THE BIBLE OUR HERITAGE

The influence of the Bible on history is the divine miracle of ages. There is no book which can equal its power for good, nor surpass it as a deep well of truth, and a mine of information. Of all the books it is the most frequently quoted. In the Oxford Dictionary of Quotations there are 29 pages of quotations from the Bible. Lord Macaulay said in a memorable sentence "The English Bible is a book which if everything else in our language should perish, would alone suffice to show the whole extent of its beauty and power." The above lines are quoted from a Bible Society address by the Rev. G. H. Donald, M.A., D.D., Vice-Minister of the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul, Montreal. In the P. E. I. Auxiliary "Bible Sunday" will be observed October 26th and "Bible Week" will start October 27th.

Welcome Stranger

By Mae Robinson

"Well folks, I'm here! "Who am I? Why I'm the new baby. It was quite a trip but I finally made it. I thought I'd be in the waiting room so much I was afraid he would be given an extra bill for the rug he was wearing.

"How am I? I'm fine and now that the old stork has finally decided to land me, Ma and Pa are fine too. The reason I took so long getting here was 'cause me and Mr. Stork ran into some trouble en route, but I still don't see why Pa was so nervous. I sent him word I was coming but still he paced, chewed his fingernails and paced some more.

"I suppose fathers are funny that way. If you try to tell them everything is O.K. and for them not to worry, they laugh a rather sticky laugh and say, 'You're not so scared at all but they still look a little pale around the gills and continue pacing.

"What a change came over Pa all of a sudden when nurse informed him I was here! He danced something that looked like the Indian War Dance. As if my arrival was anything to get excited about.

"I was carried down to him and he just looked and muttered something about how cute I was. I didn't think I was so hot and wrinkled, but I suppose I'll improve.

"Well when Pa finally stopped drooling over me, the nurse took me to a room full of some more little things just like me, and after putting a little blue bracelet on my wrist with my name on it she put me in a basket like Ma puts her clothes in.

"I must have fallen asleep 'cause I don't remember being picked up but I heard voices saying, 'Isn't he cute when he's asleep. I think he looks like his father!' I wondered if that was good or bad. I opened my eyes just a little to see who was gushing over me and of course, there was Pa showing me off to two or three other people who were saying all the things Pa wanted them to say about me. Pa had a long brown thing with smoke coming from it in his mouth and I saw him handing the same long brown things to some of the men that were standing around. The men grinned and slapped Pa on the back or shook hands with him. Pa beamed 'you'd think he was the only guy that ever had a son.

"When I saw Ma she was unwrapping a lot of little blue and pink things that folks had brought to me. I wonder why everybody makes so much of me. There are lots more babies just like me in a big room down the hall. Gee I wonder if they are getting jealous of course they cry a lot more than I do but that's cause they want the pretty nurses to pick them up, and when a nurse does they gurgle and coo right contented like. I guess all those other guys will grow up to be wolves.

"I think Ma really wanted me to be a girl, but I seem to be such a popular little guy. Ma's guess Ma's satisfied. Maybe Mr. Stork would exchange me for another but we had such a tough time getting here that I doubt it."

Literature And Life

By BOOKMAN

ON BEING INDEPENDENT

We begin life by being very dependent, and we owe to others more than we will ever be able to pay. There were those who took charge of us, watched our first step, and the world's first accents that fell from our tongue, and joined in our innocent glee." They taught us to read, heard our first prayers and introduced us to the world. Our world then was very small, but in due time a gate opened, and we took the road we have travelled ever since.

In the eyes of the law we are minors till we are twenty-one years of age. However, we longed to be grown up, to get away from our mother's apron strings, and face that strange thing we found to be the world. The prodigal son of the Bible story was to that extent human—the too wished to stand on his own feet. Children as a rule want to grow up quickly, but later on they long often for those far off sweet childish days that were as long as twenty days are now.

The normal child wants to be independent. He wants to "paddle his own canoe." To realize one's self this is necessary. There is a law that runs through all life. The eaglets must one day leave their nest high up among the cliffs. Nature teaches the parent birds to break up the nest, so that the little ones may try their wings against the wide spaces of the sky. So one of the functions of the home is to teach the young members of the household to find and take their place in the world. This is the only way to have continuity of effort in human society.

Independence of thought is very important. We must learn to think for ourselves—to exercise the mind. This is the prime object of education—not to gather together so many facts, but to take the raw material furnished by circumstances, organize it and use it.

It's quite possible, indeed probable, that the mental house in which our early years were spent, may be shaken almost taken down and rebuilt. In other words we have minds which we should train to think.

This idea is worthy of wider application. There is a tendency in our day to rely on others. It is true in some cases if we live long enough we may have a second childhood—become dependent again. Then, too, circumstances may arise when we need to lay our tired heads on a cushion provided by a pension. The time will eventually come when all wage earners will contribute according to their earning capacity to what is called national insurance. Then at a certain age all will have security against the needs of old age. We have not reached that point, yet. What we call the "old age pension" is a humane thing and meets a great need, and the man who has toiled hard and has met with some untoward circumstances may claim upon the state. One danger to be guarded against is that so much is done for the young now that they can sit back easily on their heels and let the state take their cupboard like old Mother Hubbard's—empty.

Burns in writing to a "young friend" says this: "And gather gear by every vile. That's justified by honour; Not for to hide it in a hedge—no! Of being independent."

Emerson has a notable essay on "Self-Reliance." The tone of it is one of caution, not of fear. Listen to this: "Trust thyself: every heart vibrates to that iron string." And this: "Who has more soul than I, masters me, though he should not." "Insist on yourself; never imitate: Nothing can bring you peace but yourself!"

Hints on Etiquette

When you are introducing people, do speak the names distinctly. This is rarely done, but it often eliminates embarrassing moments later on for those introduced.

HIGH SHADES

NEW YORK — High shades are in demand. While these may be matched to a hat, bag, and shoes, one trend now is to use different shades of the same color. Your suit may be green or brown, and you may use different shades of those colors in your hat, gloves, and shoes.

SCREAMING RED

NEW YORK — Screaming red is one designer's favorite color, but he also uses all shades of red, many greens, a variety of pinks, tones of russet brown and a few grays. Eveningwear, gold, green, black and blue silk stockings are shown for lavender.

DON'T EAT HASTILY
