THE MORNING GUARDIAN

SATURDAY, NOV. 28, 1903.

NORTHWEST TERRITORIES.

During the past three years the Northwest Territories have been agitating for provincial autonomy. They had a population in 1901 of 211,649 and it has since rapidly increased. Beyond question the people of the Territories are in earnest in pressing their claims. The matter came up in the Territorial Legislature last week when Premier Haultain made an exceedingly strong speech reciting all the facts of the case and concluding with a resolution to present a humble address to His Excellency the Governor General-in-Council on the matter. This resolution was carried unanimously.

The agitation may be said to have begun with a resolution passed by the Territorial Legislature in 1900, followed by the members of the Territorial Government going to Ottawa and submitting their claims in writing. They were informed that it was not considered advisable to take the matter up. In 1902 the North West Assembly repeated it's previous resolution in substance, which a minority of the House desired to make stronger, and six months ago the Assembly reiterated the demand for a provincial status for the Territories, with the better financial terms which are allowed to Provinces.

Nothing came of this application and Mr. Borden took up the cause of the Territories in Parliament. He brought in a resolution asking that the request which had been so urgently made for self-government in local matters should be granted, but this was voted down by the ministerial majority. This gives a sort of political turn to the present agitation in the Territories, where the people, whether rightly or wrongly, are very much in earnest over this matter and appear to think the Laurier Government is holding in check their legitimate aspirations. At present it would appear that the agitation may have some effect upon the turn of the federal elections in the Territories.

BRITISH STATESMEN'S PAY.

Although members of the British Parliament serve without pay, those who hold positions in the Administration are pretty well remunerated. Of forty-nine members of the ministry those receiving least pay are the Junior Lords of the Admiralty who get £1,000 each (nearly $5,000) The Secretaries of the Board of Trade, and of the Local Government Board are paid $6,000 each. Half a dozen Under Secretaries receive $7,500 each. The Lord Privy Seal, Lord President of the Council, the Presidents of the Board of Trade, Agriculture, Education and of the Local Government Board, the Secretary for Scotland, the First Commissioner of Works, two Secretaries of the Treasury and others get $10,000 each. The First Lord of the Treasury, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Home Secretary, Colonial Secretary, War Secretary, Indian Secretary and Foreign Secretary have salaries of $25,000 each. The Lord Chancellor's salary is $50,000, and that of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland $100,000. These figures are not quite exact, being slightly excessive from valuing the pound sterling at five dollars.

Coughs, colds, hoarseness, and other throat ailments are quickly relieved by Cresolene tablets. ten cents per box. All druggists.
