He was born at Fort Augustus eighty-eighty years ago, the son of John Burnett and Margaret Vickerstaff, whose people emigrated from Leeds, England, over one hundred years ago and who owned over three hundred acres of land in Fort Augustus. He was a good Christian neighbor, always there when wanted, one who would not injure any person or property, a kind father and husband. His first duty to his children was to bring them up in love and fear of the Lord. His second was to see that they got education enough to earn an easy livelihood. Like many more he bore heavy crosses and losses, having lost his two fine, young sons in the prime of manhood; also his wife at an early age. But through it all he bore his sorrows cheerfully, bearing in mind the words of our Saviour, Take up your cross and follow Me.
