

YOU BET IT PAYS TO USE NEW IMPROVED CERESAN on Oats, Barley and Wheat!

There's a treatment that pays big returns in less disease and higher yields. This dust, says a Division of Botany report, effectively controls the smuts of oats, covered smut of barley, and bunt of wheat.

Entomology

THE CARROT RUST FLY Young carrots are often observed to turn a reddish rusty color in the spring about the time thinning should be done, and later wither and die. Examination reveals the presence of a small yellowish or brownish pointed maggot about one-third inch long when it attains its full size. This burrows in the root causing the death of the plant.

THE CARROT RUST FLY (Continued) The parents of these maggots is a small delicate fly with a dark shiny body, with yellowish head and legs, about one-sixth inch long. This fly appears in June, usually during the second or third week. They deposit their minute, white, lined and pitted eggs on the soil about the plants, usually in patches. For this reason, unless the flies are exceptionally numerous the infestation is usually "patchy".

THE CARROT RUST FLY (Continued) The following are not guaranteed. Corrosive substance 1 oz. to 10 gal. of water applied so as to wet the plants and the soil about them, beginning when they are about an inch high and continuing at five day intervals until three applications have been made. This is known as recommended for onion maggot is recommended.

THE CARROT RUST FLY (Continued) These tiny, green plant lice occasionally become numerous during the summer months on carrot, parsnip and other plants of the parsley family. As a result the plants wither and in severe cases, especially during dry weather, die as a result of the insects attacks.
