Mayor McIntyre Warns People of Montague

A public meeting was held in Montague Wednesday for the purpose of organizing a volunteer fire brigade. Mayor McIntyre presided and explained to the citizens the dire state of affairs which existed in regard to their present methods and equipment for fire fighting in the town. Fire Marshal Beer, who recently visited Montague in connection with his duties, told the mayor that unless something was done immediately the citizens would not benefit from the new fire insurance coming into effect soon, but on the other hand fire rates would like be raised. The Mayor then summed up the present state of the fire equipment and cited the lack of proper quarters for housing this equipment. He also lack of a suitable fire alarm for the town. He also explained that an account of the expenditure for sidewalks and pavement highway in the town, the Councilors did not see the way clear to spending money on fire equipment in recent years. The present hose equipment consists of 200 feet of good rubber hose also 450 feet of secondary material. The Mayor concluded his remarks by saying that the best fire fighters in the world were in Montague if they were properly trained, and he hoped to see them trained as soon as possible. He pointed out where certain houses in the town were not protected from fire, due to the limited length of hose available.

Mr. Cecil Wightman was appointed the new fire chief for the town of Montague and George MacIntyre was appointed to be his deputy. A delegation of three men, Mr. Bob Clements, Mr. Jack Clair and Allison McLean was appointed to assist the mayor in selecting a new fire brigade. Other speakers, Messrs. W. A. McLoggan, Jack Clair, Bob Clements, W. Gorrick, K. Clark and D. McDonald made helpful suggestions with regard to methods of fire fighting.

With The Bargain Hunter

By E. O. LAIRD
As I pushed along the aisles of the large, department store with hundreds of other women who, like myself, were looking for and expecting to get something for next-to-nothing, I was aware that the crowd was noisy yet tense and orderly. I heard a gasp of surprise as I pounced upon a mouse with much pawing and clawing thereafter. Customers behind me, like those who drive motor cars, they hogged not roads but counters; friends met and passed with a stare, or followed by; now so much as pause to say, "I beg your pardon." They were after bargains, and it mattered little to them whether anyone else was or not.

I joined the mob that was surging through the elevator to the millinery department on the floor. It deposited me beside a table filled with white linen hats. I was looking for a hat to wear to a picnic. So were a hundred other women. I was about to pick up a wide-brimmed one which appealed to me when a tall woman bowed over my left shoulder and seized the hat. By the time I recovered from this slight-of-hand performance, I was three tiers from the table. But ten minutes later I was again within arm's length and having watched my discarded linen hat catapult from hand to hand up and down the table several times, I decided, "I'll get that one myself." I reached for it and caught it as it shot by. Nor were my troubles over. Peering into a mirror which reflected my downy hair and face, I never rightly figured out which of these belonged to me. However, I bought the hat.

In the dress department "there were excellent bargains," said the young saleswoman whom I was fortunate enough to encounter. "If Madam will step this way," Madam did, and soon was sharing a 3 x 6 cubic with half-a-dozen feverish young matrons. "This one looks very well," said the saleswoman at the end of the fifth round of looking on. "If you wish me to bring one or two more," she went away. "I'll do," I said to myself. Stepping out of the cubicle with the dress in my hands, I looked about for my saleswoman. Another saleswoman stepped up to me, seized the dress. "Madam," said she accusingly, "this dress was sold." and vanished. I felt like a worm. The worm turned—and went out of the dress department.

"Now, though, I consulting my memorandum, I want material for a comfort. That department is on the second floor." Alas! Twenty minutes later I stepped out on the first floor. I had been whisked from the third floor to the basement, from the third to the first, from the first, and again to first. I was breathless and hot. "I may as well go to the history counter, now I'm here," I decided. "I'll get that material later."

Three times I was propelled past the history eye of came to rest at the counter. Here I found myself next to a man who towered above a small, meek-looking woman. He used his hands, elbows, arms and body to such advantage he appeared like a giant octopus guarding a small crayfish. Under his protection the crawling swam slowly from counter to counter picking up bargains as if they were delicate morsels of food. The octopus was How I wished for an Octopus too, when I reached the second floor; for here was a tired but still energetic mob of women. The counters were piled with driftings of color into which it burrowed feverishly, and over which distracted clerks measured, cut, snipped and sewed. Thinking I saw what I wanted draped over a form at the farther end of a counter, I waved my shopping bag towards it and mouthed to a saleswoman, "Ten yards of that, please."

"Are these same christian women?" I heard a masculine voice exclaim as I was about to leave the store. Turning indignantly, I saw myself in a tall mirror. My hat was not only tilted rakishly over one ear, it was on backwards! My fur neckpiece flapped from one shoulder, the second button of my coat was fastened over the first button. To complete the picture, one of the new stockings was bunched shamelessly from the shopping bag.

I had many things when I arrived home, but I am doubtful that they were bargains. Two sore and weary feet; a scratched wrist; a body bristling with pins and needles; and a temperature; the wide-brimmed hat, which I must have seen over someone else's face; a pair of stockings too large and large and ten yards of flowered curtain madras!

20 PAY LIFE POLICY PAID-UP AND GIVES EXCELLENT RETURNS

This week we received the following letter from an Ontario clergyman whose 20 Pay Life policy has become paid up:

"Dear Sirs: Time flies. It seems like yesterday when I was 32 and a man named Kilpatrick came into my barn when I was feeding my horse and talked me into Policy No. 135,859. That was in 1918. Then I was in receipt of less than a thousand a year stipend. But each year since I have made my payments of $34.50 on time, and I am indeed glad I took Mr. Kilpatrick's advice.

I have paid in $686.00 and I understand from your letter that my policy now has a cash value of $681.97, including my dividends of $277.97. I wish as at this time to thank The Mutual Life for the courtesy always shown me both from headquarters and from the various agents who have always been interested in me. We are not parting company, Policy 135,859 will continue in force (unless I become hard pressed for money) as long as I live, and my family will have the $1,000 protection. I will take the dividends of $277.97 in cash and leave the cash value of $684, which I understand will increase each year and to which will be added dividends in your capable hands."

Any of our representatives, or Head Office will be glad to quote figures for a 20 Pay Life policy for you.

THIS IS WALES CALLING! FOR GOODWILL DAY, MAY 18TH, 1938

(For seventeen years the children of Wales have sent out a Radio Message to the world. Thanks to the kindly assistance of Ambassadors and Ministers of countries abroad attached to the Court of St. James, of the High Commissioners of the Dominions, of Directors of Education in all lands, and of Directors of Broadcasting Stations, the message has gone and is going to all five continents in the many languages spoken. A copy may be obtained on application, of the 20-page illustrated booklet of 1938 with the text of the message in seven languages.)

This is Wales calling! The boys and girls of Wales are calling the boys and girls of all the world! We rejoice to think that, above the tumult, on this one day of the year, we can greet each other as members of one great family, the family of the nations of the future. The world is full of suffering, cruelty and strife, and we are told that civilization may perish. Let us tell that civilization shall not perish.

More than ever the world needs what we alone can give—the confidence and comradeship of youth. May we then, on this Goodwill Day, dedicate ourselves afresh to the service of our fellows in every part of the world; to the service of our home, of our neighborhood, of our country, so that our country may better serve the world to which we all belong.

WHAT IS GOODWILL DAY?

May 18th
The question is best answered by the letter of Mrs. J. F. Rowe, National Superintendent of Peace and International Relations, which appeared in April "Findings" on page 68, and from which are here repeated specially for the young people. The whole letter with its practical suggestions is well worth re-reading.

"Every country throughout the world has its day of celebration—its anniversary of some great event or perhaps the birthday of some famous person. One of these days which is common to all countries, is Goodwill Day, May 18th—commemorating the opening of the first Peace Conference at The Hague in 1899.

"The observance of world Goodwill Day was first proposed in 1900 by European members of the International Council of Women. Later the League of Nations and the League of Nations Association recommended its observance in all the schools throughout the world.

"It was the children of Wales who in 1922 sent out the first world radio message of peace. Since that time replies to their messages have been received from schools in over 70 countries.

"In 1936, at La Plata, in Argentina, the children had the happy idea of starting a garden of peace in which were planted flowers and trees representing all the countries in the world. The same year according to a press report in a Johannesburg (South Africa) Daily over 200 women of all denominations gathered at the city hall in Kimberley to celebrate the annual Peace Day (May 18th)."

"This year on May 18th Holland will again see a women's peace procession. This fits in with the fact that "Cannot the women of Canada in their Unions from Coast to Coast also make an effective contribution to the cause of peace on Goodwill Day?"

CHAINED TO HABIT

(An essay written by Harold Brercombe, Dublin St. S.S., Guelph, Ont. (13 years of age).)

Man takes a drink. He is not particular whether he shall drink or not. Surely one drink can do no harm. So this man takes his first drink. He feels all right and looks all right. He has the same reasoning powers and enough will power to say, "No thank you," to the offered second drink. He leaves the beverage room and goes home well satisfied with himself.

Drink Takes A Drink That night, he felt as if he wanted more. He didn't want to become intoxicated. He just wished for a little more. True, he started out to get another drink. He was not so well pleased with himself now, but still, as long as he didn't become intoxicated, what was the harm. For weeks he continued to feed one drink with another and so on. However, let us see the same man about two months later.

Drink Takes The Man His footsteps are unsteady. His hand is shaky. He avoids the main streets and all his old friends. He flushes with shame as his wife greets him bravely. He has lost his former job. Above all, he cannot keep away from drink. He has lost, except of his will power. He is

Nerves Were So Bad Could Not Stand The Children Playing

The happiness of every home depends largely on the health of the wife and mother. If she is nervous, peevish and irritable, worried by the cares of the household, and tormented by the pains and irregularities that accompany a run down system, there can be no happiness in the home for the husband and children.

Women who are weak and run down, nervous and irritable should take a course of Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills to help restore them to the blessing of good health.

Mrs. THOMAS KIRK, Neston, Alta., writes—"I was in such a weak, run down condition before I started using Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills I could not do my housework, and would be so nervous I could hardly stand the noise of the children at their play. Now, after taking three boxes of H. & N. Pills I feel like a different person. I shall always tell anyone not feeling well to use your medicine." Put up by The T. Milburn Co., Ltd.
