.

MR. NEIL MCKENZIE
