

The Value of Security

It is worth a good deal to you to be sure that your prescription is filled with absolute accuracy.

We afford you such security and it costs you nothing extra. We use the finest drugs obtainable. They are not only pure, but they are of the standard strength. Drugs can be pure and yet so uncertain in strength as to be perfectly valueless. We make you safe on all these points. Our years of experience enables us to give you the best possible service in prescription filling.

REPORTED THAT TEUTONS WERE AT LAST STAGE OF EXHAUSTION

ATHENS, Aug. 17.—Mukhtar Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador at Berlin, has been recalled at the Kaiser's request, because he reported to Constantinople that Germany and Austria were in the last stage of exhaustion and that the first serious German repulse would bring destruction. He recommended the Porte to employ discretion, pointing out that if Germany lost she would use Turkey as a scapegoat. General Von Der Goltz, on hearing of the report, immediately cabled demanding Mukhtar's recall.

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND ON SEA

SNIPER IN A GRAVE.

A Leith Territorial, who is serving in France, writes:
"We have frequently been sniped at, and on one particular occasion two or three of us were standing at the corner of a farmhouse—suddenly—whizz!—and on the wall just above our heads was the mark of a bullet in the brick. It was an oblique shot, and glanced off, severing as it did so a telephone wire.
Men lay out all night on the watch, and several organized hunts took place, but all to no purpose. The sniper could not be located. Judging by the bullet, it was an ordinary sized rifle fitted with some silencer attachment, for it gave only the faintest report. We were quite baffled.
The sniping continued intermittently, but fortunately the man was a wretched shot, for he only hit one man of the Argyls, only slightly wounding him.
However, a week ago some Indian pioneers had been laying telephone wires at night, and the location of a sniper, and sniped him all right. He was in a cemetery—in a specially prepared grave—the top of which was really a hinged door, which could be raised sufficiently to let a man in or out. There was a cross and flowers, etc., on it. In fact, the grave was complete except for the fact that it had a tenant who was very much alive!
It is not known how long he had been there, but he had expended a large quantity of ammunition, and undoubtedly had been supplied with food from outside, as remains of meals clearly showed.
This cemetery was about 600 yards from where I was, and judging from the relative positions it is almost certain that he was "our" sniper—that is, to one who bothered us."
It was always proving on this road who were fired at first, and investigation showed that only particular places had been covered by fire, which coincided with spaces between trees affording a clear field of view. These portions of the road which were obscured by trees were not fired at. The sniping stopped thereafter.

"THE GERMAN SCUM."

Writing to his parents at Dunfermline, Lieut. J. Farmer, who earned the V.C. in the South African War, and who is with the Liverpool Scottish in Flanders, describes a recent action in which his regiment took part. He says:
"The German scum that was against our boys did not pluck to fight. They were not the snipers we were not a bit like our troops, who are all so fit and eager. It was purely a local affair, and the objective was easily gained—much more so than their artillery, which was not for their firing. If it was not for their firing, we could go through anything. The troops are anxiously waiting for a general advance order along the line. Every one feels confident that we could keep them on the run, but we must have men and guns and ammunition galore. We are up against a horde of semi-savages, and will stop at nothing to achieve their end. It is to be hoped Government will prove successful, and that every living soul at home will do his and her utmost to produce every necessary article of munitions with the least possible delay. As long as the soldiers of the strikers should be doing it, it is out here would think nothing of doing it in cold blood. It is quite disheartening to read of the petty squabbles for a halfpenny or a penny more pay, when Tommy is doing more than his bit for a shilling per diem."

THE BITTEREST MEMORY.

A private in the Cameron Highlanders who has been through the fighting from the beginning till a few days ago, says:
"The Germans were at Givenchy

when the great liner (Lusitania) was torpedoed. The German trenches were well within two hundred yards of the British lines, and it appeared that there were many English-speaking Germans opposed to the Highland regiment. Time and again there had been much chaffing between the lines. When the big Cunarder was sunk, the enemy were made aware of it at once by their headquarters. The Camerons heard burst after burst of exultant cheering from the German trenches when the news came in, and there was much speculation as to what had happened. The Scot's were not left in doubt for long. "Hi, you Scotch, what about your Lusitania now? We have sent her to the bottom." There was a moment of silence in the Camerons' trench, and then with a yell a number of the men, with bayonets fixed, jumped to the parapet of the trench, and were about to dash to certain death in an attempt to vent their rage upon the sneering enemy. Fortunately, the incensed Highlanders were at once observed by their officers, who gave the order to retreat. The angry company came back into their trench. Amongst them were the men who had experienced the work that the war has revealed in German treachery and diabolical ingenuity, and of one of them at least it is true that the bitterest memory of the war is not of the use of poison gas, or burning liquid, or even of the murder of a man, but it is the memory of the enemy cheering and exulting over the destruction of a passenger ship and the drowning of many women and children.

A DESPATCH RIDER.

A Prince Edward Island man who has been serving at the front as a despatch rider, says:
"I was discharged from hospital, and in the course of conversation with a representative, that his Province had sent more native born Canadians to the front, in proportion to population, than any other Province. Speaking of his experiences at the front, he said:
"The Germans cannot meet our boys with the bayonet, and even when gas is used our boys can hold them. But the gas has caused much suffering. As asked as to his work as a despatch rider he said: "Well, it is a pretty tough job to ride a despatch horse, motor cycle or a bicycle; the going is too rough for any of them he must go on foot. But deliver his kind regards to my mother. I have had all kinds of experiences. One which I shall not easily forget, is being quite close to King Albert of Belgium. He is a splendid man, tall and soldierly, with a face that it is a pleasure to see. Billeted in a house that has been badly shelled is not very comfortable, but our Army Service Corps looked after us very well. I had a hot meal the day I met him. The people in the Old Country have been most good to us in sending us cigars and other things. I was in a wonderful hospital, and the nurses were good women, and though quarrel with the Catholic myself, I should quarrel with anyone who said anything unkind of them. The only drawback was that they were too kind. But what could I do? I could not say in French that it was a good thick to wash my face so often, so I put up with it."

RUSSIANS LOCATE THE ENEMY'S NEW POSITIONS.
PETROGRAD, August 16.—The new positions occupied by the Germans and Austrians were outlined with approximate accuracy on good authority today, for the first time since the fall of Warsaw. The line, started from the vicinity of Ossowetz, near the Prussian border opposite the Mazurian Lakes region, curves to the south and east, running through Sokolow, Siedlce, Lukow, Ostrowa and Vladowa.
The concentration of Austro-German forces in the direction of the fortress of Brest Litovsk is proceeding along three roads.

GALLANT ENGINEERS.
An Edmonton man serving with the Canadian Engineers, and at present home on leave, speaking of his life at the front to a press representative said: "We do the trench building, bridge building, making the barbed-wire entanglements, and the blowing up of bridges, etc., when that is necessary. We are often under shell fire while at our work, though it is done at night, as it would be impossible in the day. Somehow we seem to lose more men when the firing is light than we do when it is heavy. A good many of us sappers have never seen a German, although they have accounted for many of us. About half my company have been in the casualty lists. Major Wright, who was killed at Festubert, was the last Engineer officer we had. At Festubert we were building communication trenches. We were shelled out of reserve trenches twice, and then we stuck there until we could get into the road again. Two of our men have been doing excellent work making them. They have been in trenches all day long doing this job, and have been highly praised for their work. At Ypres there were 24 of us in a trench and only 13 came out. The spirit of the men was fine. When we had to run through the town with shells bursting in all directions, the youngest men who were fitted for running with some of their companions helped the older men by carrying their rifles. I must tell you how on one occasion I saw a very youthful officer wearing a staff officers cap, who came up to us and had a chat, and I did not know until afterwards that he was the Prince of Wales."

NOTES BY THE WAY
Sir Wilfrid Laurier has at last tried to do something to stimulate the morale of the troops in such a just cause I will support the Government. Certain spirits cried: "What have we to do with what is going on in Europe? It does not concern us." How could anyone of French speech be found who could not be filled with courage and generosity at the spectacle of our ancient Mother Country suffering and giving humanity the spectacle of a nation truly great and strong!"

Whereupon Sir John Willison, the biographer of Sir Wilfrid, writing in the Toronto News says: "In the early journalism of Hon. Mr. Brodeur in the scheduled neighborhood of Rouville, perhaps the records of various Imperial conferences, perhaps the reluctance of the Government in 1899 to permit the expedition to South Africa, perhaps a hundred thousand speeches accepting the benefits of our British citizenship and advocating the shirking of all responsibility as a suitable return may have had some influence. One cannot say for twenty-five years that military service outside of Canada is a crime, and that every one to consider it a virtue. Sir Wilfrid need not be surprised at the questioning spirits. He had a good deal to do with their education."

That a large proportion of British soldiers are married men has been one of the strongest arguments in Great Britain for conscription. An examination of separation allowance sheets at Ottawa shows that such is not the case in Canada. The percentage of married men in Canadian forces today is 20 per cent or one-fifth of the whole total.
Canada is paying out to her soldiers in the Dominion, in England and at the front $125,000 per day, or about $45,000,000 per year, and this sum is increasing.
Twenty-five thousand cheques for separation allowance are being issued per month, a total of $15,000,000 per year being paid to the wives and the families of married soldiers and about $12,000,000 of assigned money is being paid over.
The visit of Hon. George E. Foster, Canada's Minister of Trade and Commerce, to Charlottetown and Summerside this week will give the people of both places a chance to hear one of Canada's ablest sons. Hon. Mr. Foster is one of the cleverest speakers in Canadian public life. His style is all
