A Criminal In Every Family

Condensed from 'The Atlantic Monthly' October, '27

Lately I have become increasingly aware of the difference in my attitude when I am driving my car and when I am on foot. By preference I walk to my office. I am resentful when I find the traffic signals against me, and I soon lose patience. At the least opening I make a dash for the open curb. When the pedestrian signal is given, should a car turn in upon us from a side street I not only refuse to hurry but glare angrily at the driver. For I am very jealous of my rights as a pedestrian.

It is an entirely different matter when I am at the wheel. When the traffic signals are against me, I simply cannot understand how the pedestrian can be so slow. If I dodge a jaywalker, "Did you see that fool?" I ask my wife. "Why can't they stay where they belong?" I insist on the right of way, and devil take the hindmost!

More irritating than the pedestrian is the rivalry that soon develops between me and the cars going in the same direction. I know my car: I know that its best gait is between 25 and 33 miles an hour, and rarely do I push it faster. But there is in me some pride that protests against taking the dust from cars of my own class or those of other classes. I pull over for a Pierce or a Packard without demur. But if in my reflector I see the approach of a smaller car my foot goes down on the accelerator and I am none too ready to take to the side.

I notice this same sense of rivalry when I turn overhand the fellow ahead of me. I pull over for a Buick or a Buick without demur. But if in my reflector I see the approach of a smaller car my foot goes down on the accelerator and I am none too ready to take to the side.

Brakes Defective

In 1926 they were responsible for about 23,000 deaths in this state. In 1926, motorists were responsible for 27,436 recorded accidents (Heaven knows how many were unrecorded), injuring 25,351 and killing 705. Respectable casualties for any civil war. The Motor Registrar was only able to analyze the more serious of these accidents, which have been traced to the following causes:

- Brakes defective 92 cases
- Contused operator 167
- Cutting in ahead 129
- Inattention (carelessness) 1024
- Obstructed view 123
- Intoxicated operator 163
- Skidding 123
- Inexperience 117
- Too close to other vehicles 107
- Too fast for conditions 1667
- Violating right-of-way law 473
- Child darning in front 306
- Pedestrian running across street 314
- Pedestrian from behind 146
- Pedestrian walking along road 237

Observe that only one charge can in any way be attributed to the machine, observe the carelessness, the neglect, the disregard for speed, and the disregard for the pedestrian may do. Clearly more discipline ought to come from public opinion, which today is almost conscienceless in the matter. I am confident that three out of four motorists who read this have been in an accident, within their acquaintance or at least one person who has been mortally wounded. Yet our traffic is heedless. Summonses for speeding are like notches in our forefathers' rifles, a mark of bravado. And it is an exceptional family whose motorists have not answered to this or an equivalent charge at least once. A criminal in every family.

Still we speed on, confident that our brakes will hold, that the other fellow will slow down, that our insurance will meet any ordinary emergency—confident that we can "get away with it."

How are we to be brought to car sense? In two ways, I think. First, by aroused public opinion, and secondly, by the increased severity and justice of the police supervision. We need skilled police inspectors to "popularize" the idea of safety. Each Monday the Registrar of my state has printed in local newspapers in a black-bordered box the list of motor vehicles of the preceding week. This is beginning to make an impression. Last year he revoked over 18,000 licenses and this year he estimates that the total will be 24,000. What is more, he does teach to the panisher he has prepared. There are very few "repeaters". And fatalities are proportionately decreasing.

It is almost unbelievable that today only 16 states out of the 48 require licenses. The remainder issue number plates without even a perfunctory driving test. Motor traps and fines where drivers are all but very technical in nature, should be abolished, as they only serve to increase the antagonism between the driver and the police.

INSTITUTE MEETING—On Dec. 16 the regular monthly meeting of the St. George's Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. R. P. Gallant, with fourteen members and five visitors present. The meeting opened with the singing of the Ode, followed by the roll call which was answered by each member paying their annual fee. The minutes of the previous meeting were then read and adopted. By the program arranged at the previous meeting a social hour of what was then spent, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess and was enjoyed by all. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the hostess for the entertainment, after which the singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Chrysson McCannock.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. GEORGE HOWLETT.

The sudden death of Mrs. George Howlett occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Macdonald, Dundas, on Dec. 4th, 1927, at the age of 85 years.

Mrs. Howlett, although advanced in years, enjoyed the best of health up to within a few hours of her death. On Saturday, the 3rd, she had a stroke of paralysis from which she never regained consciousness, and peacefully passed to her rest early Sunday morning, 4th.

Mrs. Howlett was a woman of cultivated intelligence, warmly sympathetic nature, but of retiring disposition. In her person were combined all the graces and virtues that make true womanhood. Over 56 years ago she became a member of the Baptist Church at Annandale, and was to the end of her life a faithful follower of Christ. She was the highest type of a Christian wife and mother. She leaves to the loss of a devoted mother, a son, Prof. James D. Howlett, of Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y., and two daughters, Mrs. Duncan McDonald, of Georgetown; Mrs. E. McDonald, of Dundas, with whom she resided for the past ten years.

The funeral will be held at 10 o'clock on Tuesday, Dec. 12th, at the Baptist Church, Annandale, on Tuesday, Dec. 12th. During the service the following hymns of the deceased were sung: "Abide with Me," "One Sweet, Sweet Thought," "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

The Rev. D. McD. Clarke, of the United Church, spoke words of comfort from the 91st Psalm, after which all that was mortal of Mrs. Howlett was tenderly conveyed to the family plot in the Old Cemetery match for England by 10 runs. In the winter of 1882, at Sydney, for side of her late husband.

MRS. MARY HARRINGTON PASSES AWAY IN 90TH YEAR

Mrs. Mary Harrington, mother of Joseph T. Harrington, manager of The Leader, died in her home at 1620 Twelfth Ave., Oakland, about 7 o'clock on the evening of Friday, Nov. 25th.

In her ninetyeth year, death came as the result of old age. About two weeks before that time she was first warned of the approaching end, and from then on her life waned like the burning out of a taper. She passed away as peacefully as a child falling asleep.

Born in England, 1838, she had lived in Oakland 27 years. She was a God-fearing, home-loving Christian woman. In an age of rush and hurry, she had gone calmly about the duties of life, and her great age was an evidence of her reverence to the feverish excitement of the modern world as of a good life worthily lived.

Mrs. Harrington was the widow of John Harrington, and the mother of eight children. Her surviving children are: Joseph P. Walker, V., at Wembley Park, in 1897; Harry Park; Miss Mary E. Harrington, Oakland; and Sr. Superior of Stella Maria Convent, Pictou, Nova Scotia.

Her funeral took place Monday morning, Nov. 28, after a solemn requiem Mass at St. Anthony's Church, of which the Rev. Patrick Keating was celebrant. Fr. Keating paid a fine tribute to the worth and character of Mrs. Harrington.

There was a large attendance from both sides of the Bay at the funeral, and many of the members of the congregation. Among the clergy present in the sanctuary were Rev. Fathers Patrick McHugh, E. F. Maher, A. J. Heneghan, W. G. Butler, J. J. Cannon, Robert I. Falvey, Martin E. O'Brien, John O'Brien, and Peter Scanlan.

Following are the names of the pall-bearers: P. B. Morrissey, George Moffitt, M. J. McIntyre, J. M. Black, B. Hanly, M. J. O'Looney. Father Keating spoke as follows:

We offer the sincere condolence of the clergy here, as well as the sympathies of priests who could not be here, to the Harrington family in the loss of their good mother. To spend almost 40 years in one community is an event in our times; and the period of time is devoted to good work, and to a life that should not be forgotten, because, unless those early Catholics were valiant and true our boast of half a century Catholicity would be a confession of early beginning, but little so-operative to keep faith in God and His church.

God bless the graves and have mercy on the souls of those early men and women who braved ostracism, scorn, hunger and cold that their children might possess the truth, and the faith of Christ that makes us free.

If one were to single out some detail in Mrs. Harrington's life, it would be her simplicity. What a wonderful mother she had to implant that lovely birth trait of heaven upon her soul. It is a quality of mind imparted by our Lord: "Unless you become like little children you shall not enter the Kingdom of God." That simplicity was exhibited by her trust in God, in her disregard of the base things of life, in her devotion to home and her religion, and her love for the green, glittering hills of Ireland, excellent, and all who took part did credit to themselves, and to those who planned the entertainment. As my time is rather limited this morning, I will not try to give details, but I have more time to spare, I will (if I don't forget) tell you all about it; who took part etc.

And now I leave you to Christ-mas and its joys. May Old Santa be kind indeed. Sincerely "Elsma" of -Z-

Great Cricketer

Passes In Australia

(Canadian Press)

ADELAIDE, Australia, Dec. 23.—George Giffen, probably the greatest cricketer Australia ever produced, died here recently at the age of 68 after a lingering illness.

A batsman, Giffen possessed a wonderful left hand defense. He trooped a little but had a great variety of strokes with great freedom in his use of the bat, and was exceptionally strong in driving. He bowled right-hand, rather below demipace, with considerable spin and well-timed changes of flight and pace. He used to send down with much effect a slow ball, very hightossed, which, seeming to be coming well up to the batsman, pitched short, and resulted in many a "caught and bowled."

Among Giffen's best performances in Australia were his 303 at Adelaide in 1887, for South Australia against Victoria; 237, against G. F. Vernon's team; 237, and 12 wickets for 192, for South Australia vs. Victoria at Melbourne in 1891, and in the following season he scored for the past ten years, on an innings of 271 and 16 wickets for 16 runs for South Australia against Victoria. He made 45 (out of 46) runs for South Australia vs. New South Wales at Adelaide in 1893. Most remarkable of all, perhaps, was his all round performance for Australia vs. Stoddart's English team at Sydney in December, 1894, when he took eight wickets, and yet was on the losing side. The howling of Peel and Briggs on a ruined pitch won the match for England by 10 runs. In the winter of 1882, at Sydney, for side of her late husband.

FAVORITE HYMNS AND THEIR WRITERS

- By Rev. Archer Wallace
- NO. 3
- "TELL ME THE OLD, OLD STORY"
- There was an international convention of the Young Men's Christian Association held in Montreal. Just previous to this there had been much internal trouble in Ireland and Major-General Russell, a man of fine Christian character, had been in charge of the British troops which were sent to quell the trouble. Major-General Russell was present at the Montreal convention and at one of the devotional sessions he read Miss Hankey's hymn poem chiefly dealing with the life of Jesus. The poem was in two parts, the first being "The Story Wanted" and the second, "The Story Told." It is from the first part that the two very well known evangelical hymns, "Tell Me The Old, Old Story" and "I Love to Tell the Story" are taken.
- Miss Hankey wrote the poem when she was recovering from a very serious illness. She was so weak with the words and tune were sung in the parlors of Crawford House where Dr. Doane was staying. No one would claim that this was a great hymn from a literary standpoint, yet it has done incalculable good, and does not seem to suffer from diminished popularity. It has been translated into German, Spanish, Italian and many other languages. Furthermore, it expresses with such simple clearness, affection for the Redeemer whom all Christians love, that it is sung with equal fervor by members of all churches.
