AFRICAN RAIN TREE A tree known as the rain-tree—Pithecolobium saman—is found in the drier parts of South America. This tree grows to the height of 80 feet, and its leaves have the peculiar property of condensing the moisture from the atmosphere. So copious is this condensation that a continual shower falls from the leaves and branches until the surrounding soil is converted into a veritable marsh. Places that would otherwise be barren desert are by this means covered with the most luxuriant forests. Many years ago the Government introduced this tree into India to counteract the aridity of certain portions of that country.—Family Journal.

FOGS ARE VALUABLE It has been discovered that fogs especially ocean fogs, are valuable. Fogs are the principal fertilizers of the great bean fields of California. The fields are dry farmed. Rain means ruin. Yet moisture is a necessity. This is furnished in just the right degree by fogs.

OVERSEAS LETTERS The following interesting letters were written by Neil F. McEachern, Nine Mile Creek who, is now somewhere in France: France, Nov. 27, 1917

My Dear Grandfather:—I now take the pleasure of writing you a few lines in answer to your letter dated Oct. 28th which I received last night and was very pleased to hear from you and to know that you were well as this leaves me in good health.

The weather here has been pretty good so far for the time of year it is a little showery now but we have no reason to complain at all. I suppose you have plenty of frost at home by this time. I only saw frost once this fall so far and that was very slight and I can't say that I saw that in this country although it was on the battle front.

Well my dear Grandfather tonight is one twelve month since I came to France and I must say that I did not expect then that I would be here tonight but thanks be unto the Almighty Ruler of Heaven and earth I am still spared and enjoying good health and strength. In that time I have seen many strange things, many wonderful things and many pretty sights. One that has impressed itself indeliberately upon my mind was that scrap of which you no doubt have read an account on April last when we had the pleasure of driving Fritz out off the ridge of which he thought so much. It was not because I was so frightened that I remember it so well, for once we started I knew no fear. Our only thought was to get there for we intended to get there and stay there, and by the help of God we did stay there; but it was a glorious sight, to witness in the gray and misty morning after Easter. I have seen many worse sights than that since which had no beauty in them and which no mind can comprehend without seeing and no tongue describe in half. Well I suppose you have Jim and Sandle home by this time. I hope myself if it is God's will to be coming home some day, but I can not say when that day will be. God alone knows that. The Hun has been beaten long ago but he does not want to give in, but he is only cutting off his nose to spite his face.

However his day will come, we know we must suffer for our faults and failings as a nation but we will come out alright. I believe in the end, I suppose Bella and Edna will be settled down and content now at least they should be. We know that the war must cause a much greater cost of living, but here we see the effect of war in many ways, destruction and death, on every hand, but I am contented here strange to say, for more than I could feel in Canada and my friends fighting for me. But all men can not be soldiers and every man has his part to do whatever it may be, but it seems to me there are some whose thoughts go no higher than their own filthy pockets. Well I must come to a close for this time with love to all with you all very Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Your affectionate grandson NEIL FLETCHER

France, Dec. 16th, 1917 Dear Bertha:—I now take the pleasure of writing you a few lines in answer to your most welcome letter which I received last night and was very pleased to hear from you again and to know that you were all well and happy and I sincerely hope these few lines will find you still in good health as it leaves me feeling fine. We are having pretty good weather for the time of year. I can hardly realize that it is so near Christmas again and it is harder still to realize that SEVERE RHEUMATIC PAINS DISAPPEAR Rheumatism depends on an acid which flows in the blood, affecting the muscles and joints, producing inflammation, stiffness and pain. This acid gets into the blood through some defect in the digestive processes, and remains there because the liver, kidneys and skin are too torpid to carry it off.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old-time blood tonic, is very successful in the treatment of rheumatism. It acts directly, with purifying effect, on the blood, and through the blood on the liver, kidneys and skin, which it stimulates and at the same time it improves the digestion. Get Hood's Sarsaparilla today. Sold by all druggists.

C. advisingly, "In future play the game! Be a sport, Alvin! I am!"

"You are, sir?" queried Tommy, apparently amazed. "Yes, I am," replied the O. C., waxing indignant. "Well, then, sir," said Tommy earnestly, "I'll toss you, fourteen days or nothing!"

Letters of Sympathy

The following letters received by Mr. and Mrs. George D. McLeod of Hunter River gave further particulars regarding the death of their gallant son, Lieutenant Elmer McLeod who was reported "Died of wounds at the front" on November 23rd ultimo.

These letters including one from Major Babington, of the 46th Royal Flying Squadron, speak in the very highest terms of his gallantry, courage and valor and his ability as an officer in this most dangerous arm of the service. Lieutenant McLeod, like so many of our noble Island boys who went to the war, has fallen in defence of our King, Country and Cause. If he had lived he had a most promising career before him as a soldier. He had won many honors in the Prince of Wales College.

These letters like his memory, will be cherished by his parents, relatives and friends while life lasts.

13th Wing, R. F. C. Nov. 23rd, 1917. Dear Mrs. McLeod: You will be now have received the news of your son's death, 12nd Lt. E. G. McLeod, 46th Squadron, R. F. C. I want to send my deepest sympathy to you in your loss.

They are doing wonderful work are these flying boys, and they do it with no fuss and no talk. We, who have burden of the war to bear, may go to sit and watch them do it, can only thank God for their devotion and self-sacrifice. Your son's body was buried in a military cemetery and a cross was put up in his memory. You, who are mothers, have by far the heaviest give you His strength to bear it. With my deepest sympathy, I remain, Yours very truly, R. W. Duggate.

Nov. 23, 1917. Dear Mrs. McLeod: I very much regret to inform you that your son died of wounds in a casualty clearing station early, as a result of wounds received yesterday in the air. You will have received the official wire long before this, but that is always necessarily bare. He had been here sometime now, and had always carried out his work well and conscientiously, and had dealt with more than one German machine. His loss is felt by all here, not only as a brother Officer, but also as a friend. His kit will be delivered to you in the usual way, through Cox, the shipping agent, but will you please let me know if there is any trouble in getting this. It will take time of course to arrive.

Yours truly, T. Babington, Major, 46th, Squadron, R. F. C. No. 3 Nettlescombe Avenue, Southsea, 25th November. Dear Mrs. McLeod: I cannot find words to express my very deep sympathy with you all in the loss of your dear son. To us it came as a great blow. He was with us such a short time ago. What it means to you, only God and your own hearts know. Every one liked him, and all his comrades spoke so kindly of him. He will be greatly missed. You have to mourn a dear loving son; he was fond of you and gave so much love to you. In one of his later letters to me he says: "I must before it is too late, in case anything happens to me, express what I should have said to your face, my deep appreciation of your kindness. It has been the one touch of home to me,—you have stood for my mother, and if every body ever there had been indifferent and cold, I could still have a kindly feeling for the country and people because of the unusual hospitality and interest shown by you." It shows you (what you well know) what a kind, grateful heart he had. It was very dear of him to say what he did. We shall never forget him, so were so fond of him. God help you all to bear your sad trouble, and once again expressing my deep sympathy, believe me, Dear Mrs. McLeod, Yours very sincerely, HELEN CLARK.

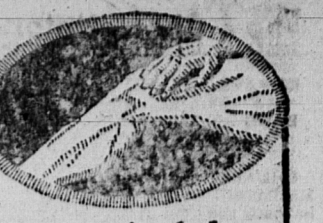

43rd, C. C. S. B. E. P., 23rd Nov. 1917. Dear Mrs. McLeod: I very much regret that I must give you news that will cause you pain. It is about your son,—I think your son—2nd, Lieutenant E. G. McLeod, 46th Squadron, R. F. C. It is with great regret that I write to tell you that he passed away this morning as the result of an accident. I am unable to say how the accident occurred, which resulted in his death. So far as I can learn his aeroplane fell with him and he was brought in with a fracture at the base of the skull. You can take comfort in the thought that he suffered no pain whatever and passed out to God without regaining consciousness. I should have liked if I could have talked with him before he died, but I can realize the mercy of his unconsciousness, for he was delivered from much suffering. I buried him in the Arras—Buequay Road Cemetery.

I am more sorry than I can tell you that I have such sorrowful news to send you, but I pray that our Heavenly Father may comfort you. Your son has given his life in pursuit of a great ideal. He has tried to free the world of a foul thing and God has called him home from his toil. Please accept my sincere sympathy with you and your family circle in your sorrow.

Yours sincerely, (Rev.) W. H. Maxwell, C. F. Particulars as to the grave and a photograph of it may be had by writing to The Director of Graves, Registration and Enquiries, War Office, Winchester House, St. James Square, London, England.

Killed In Action

Among the many kind letters received by Mr. and Mrs. Peter Moriarty, Bear River, P. I. I., on the death of their son Peter, were the following, and a personal note from their Majesties, the King and Queen. They wish to thank the Women and Sisters of the Empire for their kind sympathy in their sorrow.

France, Dec. 11, 1917. Dear Mrs. Moriarty:—By the time this reaches you the news of your son's death will have reached you. He fell in action on Nov. 17th, 1917. He was on leave of the front. The battalion went up unexpectedly and had to stand a very hard bombardment. I am enclosing his collar badge, the rest of his things will be sent official.

He is buried on Passchendaele Ridge, and as soon as it is possible it will receive attention. It is very hard to see our comrades go one by one, God help you to bear this great trial, and comfort you in this dark hour. He has died the grandest death a man can die, fighting for a mighty cause and for the honor of his battalion. God give him peace and rest in this new sphere of life, where now he serves.

If there is anything I can do to help you, please make use of me. God give us grace to live worthy of His our companion and make us repair and purer because of His sacrifice. Yours sincerely, REV. R. W. RIDGEWAY, Chaplain, 46th, Br. Can. France.

Ottawa, Nov. 29, 1917. The Prime Minister and Members of the Government can't send their deepest sympathy in the bereavement which you have sustained. Ottawa, Jan. 8.

The King commends me to assure you of the true sympathy of His Majesty and the Queen in your sorrow. Secretary of State of War.
