EVANGELIST Whiston preached last night a very practical and helpful sermon on the "Chiefest of the 150" which proved to be the 23rd psalm. From the depths of this familiar psalm Mr. Whiston drew forth hidden treasures of comfort, assurance, hope and trust for the Christian, with such beauty and attractiveness that one could not but believe it to be indeed the chiefest of the 150 beautiful psalms of the "Sweet Singer of Israel." Revs. O. B. Emery, and A. N. Simpson assisted in the service.

MURRAY RIVER NOTES.—Wednesday, May 25, as well as being the Queen's birthday, was also the birthday of the Rev. H. Carter, pastor of the Murray River Baptist church, and Mr. Carter and the friends thought they would give the pastor a surprise which they did, in the form of a surprise party. Several folk came early but Mr. Carter did not find out that anything more than usual was meant until the members of the Lodge, which closed as soon as business was over, came over, and supper was prepared. After supper was over and all the friends gathered in the parlor, came the latter part of the surprise, when Mr. D. F. Cook in a neat speech presented to the pastor on behalf of his wife with a very nice office chair. He also received a number of smaller presents from others present. Speeches were made by the pastor, Mr. McInnis and several others present and all expressed their friendship for Bro. Carter and his wife and their sympathy with the work in which he is engaged. The appreciation in which all creeds have for Bro. Carter was shown by the fact that four denominations were represented at this birthday gathering. Miss Maud Roberts from time to time favored the company with sweet music on the organ.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN KENNEDY.—The late John Kennedy, whose death took place yesterday was a native of Edinburgh, but for many years, indeed from early manhood, a resident of this city and its immediate neighborhood. As a business man he was careful, painstaking, and upright in all his dealings. For many years he was connected with the Church of Christ, taking a deep interest in everything pertaining to its welfare and advancement; and during his later life was an honoured elder, often, occupying the platform while the regular preacher was absent. He was also charitable beyond the knowledge of his most intimate friends and associates, not letting his left hand know what his right hand did. He never sounded a trumpet either before or after his good deeds, but his charities lightened many burdens and soothed many a sorrowing heart. He will be greatly missed by the church which he served so well, and aided so substantially and by many others who often quietly received from him substantial aid in the hour of need. He suffered long before he died, but his sufferings were borne with the patience of the child of God waiting for the coming rest. His trust and confidence were unwavering. He knew in whom he had believed, so the coming change had no terrors for him. He looked forward continually, by faith, to the dawning of the brighter day so passed into the valley and the shadow, knowing that he was not alone.
