

UNCLE JOHN NOTICES A CHANGE

Uncle John likes the children immensely - though they used to fuss terribly about eating. Uncle John would say, "Well, I used to fret, too, about eating when I was their age. They'll get over it."

Uncle John visited us again last week. And the first day, he said, "I've never seen a family so cheerful at breakfast!" I said, "Neither had we - until we discovered Rice Krispies! The children eat Rice Krispies without coaxing - and come back for second helpings!"

Children love Kellogg's Rice Krispies. First they listen to that "Snap, Crackle, Pop!" - then they eat up every one of those tasty, toasted rice bubbles. Rice Krispies are really delicious.

Wholesome and easy to digest. Sold by all grocers - made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Collector Finds Old Typewriters Absorbing Hobby

WINNIPEG, Aug. 31 - "Any old typewriter" is the motto of Carl P. Dietz of Milwaukee, Wis. collector of ancient and strange typewriters, was in Winnipeg recently to see what the town had to offer.

It took him just two hours to locate two early-type machines. He will add these to the 315 different models he already had given the Milwaukee museum.

"The typewriter was invented in Milwaukee," Dietz said. "There, Rhoads and Glidden made a machine using piano keys, 65 years ago. When I decided in 1924 to collect machines I thought 15 or 20 would be a good collection. I have since found there are more than 300 kinds manufactured under 27 different names."

Dietz, a Milwaukee alderman, claims his collection is the only one in America and believes it is three times as large as either of two collections in Europe.

TRUCK OVERTURNS - A truck overturned on the Pisquid Road last evening, it was learned. No one was injured, Mounted Police said.

STOLEN CAPS LOCATED - Thirty-four men's caps, out of a three dozen lot stolen from Mr. Prentice Andrew's car on Euston Street Saturday night were located yesterday about nine miles from the City limits. The goods were found when a boy discovered a cap behind a fence on a lane leading off the Malpeque Road. He took the cap home where examination revealed it was new. City Police were notified and the cap taken to the station. Officers were struck with the similarity of the cap shown them with the description given by the traveller of the sample goods taken from his parked machine. Subsequently Constable McLean went with the boy to the lane where the cap was found; a little search revealed 33 caps rolled up in a man's sweater hidden in the bushes not far from the edge of the lane. Police were carrying on further investigation.

proposal have you to submit to this government for consideration."

(After repeating his objections to the project and declaring Ontario had ample power, that the proposal was not economically justified, and that it would adversely affect the railway problem, Mr. Hepburn closed with the following: "Irrespective of any propaganda or quackery play that might be conducted by you, you may rest assured that this government will resist any effort to force us to expend public funds in such an unwarrantable manner or to foist upon the people of Ontario an additional burden of debt and taxation."

Mr. MacKenzie King reminded the Ontario Premier that the United States proposals sent him last May 31 were for negotiations on the whole Great Lakes-St. Lawrence project, including development of the international section for navigation and power, preservation of the scenic beauties of Niagara Falls and provision for increased power there, recognition that waters diverted from the Hudson Bay watershed into the Great Lakes would be available to Canada for other purposes, and other questions.

The Federal government was primarily concerned with improvement of navigation, lake levels and water diversion at Chicago, the Prime Minister wrote, and was examining draft proposals on these questions.

Returns From Visit To Halifax Fair

Mr. J. W. Boulter, secretary of the Prince Edward Island Potato Growers Association, and secretary of the P. E. I. Provincial Exhibition Association, returned to Charlottetown last night, after a trip to the mainland, during which he visited the Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition, and attended the centennial of Acadia University at Wolfville, N. S. He was accompanied by his son Mr. Cedric Boulter.

The Exhibition was very well arranged, he thought, and "got away to a good start." Attendance for the first day he said, had been exceptionally good, and praised the Vaudeville attractions.

He made special mention of the "wonderful display of school work," such as drawing, writing, and other curricular activities of children in the Nova Scotia schools.

The various displays in the industrial building were most interesting, he said, the displays well arranged and very instructive, giving a keen insight of the province's major industries.

He had attended the centennial exercises of Acadia University at Wolfville the preceding week, and made his visit to Halifax following the centennial closing Sunday last. There had been a registration of approximately 1,100 former students of Acadia at the exercises, he said, and there had been more than 2,000 in attendance at the Sunday service in the University's convocation hall.

Gang Lawyer Links Hines With Racket

Thousand Paid Tammany Leader a Political "Fixer", Claim.

(By JOHN FERRIS Associated Press Staff Writer)

NEW YORK, Aug. 31 - (AP) - J. Richard (Dick) Davis, the broken mouthpiece of the once powerful Dutch Schultz policy racket, swore in Supreme Court today that Tammany Leader James J. Hines was paid thousands of dollars by the mob and in return fixed court cases and had policemen transferred.

The cocksure little disbarred gang lawyer said also that Hines interceded with the Federal Government on Schultz's behalf when the gangster was a fugitive from income tax evasion charges.

Outraged at his first appearance on the stand, the brilliant "boy lawyer" who was indicted with Hines and pleaded guilty, gave Justice Ferdinand Pecora a very colorful and comprehensive picture of the operations of the cunning Schultz who turned an old Harlem gambling game into a $20,000,000-a-year racket.

CORROBORATES TESTIMONY

Corroborating the testimony of George Weinberg, the mob's business manager, who likewise pleaded guilty to conspiracy and racket charges, Hines testified:

"That Hines at the gang's behest, obtained the release of policy defendants before Magistrate Hulon Capshaw;

"That Hines did the same in another policy case, heard before the late Magistrate Francis J. Erwin;

"That Hines picked William C. Dodge as his man for the district attorneyship in the 1923 election because Dodge was 'stupid';

"That in pursuance of this support of Dodge he collected $30,000 or more from the Schultz mob to help finance Dodge's campaign, and also engaged 'hosters' to block thousands of votes for Dodge;

"That Hines attempted to block the appointment of Thomas E. Dewey, now prosecuting him as District Attorney, as special racket prosecutor after Davis warned him that Dewey was 'a tough man';

"That $500 a week or more was paid almost openly to Hines for 'protection'."

Davis testified finally that Hines "saw" the lawyer, Max D. Steuer, when Steuer was a fugitive and asked him to visit George Z. Medalle, United States Attorney, to see if he could compromise the case for Schultz Medalle, Davis said, refused.

Davis' declaration that Hines served for the transfer of several policemen who had taken part in raids on the policy banks, corroborated Weinberg's recital of a strange tale of intimidation and conniving, and also supported the testimony of four or five of the policemen who testified they were transferred to remote districts apparently because of their racket activities, although no reason was given them.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey asked Davis about the police raid on the bank policy operated by Alexander Pompey for the combination of Thanksgiving eve, 1922, Davis, sick abed, called one of the two assistants who worked with him on policy cases, and had the case adjourned to Capshaw's court.

"I had secured a copy of the complaint," he said, "and George Weinberg said to me and said, 'this is a very important case, and we must get it thrown out.'"

"And I said, 'after reading the complaint it doesn't seem to me that anybody would have the nerve to throw this case out, if the officers will testify on the stand to the affidavits they have sworn to in this complaint.'"

Weinberg he said, replied they must "handle it somehow" and said he would see "Jimmie." Later he told Davis, the "Kid Mouthpiece" swore, that he had seen Hines and Hines had seen Capshaw.

The prosecution, Davis said, had a sound case and he knew it even as he advanced his argument in court. But it was dismissed.

Province Said Not Affected By New Tuber Duty

A fixed penalty of four shillings per bushel, placed on potatoes brought into Bermuda during the months of August and September, would not greatly affect potato shippers of Prince Edward Island, it was learned here last night.

Mr. J. W. Boulter, Secretary of the P. E. I. Potato Growers Association, said he did not know of any exporters who shipped potatoes to the Bermudas, while Minister of Agriculture, Hon. W. H. Dennis thought the penalty would not materially affect any growers who might ship to that market.

"As the Department of Agriculture of this province has received no information from an official source regarding the dispatch concerning potatoes, entering the Bermuda market," Mr. Dennis said, "we are hopeful that if the duration of the prohibitory term does not extend beyond the specified time, namely August and September, it will not materially affect our table stock trade. As it does not seem to affect the seed potato shipments, it may not be of very great injury to our potato shippers."

The despatch referred to was from Hamilton, Bermuda, and stated that colony's legislators had embodied in an act entitled "the Importation of Potatoes Act, 1923" provisions for a penalty of four shillings per bushel to be imposed on potatoes brought into Bermuda during August and September. The penalty affected all but "sweet and seed" potatoes.

Bermuda Places Ban

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Aug. 30 - Maritime Province potato growers who depend on Bermuda for their markets, are faced, this year with the prohibitory regulations embodied in an act, entitled "the Importation of Potatoes Act, 1923," passed by the colony's legislature.

The provisions of the act prevent importers bringing potatoes into Bermuda during August and September, and a penalty has been fixed of four shillings per bushel.

The Act was proclaimed officially August 18, and though the time specified in the Act is August and September, the governor-in-council of the Board of Agriculture here learns the local supply will not meet the demand.

All potatoes other than "sweet and seed" potatoes are included under the provisions of the act. Maritime Province potato growers will not be materially affected until some time in September, if then, as the export of potatoes from those provinces does not start until around the first of September and the prohibitory regulations at the present time are merely a safeguard.

It is estimated there are between 4,500 and 6,000 bushels of potatoes on hand at present, sufficient to meet the demand for at least four weeks.

Trend Indicates Lower Enrolment As School Opens

(By The Canadian Press)

Canada's future statesmen, doctors, generals, craftsmen, lawyers and bankers are dusting their school books and preparing to trudge past inviting playing fields to modern versions of the little red school house.

About 2,100,000 sturdy Canadian boys and girls, with a healthy, happy summer behind them, resume training next month. General indications point to fewer pupils in the lower grades with an increase in high school registration.

Most famous of this year's students are five young ladies from California. They are the Dionne quintuplets, whose chubby fingers will trace out letters under the guidance of Miss Gaetane Veina of Ottawa.

Probably the children will be taught in French only, at first, as desired by their father, Oliva Dionne.

Provincial departments of education expect there will be a slight decrease in the total school population this year, probably about 60,000 less than last year's total.

Canada's peak school attendance year was 1924 when 2,527,000 children overcrowded the nation's school facilities. Attendance trends in most parts of Canada have been dominated by two main factors - economic conditions and a falling birth rate.

Manitoba's elementary school attendance last year of 96,563 was 28 per cent less than 10 years ago, but the high school attendance of 44,970 was 81 per cent higher. As in many other parts of the Dominion, fewer children are starting school but they stay longer, because fewer jobs are open.

Average attendance in Ontario last year was 804,734 compared with 512,175 just 10 years ago. Attendance in secondary schools was 104,804 last year, 56 per cent higher than 10 years ago.

Saskatchewan schools, hampered by years of drought-caused poverty were attended by 215,800 students last year, divided 180,148 in elementary schools and the remainder in secondary schools.

Alberta's school attendance last year was 197,950. British Columbia increased by 2,000 last year to 120,360. Nova Scotia, where some rural schools opened this week, leads the Maritimes with 117,000 students last year, with New Brunswick school attendance at 86,946 and Prince Edward Island's at 18,146.
