Influenza Vaccine May be Developed

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—(CP)—Scientists are on the path leading towards discovery of a vaccine that will give full protection against the influenza scourge, it was learned from officials of the Connaught Laboratories of the University of Toronto.

An egg vaccine has been developed that has yielded encouraging results in providing immunity and this vaccine is being used in Britain to combat a current epidemic there. Local research men, however, were not sure just what degree of effectiveness has been obtained.

Dr. Ronald Hare, associate in research at Connaught, said tonight "we think we know how to immunize, but it is going to be a long process with many problems to be cleared away. There is nothing really conclusive on immunization against influenza here or in the United States, although experiments to date indicate some value."

"We need large-scale properly controlled experiments on a minimum of 10,000 volunteers. And such questions as the amount of dosage and the period of immunity remain to be answered."

German Prisoners Exited at Prospect of Returning Home

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Feb. 12.—(CP)—Excitement of German captives to Britain from large prisoner-of-war camps in Southern Alberta has almost completely changed their outlook and attitude—except that they look, act and feel soundly defeated at war.

Their general despondency and pessimism has been replaced by a wave of wild excitement, bolstering of spirits and over-optimism. In this is the day we have longingly waited for years, many captives explained enthusiastically as the Lethbridge prisoner-of-war camps in Canada sent a large number of former Nazi warriors on the way to labor in the United Kingdom.

Five special trains carried hundreds of former Nazi warriors, on their way to Halifax where they will board the troopship Mauritanian.

Military authorities withheld the total number in the first draft from the camps. Plans for further evacuations are being made and it is understood another draft will leave Canada aboard the Le de France later this month.

25,000 in Alberta

Before the move eastward started about 25,000 German prisoners were held in Alberta, including 9,500 in the Lethbridge camp, the largest prisoner of war camp in the Dominion.

Armed guards are aboard the trains which are equipped with searchlights. At each stop, guards patrol both sides of the tracks, and at night searchlights sweep the coaches from end to end. While other guards, members of the Veterans Guard of Canada and soldier-volunteers, are stationed inside at each doorway.

"We now are finally going home," the prisoners said as the movement started. "We will be back home by summer or fall."

In their excitement many captives build up their wishful thinking, and in spite of repeated official announcements that they are being evacuated to Britain for labor purposes, the general feeling is that they will stay in Britain only briefly before completing the trip to Germany.

Those who had said time and again that they did not wish to leave Canada were caught in the wave of excitement but, they explained, they wish to return to this country after their liberation.

"About 99 per cent of the prisoners are determined that Germany will never again have a war with western countries and that Germany will live in peace with the west," said prisoners. "Few of our people wanted war with the western countries this time. Only the people at the head of the old regime. The people knew that they had to go to war with Russia."

Eyes Westward...

The eyes of Canadians turn Westward. The war with Japan, the rebirth of China, and the rising influence of the U.S.S.R. have brought new appreciation of Canada's Pacific border. Foreseeing post-war needs, Canadian Press sent William Stewart, veteran of 11 years CP service and of the Sicily, Italy and West Front campaigns, to cover a beat which ranged from Sydney to Manila. Now he has taken on the bigger job of studying and reporting on Pacific post-war problems, so that Canadians may achieve better understanding of them.
