NOTHING BUT A MIRACLE CAN SAVE THE GERMANS.

"At Lassign, for example, a German force, of a strength which could not be learned, has been surrounded by the French and cut off from the main body. It has taken refuge in some extensive quarries and its position is now very much like that of Cronje at Paardeburg. These quarries, which are of an unusual nature, were of German ownership, so that every yard of their intricate working is known to the enemy. There are long subterranean galleries electrically lighted. The careful Germans, when they saw retreat was impossible, drove into the refuge many of the inhabitants, mainly women and children. These poor creatures now serve as a shield for the German soldiers, but as French troops now surround the position, and the French artillery is shelling the German guns and the trenches, nothing but a miracle can save that imprisoned section of the German force, and in the end it must surrender.

At 2.30 p. m., the different Catholic societies formed in procession on Lower Queen street and, headed by the League of the Cross Band, which rendered excellent music, marched to the Pro-Cathedral. In the church a short requiem service was held, after which the parade reformed and proceeded to the cemetery on St. Peter's Road. In the procession in a carriage rode His Lordship Bishop O'Leary, Rev. Dr. G. J. McLellan and Sir W. W. Sullivan (Chief Justice). The services were vesting, preparatory to the service for the dead, the band played the dead march. The choir of the Pro-Cathedral rendered psalms suitable to the occasion and the "Libera," then the Litany for the Dead was recited. The sermon for the occasion was preached by Rev. ### GERMANS GET READY FOR WINTER CAMPAIGN.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 3.—German and pushing forward with the utmost vigor their preparations for a winter campaign. Until recently, apparently, they had not conceived such an eventuality, but in the last few weeks they have learned much.

All the high-class shops that formerly did nothing but make the best fur garments for ladies are busily engaged in the manufacture of sheepskin clothing for soldiers, and no fewer than 150,000 fur coats have been delivered, presumably for the use of officers. Two million sheep and lamb skins have been bought by the Government for the men.

Workmen who are ordinarily employed in the glove industry have been withdrawn from the ranks and are now working day and night to provide those in the field with skin clothing. For cavalry special leather leg protectors are being made out of leather intended for gloves.

INVERNESS MISSION STATION.

The final step in organizing the Inverness Mission field into a regular congregation was taken Sunday, Sept. 13th, when Rev. J. S. McKay, moderator of the congregation, ordained two elders into that office. A short time before, Mr. Sydney Bonnell, the student in charge, had left the field, and business meetings were held in the church. Three managers were appointed to carry on the work in connection with the congregation. A regular Christian Endeavor Society was organized and the officers elected. This society has already had a number of meetings and is progressing splendidly. The sacrament was dispensed the Sunday previous by Rev. J. S. McKay, and thirty members were received into the church, twenty-seven by profession of faith and three by certificate. It will be remembered that Evangelistic services were conducted in this church by Rev. J. S. McKay a few weeks previous, and the number of communicants received into the church testify to the success of these services. This mission field has, during the summer months, been in charge of Sidney Bonnell, of Hunter River. Of these Messrs. J. S. McKay, Newsum, Jordan and McKinnon are to be the first or provisional directors. The Colonial Company will have its head office at Darnley, Prince County, and its first or provisional directors are to be Messrs. John S. Cousins, of Park Corner, Herbert T. McLeod, of Brocton, Mass.; C. Ernest McNutt, of Darnley; Joseph A. Stone, of Brocton; Stewart B. McLeod, of Brocton; D. Edgar Shaw, of Charlottetown; T. Hume Hoggood, of Malpeque.

NEW FOX COMPANIES.

As proof of the stability of the fox industry and an indication of how unimportant has been the effect on it of the depression caused by the war, is the fact that the formation of new fox companies continues at average pace. In Saturday's Royal Gazette appear applications for letters patent for the incorporation of two more new fox companies—"The Lampson Silver Cross Fox Co., Ltd." and the "Colonial Silver Black Foxes, Ltd.," the former with a proposed capital of $42,000, divided into 225 shares, and the latter with a capital of $300,000, divided into 3,000 shares of $100 each. The Lampson Company will have its head office located in Charlottetown, and the promoters include some of Charlottetown's most prominent fox-men. The applicants for incorporation are Messrs. Myron Henderson, trader, and Daniel C. McKay, manufacturer's agent, of Halifax, N. S.; J. Stanley Wedlock, Fenton R. Newsum, Fletcher G. Jordan and Daniel A. McKinnon, fox brokers, of Charlottetown; H. L. Hewson, capitalist, of Amherst, and Everett Wedlock, butcher, of Hunter River. Of these Messrs. J. S. Wedlock, Newsum, Jordan and McKinnon are to be the first or provisional directors. The Colonial Company will have its head office at Darnley, Prince County, and its first or provisional directors are to be Messrs. John S. Cousins, of Park Corner, Herbert T. McLeod, of Brocton, Mass.; C. Ernest McNutt, of Darnley; Joseph A. Stone, of Brocton; Stewart B. McLeod, of Brocton; D. Edgar Shaw, of Charlottetown; T. Hume Hoggood, of Malpeque.

MODERN BULLETS.

(From New York "Medical Journal.") The various bullets used by armies of civilized nations admit of being grouped in three classes. One of these classes of projectiles is called the reduced, calibre jacketed bullet. The second class includes the leaden balls in shrapnel and the blunt nosed bullet formerly in use in the British army and subsequently used by the Servians.

To the third class belong the expanding bullets, the soft nosed bullet and the dum-dum bullet. Some authorities speak of the first class as the pointed bullet. It has less stopping power than the other two. The greater part of the nations of the world use the ogival bullet, a pointed bullet whose tip forms an obtuse angle like an arch.

The two bullets now in use, the ogival and the blunt nosed, have a rotary and a wobbling motion. On impact they produce a wound like that made by the blow of a hammer. This effect seems to be observed at all ranges, but particularly at 1,000 yards. Here the gyroscopic steadiness due to rotation is lost; the bullet may even turn on its axis and produce explosive effects. Lateral impact seems the only explanation of these explosive effects.

The unjacketed bullet, unexpanded because it is the lightest and smallest in use, makes at 800 to 1,000 yards perforations which are large, with explosive exits, and in the soft viscera a wide tract showing a great deal of laceration. These effects are probably the result of the bullet's course, which is a tangent to the curve of the trajectory. Before it takes a curve, at very short range, it has effects less severe, but here its stopping power is less. In this respect it is much inferior to the blunt nosed bullet. The action of both the types of modern bullet on the human body would at first seem to be the same, but careful inspection of wounds during the Balkan war shows that wounds caused by the sharp nosed German or Turkish bullet were on the whole more favorable for speedy healing than those caused by the blunt nosed Servian bullet.

There is, however, a marked defect of the pointed bullet. The result of shaving off the tip and shoulder to fine point is to throw the centre of gravity very far back; this peculiarity tends to make the bullet travel on its transverse axis. This effect increases wounding power by increasing the area of the wound.

The dum-dum bullet has a packet and a core of lead, but its special quality is the projection of the lead beyond the mantle. When it strikes an object the soft lead spreads out in the shape of a mushroom, hence the bullet causes wounds that have great stopping power.

TO BUILD BIG DRY DOCK AT PRINCE RUPERT, B. C.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 3.—President Chamberlin, of the Grand Trunk Railway, announced today: "The Grand Trunk has decided to build one of the largest drydocks in this country in Prince Rupert, at which a 20,000 ton battleship can be docked. Work will be started January 1st, giving employment to thousands of unemployed men. A full, complete shipbuilding plant, as good as anything New York can boast of, will be in full swing shortly after the first of the year, so that the unemployed of the Pacific coast need not be without employment this winter."
