FOR THE Home Builder

An English Thatched Roof Type

WHAT it is the roof which either makes or mars a house, home architects generally admit and the majority of homes are designed with the importance of the roof line well in mind.

Entrance is through a small portico which adjoins the spacious porch featured by Colonial columns. The living room is a bright, cheery room with open fireplace and plenty of windows to admit the sunlight and air.

PLANNING SMALL HOMES

The small home has come to stay. Whereas in other days large houses containing large and in some cases, unnecessary rooms, many passages and untold flights of stairs, were the order of the day, since the early days of the war, attention has been focussed on an unusual degree on the economical planning of the small house.

An Endeavor to Reduce Costs

Now a great effort is being made by means of a thorough co-ordination of the related industries, simplification of methods, elimination of waste, standardization of the building rules, to reduce the whole cost of building, or what is another phrase of the same thing to get a thoroughly well built house for less than the cost which has been necessary to pay for the "house built to sell."

LAMPS FOR OUT OF DOOR USE

It is delightful during summer weather to have meals out of doors, and during the long summer evenings dinners can be taken in daylight. Later, however, when the light does fail, it is impossible for industrious women to continue to read or to do needlework without the aid of artificial light.

A Mesh of Cord

Then there is a bowl shade covered in a mesh of gilded or silver cord. If electricity is not used, the mesh should be made of wire treated in the same way, a small lamp can then be placed in the bowl.
