A CHRISTMAS HYMN.

Jerusalem, Jerusalem,
Lift up thy gates once more!
The soldiers of the Tenth Crusade
Are at thy temples door!
Oh, raise thine ancient battle hymn
Where Godfrey died of yore!

Jerusalem, Jerusalem,
The Coeur de Lion's glance,
Saladin's troth, the lilies on
The breast of knightly France,
The faith of Simon and of John,
Are thine inheritance!

Jerusalem, Jerusalem,
From Heaven's heights divine
They bend—thy warriors of old—
Their gaze on Palestine,
Where, 'neath their crests, is "Allenby"
Engraven on thy shrine!

Jerusalem, Jerusalem,
Oh, set thy gates ajar!
The Infidel and his ally—
The Beast—shall pass afar,
And, on thy soldiers of the cross,
Shall rise the Christmas Star.

CHRISTMAS

(Elizabeth Roberts MacDonald)

Old friends, old hopes for Christmas,
And the dreams of the days gone by!
Hark how the bells are clanging,
Beneath the frosty sky;
The world is full of gladness,
Greeting and clasp and song;
And in our hearts a music wakes
That has been silent long.

Old ways, old words for Christmas,
And the love that knows no bar;
Though some true hearts are near us,
And some are scattered far;
The world is full of partings,—
But space and time are vain
To blur the glass that memory holds
When Yule-tide comes again!

THE PRINCE OF PEACE

By Theodosia Garrison

The angels stood with drooping wings
And questioned one another,
Cherubim and seraphim grouped silent and forlorn;
For, lo! she hid her face and wept—
the Lord Christ's radiant motner
Even upon His birthday—the day that He was born.

Far below on little earth the black clouds were drifting,
Evil hands that pointed to the murdering men;
Far below on little earth the mad cries were lifting
Of souls led to slaughter like cattle from the pen.

"Sing to her," the angels said, "the song that hailed His glory,
Surely that shall wake her smile and bid her sorrow cease—
The song we sang the shepherds who were first to hear the story,
What time she held upon her breast the little Prince of Peace."

Far below on little earth the great guns were roaring
Sunlight and moonlight shone on rivers running red;
And the anguished wails of women, like wounded birds came soaring
To the very gates of heaven for their strong men dead.

Cherubim and seraphim they broke in golden singing,
Joyously they sang for her the song she loved the best,
What time beneath the Eastern Star, like white doves winging,
They hailed the little Prince of Peace upon her lovely breast.

Far below on little earth, like red waves breaking,
Army against army rose up and raged and fell;
And the sound of lamentation, like a great wind waking,
Rose above the crimson sea to heaven's citadel.

Lo! she hid her face and wept, the Lord Christ's radiant mother,
"And is it thus, my Son," she said, "the promise we fulfil?"
But golden-voiced her angels sang, rejoicing one another,
"Oh, Peace on Earth! oh, Peace," they sang,
"And unto men good-will."

YULETIDE HOME COMING

By Charles McCabe

The club looked just the very thing Gerald Mannersley was craving for—a sense of home.

A few lines read accidently in an out-of-date newspaper had made him restless with longing for the old scenes. And so he had traveled two days and nights in a sleeper, vaguely connecting his journey's end with all the love and friendship his starved nature was demanding.

When he arrived at his old club on a chill, grey Christmas morning, it was only to find that fifteen years' silent absence had been too severe a test for friendship. The place was empty of all but servants, and they wore strange, unwelcoming faces.

He stood at the club window, looking out on the desolate, deserted street which he had always remembered as being thronged, and a great sadness swept over him.

This was not what he wanted. From his pocket he drew out the scrap of paper which had really brought him so many miles, and looked at it bitterly. It was only a death announcement cut from a paper of a year ago and ran in the usual way—Michael Townley, at his residence," etc.

In fancy he saw a sweet-faced maiden, who sought her happiness only in the eyes of the youth by her side. There were joybells there, too, as they left the church with the fragrance of mutual love about them.

The bells pealed on outside, and willing fancy led him still further into the realm of "might-have-been."

In an instant he made up his mind to visit once more the old-fashioned cottage not many miles away, to which he had hoped fifteen years before to take a bride. He would go and see it, even if its neglected condition only added to his loneliness and pain.

Two hours later he was striding through the crisp country air along a winding path which led to a rambling, ivy-covered cottage.

As the last turn brought him in sight of the house he stopped in surprise. He had expected to see dirt, ruin, and decay, but instead he looked upon a trim, well-kept cottage, and a soft, crooning song in a voice which reawakened the tender memories o long ago came floating through the unlatched door.

Half believing that it must be fancy leading him still, he entered the house softly, and, following the voice, went into the inner room, and stood in the glow of the warm firelight.

The sweet, tired-faced, middle-aged singer turned as his shadow fell across the light, and then stood white and trembling.

"Gerald!" she whispered. "Gerald! have you come to reproach me? Not today! Not today!"

The strong man's voice broke as he held out his arms.

"Nance!" he cried joyfully.

In a moment she was crushed, sobbing, to his breast.

"Oh, Gerald! is it really you? God is very good. I thought you must be dead."

For several moments they stood thus; the strong man's tears falling on her grey tinged hair. Then he gently put her into a chair.

"You are not alone?" he asked as his eyes caught sight of a little table laid for two, daintily spread with Christmas fare.

"Yes" she answered. "I am quite alone, I have often come down here."

"But you are expecting somebody?" he said, calling attention to the table.

She flushed prettily, looking almost as young as she had in his dreams of the morning, as she replied:

"I was expecting you, Gerald."

He smiled happily at her; then the smile faded, and he sighed as he sank into a chair.

"This is all foolishness, Nance," he said sadly, "You could not live here in the old days, you could do so less now, and I could not live here on another man's thousands."

A smile hovered over the woman's face as she flitted here and there busily preparing things for a meal. Then she slipped behind a chair, and leaning over whispered with burning cheeks:

"Perhaps you do not know, Gerald that—that Mr. Townley's money goes back to his family if—if I marry again."

The man sprang to his feet and took her into his strong arms again.

"It is not too late," he cried. "We are still young. Will you let me try to make you happy?"

Her answer was drowned in the burst of Christmas bells that pealed from the village church close by. But he did not need her words; he could see her eyes.

A few days ago Mr. Hector Campbell, Rollo Bay West, received a telegram conveying the sad news that his son Herbert (Bert) H. Campbell, had been killed in action on Nov. 8. Much sadness was cast over the vicinity when the news that this gallant young hero had paid the supreme sacrifice.

ISLAND AVIATOR IS KILLED

The struggle for freedom and truth, claims the life of another dear young man, that of Lieut. Foster W. Rhude, of the Aviation Corps. He was killed in action on November 30th. He is a son of Capt. and Mrs. I. C. Rhude, Halifax, and brother of Mrs. T. G. Ives, Montague. LETTERS OF SYMPATHY

France
Nov. 15th, 1917

Mrs. E. Harris

Dear Madam,—Before this letter reaches you you will have been informed of the death in action of your husband No. 712096 Pte. Harris.

I trust it will be some measure of comfort to you to know that he died as the brave soldier he was. The company came under shell fire in the Ypres area and your husband was wounded by the same shell that killed Sergeant McNaughton who was acting Sergeant Major. Pte Harris did not recover consciousness and died in the Field Ambulance.

You can be assured that he did not suffer any pain. His body was buried in a military cemetery with military honors and a suitable cross was erected on the grave. If you wish to know the exact location of the grave you can find out by writing to the Graves Registration Commissioner c/o the Army Post Office, London, England.

The officers, N. C. O's and men of the Company join in deepest sympathy for you in your great loss. Trusting that you will find comfort in the fact that your husband died and died as a brave soldier.

Yours very sincerely

MUST HIT THE GERMAN PEOPLE WITH A CLUB

BOSTON, Dec.22.—The United States is not only fighting the Kaiser and the Prussian military system, but the German people, said former President Taft in addressing a gathering of manufacturers at the annual banquet of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts here last night.

"It is not true," said Mr. Taft, "that we are not fighting the German people. We are We are not fighting the Kaiser and Prussian military system alone. We are fighting the German people, a people obsessed with megalomania and the only way we can win is by hitting the German people with a club." Mr. Taft thought that to accomplish the defeat of the Germans, the United States must send from five to seven million of American soldiers to France. Two million would not be enough, he thought. In conclusion he frankly declared that if the United States did not win the war, the only alternative would be to make militarism the dominating policy of the government.

TO FOX BREEDERS

We sent out requests a few days ago to all Fur Farmers asking for information as to how many furs of all kinds they were going to contribute to the Fur Sales Board.

We take this opportunity of thanking the fox farmers for their hearty co-operation with our organization.

Many of the companies and individuals see the absolute necessity of co-operative marketing and distributing on the proper markets.

TO AVERT SERIOUS DECLINE IN PRICES.

From our fur reports received, furriers state "that unless there is closer co-operation in marketing, a serious decline in prices will result."

ALL IN THE HANDS OF THE FUR FARMERS.

The way then of fostering this industry is left entirely with the Fur Farmers themselves. A well guided co-operative organization will raise our struggling commercial industry to a position of success and importance.

PROTECT THE INDUSTRY

You owe it to the industry as well as to yourselves as shareholders, to protect our fur farming by co-operation with the Fur Sales Board.

Ship your furs now and lend your assistance.
